PREFACE.

The lover of history looks with interest upon the old homes and landmarks of a New England village. But if inquiry is made concerning many of these old places, there is disappointment in learning their history, because of the indefinite answers given. Having had this experience, the writer has been gathering, for seven years, items of interest relating to the old landmarks, homes and families located in Seymour. Of the old places remaining, the writer has taken many photographs, which led to further inquiry into their history. The suggestion to combine the illustrations and history naturally followed.

In May, 1900, I wrote an article upon the subject, "Old Landmarks of Seymour," for the Connecticut Magazine, but this was incomplete for the lack of space.

The interest taken in this article led to the plan of putting in book form what information was gathered relating to the old homes. In so doing it is my aim to present the information in such a way as to revive the public interest in our local history, that has clustered about the old homes and landmarks for two centuries and more.

It has also been my aim to point out these places, and to briefly describe them, treating of their history in localities, if not altogether in the order of time. This method will, with the history of the families, give greater variety, and add to the local and general interest.

Any effort of this kind will, by necessity, be incomplete, because many facts of history and the traditions have departed with the fathers.

The most instructive and interesting history is that which relates to all sides of life, classes and conditions of men. The history of the people has been too brief. It has been too much confined to the civil community. Therefore it is hoped that the present method of presentation will be a pleasant change, that is, by more fully considering the homes, families and life that make up the civil community. The home and home life are nearest the hearts of men. The social, religious and political institutions have been closely related to the old homes, to touch the inner life of the people. All these come into our brief history.

I am indebted to many friends for the information that is given in these pages. I wish to express my thanks to all who have in any way contributed to this work; and for the generous public response in encouraging the work, by subscribing for the same.

My constant aim has been to present an interesting book to read and also to make it of sufficient value to be useful for future reference.

Among the books for reference were the following: "The History of Seymour," 2 vols., by W. C. Sharpe; "History of Derby," by S. Orcutt; "The History of New Haven County," by J. L. Rockey; "Derby Records," manuscripts, deeds, etc.

No sooner was this book begun than there appeared the need of enlarging it upon the original plan. It was therefore arranged that W. C. Sharpe should have the exclusive preparation of the biographies.

In preparing notes for the churches, manufacturing industries and fraternities, I found the time too short to do the subjects justice and consequently these were left to W. C. Sharpe, who prepared these articles.

It was further arranged with F. G. Bassett for the preparation of the genealogies, which he has done with much labor, faithfulness and success, thus greatly increasing the value of the book.

Concerning the illustrations, more than sixty of these were from photographs taken and finished by the writer (H. A. C.) Others were from cuts made for "The Seymour Record," and furnished by W. C. Sharpe. Still others were from cuts generously loaned by the "Connecticut Magazine Co." of Hartford. The photographic work of Ralph S. Beach is illustrated in these pages, and also that of W. C. Bryant of New York.

From the department of the U. S. Geological Survey, Washington, D. C., there was secured a special edition of 500 copies of the map, "Derby Sheet," made for this book, and given by the writer. This is the topographical map of Seymour and surrounding towns, and is one of the best maps made.

Special thanks are due to the Town of Seymour for having a map of the town made, and also for furnishing copies of said map for this book, "Seymour, Past and Present." This map was ordered after most of this book was written.

On Nov. 12, 1853, the water rose 18 ft. 11 in. The south part of the railroad bridge was carried away with the abutment. The bridges at Beacon Falls, Pinesbridge and Ansonia were carried away.

Jan. 8th, 1854, the water again swept away the railroad bridge, and also the dam at the rubber mill.

April 30, 1854, there was a rise of water 19 ft. 5 in., and Derby avenue was washed out to the depth of three feet or more, and boats were used in the avenue.

Oct. 4, 1869, 15 ft. 9 in. Two bridges on Bladens brook were swept away. Feb. 19, 1870, 14 ft. Jan., 1874, 17 ft. 6 in. Aug. 19, 1875, 13 ft. Dec. 10, 1878, 17 ft. 1 in. Feb. 12, 1880, 9 ft. 5 in. Dec. 18, 1888, 13 ft. 11 in. Feb. 7, 1896, 16 ft. 5 in. March, 1901, 16 ft. 6 in.

Our Naugatuck.

Down through the shadowy valleys green
Where ferns and grasses grow,
Winding the fragrant banks between,
Its water onward flow.

Through sunny dale and shady nook,
Through forest, field and glen,
Mid song of birds and babbling brook,
A far from haunts of men.

Past towering rocks whose mossy crest
In summer sunsets glow,
And vine-clad hills in verdance drest,
Where pale, sweet violets grow
Through quiet vale and busy town,
With sound of wheel and loom,
Mid morning sunbeams dancing down,
And evening's shade and gloom.

Past cities 'mid whose grassy waves
The sculptured marble keeps
It's silent vigils o'er the graves—
Were many a loved one sleeps,
It gently glides in tranquil mood,
When skies are fair and bright
And rushes on in storm and flood,
With mad resistless flight

Onward ever through ages old
Of springs and summers past,
Of autumn's crimson and its gold,
And winter's chilling blast
And oh! what stories must it know,
Could it but speak and tell,
Of those who in the long ago
Knew all its windings well.

Tales of a long forgotten race,
Who lived and loved and died,
That wandered once in careless grace
The sunny stream beside.
Full many a shifting scene and change
Since this old world was new,
And many a wondrous sight and strange
Has passed before its view.

In years and ages yet to come
Will still its waters gleam?
And other forms beside it roam
And love its shining stream?
When we with many a generation
Shall see and know it not,
And gaze upon it nevermore
Forgetting and forgot.

CHAPTER II.

HISTORY OF SEYMOUR.

THE territory covered by the present town of Seymour was not included in the first New Haven plantation, which was "a tract of land north of the bay ten miles one way and thirteen the other, and was purchased for ten coats." This was in April 1638. Many statements have appeared in print, that the town of Milford at one time included Derby, which meant also the territory covered by the present town of Seymour, but this is an error. Milford extended only to a mile below the Narrows. It was in 1675 that the town of Derby was organized, and ten years later, 1685, the Milford purchase was made of land, north of the Derby road to New Haven, one mile and 120 rods wide, along the New Haven line to Bladen's Brook, and in 1700 another purchase was made one mile and 120 rods wide north of Bladen's Brook, and in 1702 another section north called "the one bit purchase."

The people in Derby known as "Pangassett Company" paid taxes for three years direct to the New Haven Company, and for thirteen years to Milford, for then they attended and supported the church in Milford, but all the doings of the plantation, with the above exceptions, were independent of Milford from the very beginning, and Milford never pretended to claim any part of Derby. See Der. Hist. p. 446.

Though Derby was organized in 1675, the south boundary was not established until 1680.

To designate the locality about the Falls, the name Naugatuck was given, by which it was known until the coming of the Indian Chief Chuse about 1738, and then name Chusetown was given.

Owing to the new woolen industry established by Gen. David Humphreys at the Falls in 1803, the name was again changed to Humphreysville in 1804 in honor of the General.

Seymour was incorporated as a town by the May, 1850, session of the general assembly, upon the petition of Leman Chatfield and others. The first town election was held in the basement of the Methodist church June 24, 1850, and the following were elected: Selectmen, Leman Chatfield, David L. Holbrook, Thos. Cochran; Town Clerk, Charles B. Wooster; Town Treasurer, Sylvester Smith. On the 31st of March, 1851, Bennett Wooster was elected the first representative of the town of Seymour to the general assembly. Its name was given out of compliment to Hon. T. H. Seymour, then the Governor of the State.

Old Derby included not only Humphreysville, but also the region north, now covered by Beacon Falls and Oxford, lying between the New Haven or Milford bounds and the Housatonic river. The country is broken and rough, yet the town contains many fine farms. The numerous streams and reservoirs make the vallies the natural centers for manufacturing industries. The topography will indicate better than anything else the general appearance of the town.

The Naugatuck River flows from the north, winding through the village to the "Falls," which the author will refer to as the central point, around which is clustered the following history of the old landmarks and homes. The Little river flows from the north-west into the Naugatuck some distance above the Falls, and Bladen's brook, or river, flows from the east into the Naugatuck about an eight of a mile above the Falls. The Four-Mile brook flows along the western base of Great Hill into the Housatonic river.

The hills are numerous the highest elevation being 640 feet above the level of the sea. The hill south of the Henry Wooster, Moss, now S. G. Warrin place is 280 feet high, and the hill half a mile east is 400 feet. The hill south of the residence of L. T. Wooster is 320 feet, and due east from it three-fourths of a mile is a hill 496 feet in height. The Promised Land rises to the height of 220 feet, and the hill near a mile to the east is 460. Skokorat is an elevation of 423 feet. Rock Rimmon is the next highest point of 570 feet, where the town line crosses. Rimmon Hill is 400 feet, Chestnut Hill from 500 to 631, and Castle Rock is an elevation of 340 feet. Where Church and West streets meet, the elevation is 160 feet; the Bungay road at the highest point is 400 feet. The Mountain road on Great Hill is elevated 440 feet. The highest point on Great Hill is 640 feet on the turnpike, or the Woodbury stage road at the old Priest Smith house. Rockhouse Hill is 590 feet, and Moose Hill is an elevation of 670. At the present time, these northern hills are within the bounds of Beacon Falls and Oxford.

There being no bridges in the early part of the town's history, the Naugatuck river was forded at the following places; just below Kinneytown, there was one or more, at the South end of Derby Avenue where the Rimmon road crossed was another, the one above the bridge at Broad street was used until the first bridge was built, referred to in 1763. The ford above the Falls was about the middle of Rimmon pond leading to Rock Rimmon, east, and Rimmon Hill road west, and there was still another at Pines Bridge, at the foot of the hill going north towards the cemetery. The roads at the present iron bridge would indicate another near that point.

These fords indicate where some of the roads of the early days were. There was one that followed the river, doubtless used when the river was low. The Rimmon road came over Rimmon Hill, crossed Little River to the present Church street, then along the side of Castle Rock to the ford at the south end of Derby Avenue, from thence extending to the Henry Wooster brook, on up the hill. This road can still be traced between the brook and railroad, and from the brook up the hill the road is frequently used. There was a road along the river to Kinneytown, and instead of the south Bungay road, there was one that came from the west near the Dea. Nehemiah Botsford place, that has long since been given up. Another very old forsaken road is marked by a lane near the Keeney homestead, Kinneytown, winding up the hill westward, meeting the south Bungay road. Around the west and south side of Castle Rock, there was another road, that is not on the chart today. At an early date there was a path along the Oxford road, but the turnpike was not laid out until 1794. In addition to the Bungay road, there are two four corners before coming to the Woodbury, or Stage road, the principal road on Great Hill, mentioned as early as 1683.

On the east side of the Naugatuck river, at the east end of the Falls bridge, the old road ran directly to a point a little west of the engine house; also there was a road south from the bridge leading to the Henry Wooster brook, a mile below, there meeting the Rimmon road. The road north of the Wooster - Warrin house ran east, a cross-road northeast to the Frank Steele farm and Walnut street. From the old blacksmith shop at the Pearl street corners, another road extended to the Johns' corners and then south to Derby. A little east of Davis-Johns corners, a road ran northward to Joel and Leman Chatfield's place. The New Haven turnpike was not completed until 1798. Still another important road led over Skokorat on to Waterbury. From the papermill on Bladen's brook, there was a road along the north side of the brook, which is still to be seen east of the stone bridge, close to the brook.

Still another road was laid out along the Naugatuck river to Rock Rimmon and northward. South of Rock Rimmon, there was a road running southwest to the ford referred to, and then meeting the Rimmon road on the southern slope of Rimmon Hill. Another old road followed Rimmon brook, then extended northeast, meeting other roads now in Beacon Falls. Again at some point on the southern slope of the Rimmon Hill road, another important road ran northeast along the eastern slope of Rimmon Hill, passing the deserted cemetery, now in the wilderness, crossing the river probably at the Pines Bridge ford, then up the hill east of the present road, then northward to meet the stage road from Naugatuck town to New Haven. The connection between the Oxford and Rimmon roads was the present Beecher street.

It is to be said to the credit of the white people of New England, during colonial times, that they purchased the lands from the Indians before they permanently settled upon it. Such was the case in this valley. It was only sixteen years after Edward Wooster came to Derby, that other white men began to buy up the territory around, beginning with the Great Hill purchase in 1670, by Alexander Bryan, of Milford, for seventeen pounds. This same territory was sold to John Brinsmade, Sr., Henry Tomlinson and Joseph Hawley, of Stratford, for the same compensation, and then it was called the "Hawley purchase." This was upon the southern border of Great Hill, which in 1716 became the estate of Robert Bassett, who gave it to his son Samuel. In Aug. 1693 the tract of land on Rockhouse Hill was bought, being included in the purchase lying between Four-mile and Five-mile brooks, the Housatonic river and the Woodbury road. William Tomlinson, Sr. and Jr., and Jonathan Lum were among the purchasers of this tract from the Indians, for twenty pounds.

The Indians began to sell their land in the vicinity of the Falls as early as 1678, as indicated in the following deed:—

"This indenture made the 22nd day of April, 1678, witnesseth that we do sell unto the inhabitants, a tract of land at Pagassett, bounded on the north with Bladen's brook, and northwest with Mill river, and south and southwest with the Englishmen's ground, and west and northwest with a hill on the west side of the Naugatuck river, part of the bounds and the Naugatuck river the other part,—all of which we do confirm unto the said inhabitants; only, the said Indians do reserve the fishing place at Naugatuck, and the plain and the hill next the river at the fishing place. Further, the Indians do grant all the grass and feed and timber on the plain against Rock Rimmon, and do engage to sell it to them, if they sell it,—all which grants we do confirm for forty pounds, to be paid to them at Mr. Bryan's."

This tract included the land south of Bladen's brook to the Henry Wooster brook, where S. G. Warrin now lives, with the above exception.

This reservation extended over the hill eastward to the New Haven line. Among the owners of the tract south of the reservation was Edward Wooster, 1. In the division of his lands Jan. 25, 1693-4, the following is recorded in the Der. Rec. p. 173, "Also the land at blading brook is Reserved for Edward wooster & Silvester wooster & Jonas wooster & Ebenezer wooster in the Lue of five pounds apease." This tract doubtless included the old Henry Wooster homestead, now the estate of S. G. Warrin. Other lands on Great Hill and Moose Hill were also divided by lot among his 12 children.

"Dec. 30, 1678. The town granted to Ebenezer Johnson the upper plain land against Rock Rimmon." "Dec. 30. The town granted to Jeremiah Johnson twenty acres of land at the lower end of the plain against Rock Rimmon." And "at the same meeting the town granted to Daniel Collins, John Tibbals, and Philip Denman ten acres each.

"At a town meeting in Derby, Feb. 14, 1678, the town hath granted liberty to Samuel Riggs to take up twenty acres of land at or near Rock Rimmon on the west side of the river."

During the same year Ebenezer Johnson bought land of the Indians east and southward from Rock Rimmon, and it appears that in some way Samuel Riggs shared in this purchase, because in 1683 a division of land was made between Ebenezer Johnson, beginning at the cellar belonging to Samuel Riggs, located south-east of Rock Rimmon, the division line running northwest. The exact location of this cellar is not known, whether on the east side of Rimmon pond or as far east as the Skokorat road. Another mention is made of a cellar near Rimmon in 1685, to which reference may be made later.

The settlers doubtless found the region about Rock Rimmon an inviting one, because of the open plain and the river, there being two or three settlers before 1690. In the year 1683, Abel Gunn received from the town a grant of ten acres north of the Falls and west of the river. On Aug. 6, 1687, a large tract was purchased including a tract along Little river, to Quaker Farms. David Wooster, in 1692, bought of the Indians the plain west of the Naugatuck between the river and Castle Rock, extending as far north as the Falls, and probably as far as the present Rimmon pond. The same year he also bought of the Indians the tract south of Little river including Castle Rock and the land westward, to other rocks. In April 1700 Ebenezer Johnson and Samuel Riggs bought of the Indians the tract of land north of Little river, which extended eastward to the land belonging to David Wooster, lying along the river, and also twenty acres of meadow and upland upward of Chestnut Tree Hill.

Close on to this, in 1702, was the "Camp's Mortgage Purchase," located west of the river and Falls, which included a tract of land three miles square, or the Great Hill region.

Samuel Riggs again bought land on the west side of the river at Pines Bridge, which extended south, meeting the land belonging to David Wooster. In 1708 a division of land was made between Samuel Riggs and Ebenezer Johnson; Riggs chose that west of the river and south of the brook at Pines Bridge, and Johnson chose that east of the river, which in 1721, he divided equally between his two sons Charles and Timothy. Still later Benajah Johnson inherited part of the tract which formerly belonged to Ebenezer and Jeremiah Johnson, and settled on the Skokorat road. In 1708 Samuel Riggs gave to his son Ebenezer Riggs 200 acres of land, located south of the Pines Bridge brook and west of the river. This land had houses upon it, which were among the five first dwellings in this region. Ebenezer lived there, but died when a young man in 1712, about 30 years of age.

These purchases referred to above included the territory now covered by Seymour, Pines Bridge and a part of Oxford.

The Indian reservation of 1678 remained complete until 1731, when people of Derby bought of the Indians all the land known as Indian Hill, in Derby, situated upon east side of Naugatuck river near the place called the Falls; all the land that lieth eastward, northward and southward, except the plain that lieth near the the Falls up to the foot of the hill." This deed was signed by John Cookson and John Howd and other Indians.

Indian Hill included what is now known as the Promised Land, and east to the Woodbridge Line.

On Oct. 4, 1763, the Indians sold the Falls and two and a half acres of land, to Ebenezer Keeney, John Wooster, and Joseph Hull, Jr. This deed was signed by the Indians Joseph Chuse and John Howd.

The last of the Indian land was sold in 1812, to Gen. David Humphreys and Mrs. Phebe Stiles. Thus during a period of 134 years, the Indians had departed, the reservation sold; and the white man will continue in possession until the coming of a stronger race.

For our purpose this brief history is sufficient. In the history concerning the old landmarks, old homes and families, many names will become familiar, some of which were on record from one to two centuries ago. In 1779 the following appear to have resided on the west of the river between Great Hill and the upper part of the Rimmon region:

Bradford Steele, Edward Harger, John Botsford, Hezekiah Woodin, Ashbel Steele, Josiah Washburn, Reuben Perkins, Ranford Whiting, Abraham Wooster, Daniel Davis, Lewis Riggs, Benj. Davis, John Wooster, Ebenezer Kenney, James Pritchard, Jr., Wm. Kenney, Samuel Wooster, Wm. Gordon, Theodore Hiles, Jonathan Miles, Unis Pritchard.

IN studying the old homes and landmarks, many proofs are found, that men come, only to go, as if overwhelmed by the burdens of life, to be lost and forgotten like the fallen leaves whirled away by the wind.

Such is the feeling when approaching the Fishing Place of the Indians, the Naugatuck Falls, often called "The Little Niagara," the most remarkable work of nature in the whole valley. A ledge of rocks extend across the river forming a natural fall of nearly twenty feet, making the place a favorite one for the Indians in the fishing season. A little distance from the Falls on the east side of the river, there was a grove of thrifty oaks, and here beneath their shade the petty sachem, Chuse, or Joseph Mauwehu, with a small company of braves, built their wigwams, getting their living by hunting and fishing.

The name "Chuse" was probably a part of the name of an Indian ancestor of Mauwehu, and is said to have been first applied or given by Gideon Washband, who is said to have lived below the first brook south of the village.

THE LOWER FALLS FROM BROAD STREET.

It was about 1740 when Chuse began his life at the Falls, the land being given to him by his father, one of the Derby Indians down the valley. Besides the flat by the river, his land extended over the hill towards the east, known for many years as the Indian Hill. The old Indian burying ground was located on the flat back from the river, the graves being marked by heaps of stone. Sometime after 1795 this land was ploughed over, by the owner, Nathan Stiles, thus destroying even the mounds that marked the place of the dead Indians. When learning of this fact, it is said, that the Indians grieved and cursed those who did it. About half way up the north portion of the hill there were indications of still another Indian burying ground. Chuse had a family of eight or more children, two sons and six daughters; one of the sons served in the Revolutionary War at Boston, though he was poisoned on his way to his native village.

At the time of the coming of Chuse to this vicinity, there were only two or three white families, but soon after 1740 they began to settle on both sides of the valley.

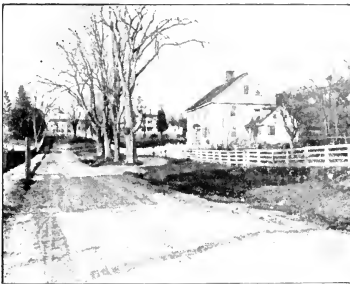

At the foot of Indian Hill toward the river, now marked by a well 12 feet deep, there was a spring of sweet sparkling water, where Chuse was accustomed to recline, and wish there was another spring of rum by the side of it, from which he could drink; then he would be perfectly happy.

Desiring to be a neighbor of the white people, he early moved to the southwest part of the Indian Hill, on the corner of what is now South Main and Pearl Streets, known as the Dr. Stoddard place. After spending about forty years on his reservation, he returned to the Falls for a time before leaving the vicinity, little dreaming of the days that would bring the present civilization, when there would be no fishing, no large game in the forests, and no Indian; all are gone and forgotten like the fallen leaves.

As the name Chusetown originated from the chief, Chuse, so the name Humphreysville was given in honor of Gen. David Humphreys who established at the Falls one of the first woolen industries in the country. It is therefore fitting to recall the stately mansion, the birthplace of Gen. D. Humphreys.

This fine old homestead was about four miles below the Falls, on the east side of the river and opposite the old Episcopal cemetery, on Elm St., now in the south part of Ansonia. It is a large two story house, with a heavy roof, and ell on the southeast, facing the west. The frame is of oak and very heavy. The beam across the ceiling of the parlor is 12 or more inches wide; the parlor being nearly 17 feet square. There are five fire places. The front hall is very simple, without any architectural beauty, the stairway being enclosed and beneath there is a small square open closet. Formerly the house was painted red.

In front there are large elm trees, indicating that the place must have been very attractive in its better days. The architectural plans are worthy of study. This was the home of the Rev. Daniel Humphreys, who was ordained to preach in Derby, 1733, in the Congregational Church. After serving the people 54 years, he died on the Sabbath, July 29. His wife also died on the Sabbath, five weeks before him. Reference is made to the house in 1737, though it may have been standing many years previous. It is known by the later generations as the Capt. Vose place. The preacher married Sarah, Mrs. John Bowers, the daughter of Captain John Riggs, whose ancestors aided the regicides in their home in 1660. The marriage took place in 1739 and for 48 years she was known as Lady Humphreys.

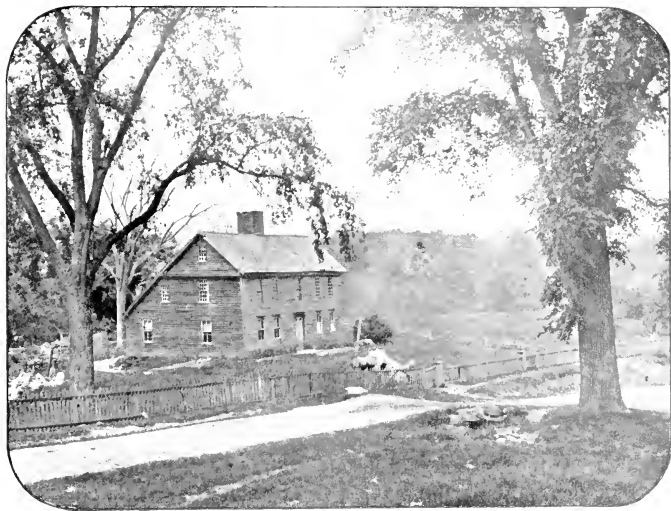

She was elegant in manners, refined, and became celebrated for her knowledge of local history. Their distinguished son was born July 10, 1752, showing in his early years a love for books. At the age of 15 he entered Yale College where he became noted for his poetical gifts and graduated with honors. On entering the army in 1778, he took the rank of Captain, to be soon promoted to be aid to General Putnam; he was promoted again shortly after by the recommendation of Gen. William Hull, one of his neighbors, to become aid-de-camp to Gen. Washington. Remaining with Washington through the war, he was honored by being appointed to receive the colors surrendered by Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown, October 19, 1781, and afterward was granted the high honor of taking these colors to Congress and presenting them in the name of the Commander-in-Chief. General Humphreys spent much time with Washington at Mount Vernon at the close of the war.

In 1790 he was appointed minister to Portugal; and in 1797 he went as minister to Spain, remaining until 1802, when he returned with a hundred merino sheep, the first imported into this country. Arriving with his precious cargo, these sheep were pastured in the field near the old homestead and doubtless feasted in the clover above their eyes. Precious they were, for the value was from a few hundred dollars up to $3,000,—for a single ram or sheep. At once Gen. Humphreys began his woolen industry at the Falls, to be related elsewhere.

As one now looks upon that old homestead, neglected, beaten by the storms of many decades, occupied by the transient and the foreigner, there is a feeling of sadness over the changes coming to life and the places so sacred to memory and association. We have lingered upon the name and work of Gen. Humphreys because in honor of him, the place was named Humphreysville. A more complete history belongs to the limits of Derby, but he conducted his business here until the time of his death in 1818. His birthplace should be known and visited by all interested in the history of our old homes.

About a half mile north of the Humphreys' place on Jewett St., there stands another ancient dwelling of two stories in front and one on the back, on the west side of the road as one descends the hill. This was the home of Dr. Mansfield, the first pastor of Trinity church. This dwelling and land was transferred to the

THE HOME OF REV. RICHARD MANSFIELD

Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in 1747, which may have been the date of building. From this time up to the Declaration of Independence, Dr. Mansfield received 40 pounds sterling from the S. P. G., England, to aid him in his work, besides Bibles and other books.

A little time since there stood a massive elm tree in front of this ancient dwelling, overshadowing it with its wide spreading branches, adding both beauty and dignity to the old manse of more than one hundred and fifty years standing. But like many other homesteads, in the period of decline and decay, this is given up to obscure and less worthy occupants.

REV. RICHARD MANSFIELD.

In wandering about the old homes, or roaming through deserted rooms of the vine clad dwellings of earlier days,—some of which are now falling into decay and are overshadowed by aged and neglected trees, or partly hidden by the ancient lilacs,—one may recall the period reaching back over two centuries, and the people living in them through many vicissitudes and glories. Sharing the experience of the past awakens a new thought, which is so well expressed by I. P. Warren.

"Ah, it is sad to see those household shrines, consecrated by the joys, the tears, the loves, the aspirations, of successive generations, falling into decay, and soon, like those who dwelt there, to be known no more forever."

Besides a new thought, there is also awakened a new feeling, in visiting some of the old homes with their unwritten histories; and this feeling finds expression in many ways, through the sensitive spirit and strong imagination, like that of Thackeray's, concerning many of the ancient dwellings. This is the feeling; some homes, though silent and deserted by man, they are still inhabited, for about them linger spirits, mysteries, some invisible presence, impressing the visitor with their existence, though representing events, deeds, and actors of the distant past. And similar will be the thought and feeling of any one who becomes interested in the old-home landmarks.

The Henry Wooster place is located on the east side of the river, in Seymour, about a mile below the falls and is the finest of our ancient mansions. The Woosters owned land in this region previous to 1694, when a tract belonging to Edward Wooster was divided among four of his sons. They may have settled here more than 200 years ago, and the residence is supposed to have been built as early as 1700. Before this date the name of Henry Wooster appears in the records, and whenever there was difficulty with the Indians, he was one to be chosen to confer with them to settle the matter.

This representative of that famous family selected a beautiful place for his homestead to be handed down to the five Henrys who followed him in as many generations.

FRONT VIEW OF THE HENRY WOOSTER PLACE

On the southwest corner of his grounds was a little brook, known through these years as the Henry Wooster brook, and the old ford-road crosses the present highway at the bridge, clearly to be seen today. The place is now located on the south corner of the main road and one extending east, the house facing the west. Around this corner is a row of fine elms and maples fifteen in number, contributing much to the beauty of the place. Just within the row of trees there is a terrace wall made of smooth stones, about four and a half feet high, giving the grounds the appearance of exclusiveness.

A large iron gate guards the entrance of the roadway on the north side, and on the west another small iron gate and steps of stone lead to the front door. On either side rise noble poplars, and scattered about are a large variety of trees including thorn, spruce, hemlock, black walnut and maples, all of which give a charm and beauty, most inviting.

THE HENRY WOOSTER—MOSS PLACE.

Standing within these spacious bounds is the house itself, two stories, covering a space nearly 40 feet square, including the lean-to, and on the southeast corner is an ell. The windows are small, having from twelve to twentyfour lights according to the location.

The front door with the side windows were set back into the hallway two and a half feet. The house is lined with two inch plank and the lath of split boards. The material used for framework, floors, and covering was of oak, now seasoned through the centuries. As to the rooms they are small, about eight feet in height; the hallways large in proportion. Two chimneys one of which is eight feet on one side, afford the luxury of eight fire places. After wandering through the labyrinth of rooms, one is surprised to find sixteen rooms besides the many closets and halls. In the attic there are four rooms, and above these is the upper-attic entered by a narrow stairway.

Truly this house was built to endure, for the rafters are of hewn oak 5 by 6 inches, and 39 inches apart.

Imagination would suggest many a secret corner beneath the roof and stairways. Many a choice relic has been found in secluded corners, and the attic of the kitchen recently plastered up, may conceal relics, to be discovered by another generation.

There is much to interest in the surroundings, as in the little burial lot on the rising knoll northeast of the house, beneath thick overhanging trees, and evergreens that suggest teachings of the life that never dies. Here is the little iron fence about the monument raised in memory of Capt. Henry Wooster, who died Nov. 18, 1842; on the other side were the names of the five children; Harriet, Henry, Olive, Cecilia, and Leslie B. This last Henry was lost at sea, being with Capt. Leslie Bryson, when he fell overboard, and before he could be rescued a large albatross flew down, lighting upon his head, and Henry was seen no more.

The widow of Capt. Henry married Capt. Daniel Moss, and since that time the place has been known far and near as the Moss place by the large circle of distinguished friends. Capt. Moss went to Youngstown, N. Y., and died there. The last occupant of the Wooster family was Harriet, who died Feb., 1891, and was the only one among the children buried in the family lot on the place.

Capt. Henry was a man of affairs, being engaged in trade between New Haven and the West Indies. His wife was Harriet, daughter of Joseph Riggs of Oxford and Lydia Allen.

A little east of the burial lot, there is a cliff of rocks 15 feet in height, crowned by a thrifty oak, and over the smooth rocks there grows a luxuriant trumpet vine; and in the crevices the cactus grows, the plants being three feet in length. At the foot of this ledge is the garden, and meadow of twenty acres.

Towards the brook there stands an old stone building with iron bars at the narrow windows in the ends, once used as a blacksmith shop, the eaves scarcely five feet from the ground. All about are trees and orchards, with a hundred fruit trees, completing the circle and surroundings, showing neglect and approaching ruin. On the terrace overlooking the brook south of the house is the ruin of a cellar wall, what is left of an old fashioned ice-house, near a clump of evergreens, and close at hand is a little building, once used as a hot house. Across the brook is the cranberry meadow and the little Spring-water lake, which furnished ice for Mr. Emery for the towns people. The present owner of this estate of 150 acres is Mr. S. G. Warrin, of New Jersey, who is to repair, improve and occupy for a summer residence, 1901.

Well it is, for this place is beautiful in situation and surroundings, once the pride of the valley and community, high above the river, overlooking the valley and broken hills in their natural beauty.

Now one would hardly know this fine old family mansion of the olden time, and of the style of near two centuries ago, large and roomy, because of the improvements made by S. G. Warrin. A two story addition has been built on the north end, a spacious veranda ten feet wide has been added along the whole front and south sides, new doors and windows cased with cypress, and the fire-places with antique oak. The house has been piped for running water from the brook. The small pond will be stocked with fish, and supplied with boats.

A little distance from the bridge over the Henry Wooster brook, up the old ford road, there can be seen on the crown of the hill the ruin of an old cellar, where was the home of a family by the name of Bryson, three generations, Maxwell, Leslie and Leslie J. Capt. Leslie of this family followed the sea. Mr. John Bassett tells the story of this seaman, transporting a company of Chinamen. Moved by some philanthropic spirit or desire to civilize these Orientals, he cut off their queues. Not counting what might follow, he was surprised and overtaken by the spirit of revenge, which appeared in mutiny, to meet with the loss of life. Thus Bryson was killed, and the Chinamen were heathen still.

Because of Derby being the port of entry, nearly half a century before New Haven and Bridgeport were developed, there were many sea captains and seamen who brought wealth to many homes in this vicinity. For many miles around the trade centered at Derby port.

Only a few rods from the Henry Wooster place across the road to the north, there stood near the sharp point of rocks the home of the noted Dr. Abiram Stoddard, who came to town in 1804 as the second local physician. At first he lived on the west side of the river near the Episcopal church, but in this house he spent his last days. This old house was built in 1774 by Levi Hotchkiss.

It was two stories, the second story overhanging a few inches facing the east. It had two chimneys, the north one being very large. The timbers were large and squared with a broadaxe; the nails were hand made. The hall extended through the house east and west, containing two stairways meeting on the same landing. There were four good sized rooms on the first floor, with the additional summer rooms on the west side, a kitchen, pantry, milk-room, another room with a set-kettle and well.

The large front door was on the east side, the smaller one on the south, which was the one mostly used.

This house was burned in Oct., 1894, revealing to the public for the first time the sub-cellar 12x15 ft., and 7 ft. deep. Many came to see the ruins and the sub-cellar which was used for household purposes, there being nothing superior for a cooler. If this had been connected with a public house, one might think of it being used as a hiding place, and a station of the "underground railway" when the fugitive slaves fled to the north. It may be stated here that runaway slaves were aided in this valley by the good people in sympathy with them.

Levi Tomlinson lived in this house as early as 1789 and became one of the first deacons of the Congregational church. He sold the house and farm to Dr. Stoddard who had a common rail fence in front of it. The more recent owners were Harvey Hotchkiss 1857, Judge S. L. Bronson 1872 and L. G. Weaver the present owner since 1886.

The location is one of remarkable beauty situated on the high bluff overlooking the river and valley; the river winding in curves of beauty fringed by the rich growth of timber; the valley made narrow by the bluff on the east, and on the west guarded by the sharp rugged Castle Rock that rises more than 340 ft. in height standing like a sentinel watching over the march of progress up this narrow valley, the gateway to the "City of Brass," a way of more consequence than the entrance to the "Garden of the Gods."

If this aged doctor loved the beauty of nature, there was no better place to study the changing shadows of the declining day, the frescoes of the skies, the pictures of rocks and hills, at the same time listening for the faint music of the Falls.

Dr. Stoddard was a representative to the General Assembly in 1814, besides holding offices of public trust in Derby for many years. His practice was extensive and lucrative.

His family has been noted for the many names that have won distinction in the legal profession.

Dr. Stoddard was born in Watertown, January 27, 1777, came to this place in 1804 and died Dec. 23, 1855, aged 79 years.

Full of eccentricities, Dr. Stoddard once was called to see a hysterical woman in Watertown, and ordered a jacket of raccoon skins to be made for the woman to wear and in the meantime to amuse her with the music of the fiddle,—no medicine. After two weeks the jacket became very unpleasant, and the disconsolate husband sent his boy to report. Meeting the doctor he said, "Mother is no better," "Did you make the jacket?" "Yes." "Has she worn it?" "Yes." "And is no better?" "None." "Did you cut the tails off?" "Yes." "There it is; I didn't tell you to do that; the whole curative virtue was in the tails."

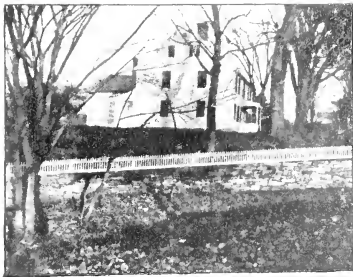

About a quarter of a mile below the Falls on the east side of the river there are three houses of historical interest on the borders of Indian Hill, overlooking the valley westward. This was the center. As already said the Indian Chuse came from the Falls to be neighbor to the white people soon after 1740, building his home in the fork of the roads, known as the Dr. Thos. Stoddard place. His white neighbor must have lived across the road where Mr. M. R. Castle now lives, the house standing near the year 1740. Some years after Chuse left, Mr. Nathan Stiles had business at the Falls, and built his spacious house in 1795 on the spot where Chuse had so long lived. He married Phebe, the daughter of Capt. Ebenezer Dayton. He died in 1804. The Methodists had their meetings in this house as they also did in the Dayton house across the road to the south. In 1812 Phebe Stiles bought another portion of Indian Hill, and because of her holding it, the name of the hill was changed. The story is this: Newcomers desired to buy land of "Phebe," as she was called, and received a promise. These promises to sell land were so many times repeated, without selling, that the name "Promised Land" was given to the hill property,—a name which it still bears.

WHITTEMORE TAVERN. STILES AND STODDARD PLACE. DAYTON TAVERN.
A STREET IN SEYMOUR.

In the course of years, Dr. Thomas Stoddard received the Stiles homestead as a gift from his father, to enjoy many years of happy life, his home being a gathering place for the social people.

The Stiles-Stoddard house was large and square with a lean-to and ell on the north. Standing in the fork of the roads, it faced the south, being overshadowed by large handsome elm trees. Its location was above the road, the spacious grounds on the west side being supported by a terrace wall crowned with a low fence. At the front door, there was a square porch with side seats, the door itself having a large brass knocker. Besides the rooms in the attic, there was an upper attic with a small window. Close by the chimney there was a little room used for a smoke-house for hams, etc. There were several fireplaces, and the home was one of comfort amid beautiful surroundings. The west upper room was used for a ball room during its tavern days. But now the old brass knocker is gone to be heard no more; the old look is swept away; the name is also changed. The present owner, C. H. Lounsberry, raised and repaired the house in 1898 making it suitable for two families.

This house and the other two referred to form a triangle, each standing on the opposite side of the three roads that meet at this point. These houses have an interesting history because of the exciting incident which occurred in the time of the Revolution during March 1780. Probably this house, known as the Dayton tavern, and later as the William Hull place, was standing before the war, located on the east side of the highway facing the west. In 1806 Gen Humphreys had rooms here during the time of building the woolen mills at the Falls. When used as a tavern, Mrs. Dayton had a noted reputation for her skill in mixing drinks to the satisfaction of the "old appetites."

The house was large having two stories, with an ell on the east side. The two great chimneys are very noticeable. The general surroundings together with the great weeping willow at the south corner gave the place a gloomy appearance. So are some of the rooms, one of which is cut diagonal, destroying all natural proportions. Even the neglect is of the nature of exclusiveness, and the once white is becoming brown.

The third house standing on the west side of the main road on the high bluff above the river had a fine location, occupied since about 1740. Abraham Pierson sold this land south of the Falls on the east side of the river to Joseph Johnson and his wife Elizabeth, who again sold it to Turel Whittemore Dec. 4, 1778. The first name associated with this place is E. Turel Whittemore, who kept tavern for many years, probably the principal tavern for the region.

The Turel Whittemore house was then a low one story house, very much like the red house directly east, next to L. T. Wooster's. In 1867 Mr. Castle made it into a two story house, taking the stone from the old chimney to make the terrace wall in front, caused by the lowering of the road. The barroom where the robbery was planned was on the northwest corner.

Other names associated with the place in later years are Castle, Roth and Lees, who kept the house in 1822 and John H. DeForest had rooms here while building his house opposite the railroad station, later the home of Raymond French.

The Whittemore tavern was the place where the great robbery was planned by a British officer in March, 1780.

At that time two strangers came to remain over night, and soon they were in conversation with a company of young men who frequented the place during the long winter evenings. The name of one stranger was Alexander Graham, who had a commission from Gen. Howe to enlist soldiers for the British army. He was the leader in the robbery of the house of Capt. Ebenezer Dayton, a brave American patriot who had carried on privateering against the enemy on Long Island Sound. At this time Dayton lived in Bethany six miles away from the tavern mentioned. He had taken quarters in Bethany to escape just such a robbery as was then being planned. Capt. Dayton belonged to a good family in Brookhaven, L. I., where he carried on the mercantile business. Because of his zeal for the patriot cause, on one occasion in East Hampton, L. I., he was mobbed and carried out of town, at which time he was ill and gave the measles to nearly a hundred people some of whom died. Capt. Dayton fled with his family, money and goods to Bethany. Graham succeeded in snaring several young men into the plan to rob the captain, on the ground that it would be paying him in his own coin; he robbed the British, and the British officer Graham was going to return the compliment.

But it was a sad beginning for all concerned as will be seen. The young men had relatives in Gunntown, a district west of Naugatuck, who were also drawn into the scheme, making a company of about eight.

On a bright moonlight night they went to Bethany, and as it happened, Capt. Dayton was in Boston, and other occupants of the house had moved out the day before, leaving only Mrs. Dayton, the children and servants, which made the task more simple and free from bloodshed. After ransacking the house, they carried off £450 in gold and silver, and large bundles of silk goods.

Making all secure, and leaving the family and servants bound, they hastened away to their acquaintances in Gunntown, meeting on the way a young man about 16 years of age who had been home with a young lady, the night before, though the hour of meeting was 3 o'clock in the morning. This was Chauncey Judd, who knew the party.

This meeting was another sad incident in the affair, and Graham sought several times to kill the innocent youth, that he might not betray them. But his friends each time succeeded in deferring the deed. After hiding, undergoing many vicissitudes and having many narrow escapes from the pursuing officers and vigilance committee, they hid in a barn in the meadow opposite the present Staples Washburn place, about a mile and a half from town, on the

DAYTON TAVERN OR WILLIAM HULL PLACE

Oxford road, to wait for the passing of a severe snow storm. Almost famishing they failed to get provisions at Capt. John Wooster's, then keeping a large tavern where now lives Mr. David Riggs, they started through the deep snow in the night over Great Hill with the view to go to Derby, and from thence escaped in a boat to Long Island, Capt Bradford Steele pursued on horseback, but the robbers avoided the road and escaped in a whale boat a little in advance of them.

Hoping to overtake them before they got into the Sound, they followed them, but failed in this on account of the width of the river near its mouth at Stratford. However, an old sea captain went into the belfry of the church in Stratford and watched their course to Brookhaven, where lived a noted tory. This being ascertained, a party of thirty patriots gathered at Derby in two whaleboats, and being well armed rowed down the river and across the Sound, captured all the robbers but one, all being found in deep sleep. Graham knew he would have no mercy. Being handed over to the army after returning to Derby, he was tried, found guilty of treason, having deserted the American cause, and was executed in Morristown. Chauncey Judd, broken down and exhausted, was found in the company with the robbers, and was tenderly cared for by his brother. The other young men and their helpers were yet to suffer.

Two were allowed to turn state's evidence ; the others suffered fines, or imprisonment, or both. Three were sentenced to four years' imprisonment in the Newgate state prison. Those persons who aided them also were fined. Besides, Capt. Dayton received large sums for damages amounting to several thousand pounds. Chauncey Judd received $4,000 for injuries, his hands being frozen and the young man made a cripple for life. However, when the war was over, there was some modification of the court's decision.

Some time after this incident, Capt. Dayton came to Seymour, and occupied the house opposite where the plot was made to rob him, and there he kept tavern for some years ; in the meantime planned and made the Dug Road to Naugatuck along the river, that his house might have the benefit of the extra travel.

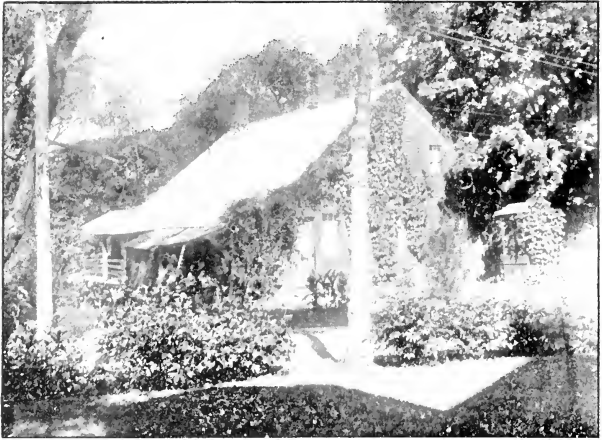

This cluster of historic houses is at the extreme southwest of Indian Hill.

On leaving the Dayton Tavern or William Hull place, the first house east is the old Sheldon Tucker homestead of long standing. Being painted dark red, the ancient look is well preserved. Being a low lying one story house with long back roof, and, together with the ell on the southwest corner, it makes a fine illustration of that type of a house. Long ago the cellar contained a sub-cellar.

Great are the contrasts between the ancient and the modern, between the comforts of the past and those of the present, the possessions of long ago and those now at hand, as are suggested by this little red house, under the shadow of the fine residence, the home of L. T. Wooster,

Across the road towards the corner of Maple and Pearl streets, there stands the little Kinney house, which was once the home of Mrs. Lydia Kinney, who lived there during years previous and following 1800. From her estate, in 1802, she sold land sufficient to make the road from the blacksmith shop direct to the Falls bridge. During the time of her living alone in this house, she raised silk worms and spun and wove silk enough for a dress for herself. One of her young friends, now Mrs. E. A. Lum, often went there to see the silk worms feed upon the mulberry leaves, and to see and hear her wonderful parrot. The mulberry trees grew eastward from her home. Lydia was the daughter of Abram Ronnay and the wife of Medad Kinney, (son of Ebenezer I. d. 1794, aged 35.) Mrs. Lydia Kinney was the grandmother of Mr. Medad Tucker, also of Miss Ann Tucker, who was Mr. Isaac Davis' first wife.

Leaving the little house known as the Kinney place, we come to the four corners, the crossing of Pearl and Maple streets. Here was a store on the south-east corner, built in 1820, and occupied by Mr. Sanford, "Pitchfork Sanford," so called for killing a man many years before with a pitchfork, when he was a blacksmith on the place between New Haven and the towns north, the travel being over the Oxford turnpike. In the ball-room the Methodists held services. This old tavern was last occupied by a Mr. Harrison, and was moved in 1853 to the land north of Frank Beecher's house, leaving the old cellar still surrounded with maples.

Woodbridge road. He was tried by the court, branded and was to wear a cord about his neck the rest of his life.

On the opposite corner stood the tavern built by Seba Moulthrop in 1812, continuing the business about twenty years, followed by David B. Clark, who was tavern keeper as late as 1846. It was a noted stopping

THE OLD BLACKSMITH SHOP

The special object of interest on the cross roads is the blacksmith shop, belonging to Edwin or Edmund Page in 1798. It stands in the highway close to the roads and formerly was built on proprietors' land, or undivided land. In 1798, to avoid disputes about the location, the north side was taken out and replaced by a stone wall making the old shop look quite ancient. During the late years the music of the hammers has been irregular, but formerly it was a busy place, where the making of augers was carried on early in the century by Walter French, and, perhaps for half a century previous, the blacksmith may have had his shop here. The road from the shop to the Falls bridge was laid out in 1802, and the turnpike to New Haven in 1798.

Indian Hill or Promised Land, rises to the height of 220 feet, and there were no dwellings on it until long after the beginning of the present century. The first house was built by Daniel Banks Johnson for John Corey who worked in the cotton mill, the house still standing just north of the home of A. B. Dunham, on Washington Ave. William Losee lived here for many years.

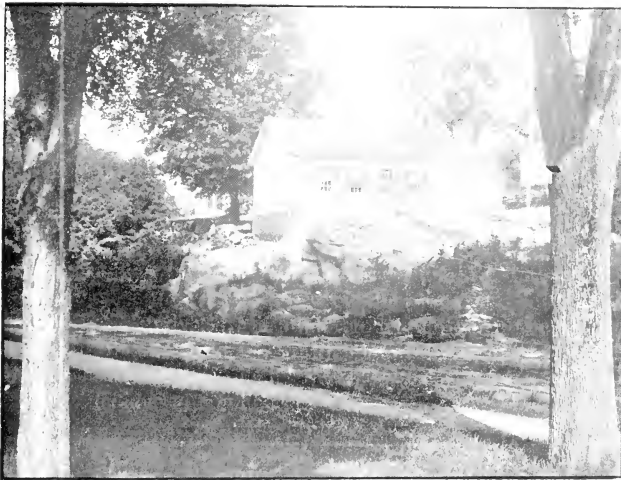

The second house built was the home of the late Geo. Lester, on the bank just beyond the station. This was built by Isaac and William Losee in 1841, a pleasant little one story house looking west across the valley and the Falls, and upon the busy village where once the Indian had his wigwam.

The Roman Catholic, St. Augustine's church, is located on Washington avenue on the east side of the valley. The first church was built in 1856. Under the leadership of the popular pastor, Rev. R. C. Gagan, a new church was built to meet the growing needs in 1888-9, with a seating capacity of about 600. The church is now presided over by the Rev. M. F. Rigney.

After leaving the west side of the river about 1800, Deacon Bradford Steele, Jr., built a house more than a mile southeast of the Falls, on the New Haven turnpike, at the corners where now the Johns live. This house was small, one story, and now is ancient looking. Considerable of the interior was finished in wood. Its location was well chosen, facing the east, a wide tract of land sloping westward, making a fine farm. Deacon Bradford was a useful man, and raised a large family. His daughter married a Holcomb who built the large house adjoining the old one, facing the north. The more recent owners were Davis and Johns. In the triangle of the roads there is room for a fine park.

This section might have been called Steele district because of families by that name. Edmund, son of Dea. Bradford, who married in 1809, built the house beyond the old blacksmith shop, at the west end of Union St., on the bank sustained by stone wall and terrace, the entrance to the cellar being an underground tunnel from the street. The house is medium size, a story and a half, with addition on south corner. A flight of steps lead to the walk and front door. The well is in the narrow space in front of the house. With the walls this place is most substantial in appearance as if to stand another century. John Burton Steele followed his father in living here until he built the place south known now as the Steele farm. Henry Wyant occupies the house described. Several other Steele families were within half a mile south, but now they are all gone. The little red house, known as the Squire's place was one, the Steele farm house another, now owned by Charles French.

THE BELL SCHOOL HOUSE.

The Bell schoolhouse was located in what was early known as the Chusetown district. It was built about 1814, the first stove was used in 1820. The two story building was cut down to one story in 1840. Many are the children who have graduated from this school to make their mark in the world, having taken a useful place among their fellow men. To them the Bell school is among the best remembered landmarks.

The next place of interest is the First Congregational parsonage built in 1789 by Rev. Benjamin Beach, who occupied the house in March, 1790, coming from North Haven.

THE OLD CONGREGATIONAL PARSONAGE.

The parsonage stands on the corner of Pearl and Elm streets, the land being given to Rev. Beach by Isaac Johnson, who also later gave the land where stood the church. At first the house was one story, facing the north, having the appearance of comfort. It was well built and somewhat ornamented as is still to be seen about the front door. About 1830 the house was built over and made a two story house and the piazza was added later, about 1895.

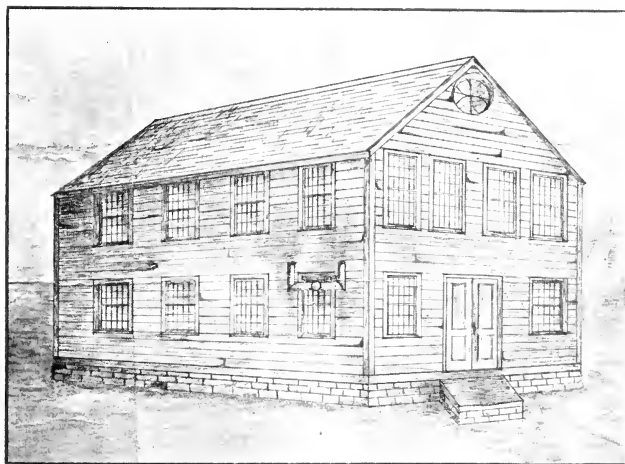

Rev. Beach served the little church faithfully for 15 years, after which he moved to Milton.

The first parson of Seymour was the great grandfather of the respected citizens in town today bearing the name Beach.

Besides being a preacher, Rev. Beach was a maker of brooms, and it was his custom to give a new broom to every couple who were married by him. The church, a one story building, was built in 1791. It faced the west; had no spire, and was never painted. As was the custom of the times, town meetings were held here, and other public gatherings. In 1818 it was made into a two story building. The Methodist beginnings date back to 1797 when the first class was formed, holding meetings in houses of members and friends. There were nine members. The first members of the Methodist church were Jesse Johnson, Isaac Baldwin, Esther Baldwin, Sarah Baldwin, and Eunice Baldwin. Four other comers were soon added, George Clark, Lucy Hitchcock, Silas Johnson, and Olive Johnson.

The first church was organized and trustees elected in 1817, and the Congregational church was bought on September 22, 1818.

OLD CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, 1796-1817. METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, 1817-1818.

The church was then opened for their services. The building was cold and unadorned. In 1826-7 George Kirtland organized a Sunday school. In Jan. 18, 1848, the new church was dedicated by Bishop James, being of Gothic design. This was a pleasant church 40x60 feet in a fine location. But with the growing industries and town, ambitions also grew, and a new church was built 1891-2, the total cost being $18,000. The old part of the church is used for Sunday school and social meetings. The new part will seat about 400. It has a sloping floor, two large windows, and steel ceiling. The membership is about two hundred. L. T. Wooster is one of the leading members. Rev. E. C. Tullar is the present pastor. The parsonage is close by, built in 1875.

The Dea. E. A. Lum house near the Beach parsonage, is a large, square two-story dwelling, painted white and facing the south. The front door wears an old iron knocker, the hall is small with winding stairs, the rooms large and pleasant, with ornamental woodwork. At the east end also there is a hall and a little porch.

THE NAUGATUCK ABOVE KINSEY TOWN.

It is stately in appearance, high and looks as if it had been a tavern. The architecture represents that of more than a century ago or that of the Revolutionary period. The west part of the second story was used as a ball room, but no balls have been given in recent years. The chimney is large and several fireplaces add charm to the rooms, some being in use at present. This was the home of Mrs. E. A. Lum, the daughter of Jeremiah Durand, who lived here many years. In the previous century the house was occupied by Hezekiah Johnson, who was married Dec. 12, 1784, and if he occupied the house at that time, it is probably that the date 1784 is about the time that the house was built.

Mr. and Mrs. Lum with their daughter Lizzie make their home a center for the many social people who gather here. Dea. Lum is the senior deacon of the Congregational church, and has in previous years held many positions of trust.

THE DEA. LUM HOUSE.

One of the old French homesteads is located nearly opposite the White place on the west side of the road, a story and a half house, said to have been built and occupied by Charles French, who was married Feb. 23, 1784. For a time this was the home of Raymond French. This house is still owned by the French family.

The White home is but a little distance toward Bladen's brook beneath the shadow of the great oak, a story and a half, with homelike surroundings. Fred Peck is the present occupant. This house was built by Isaac White in 1831. The old John White homestead stood a little north of the present house, the location being indicated by a well. John White was a soldier in the Revolution. The old house was small. Daniel and Isaac were sons of John White.

Across the meadow directly east is one of the old Botsford homes, made conspicuous by its pleasant outlook and solitude, as well as the large spruce tree overshadowing it. This was the home of Samuel Botsford. The family of Charles Bay has lived here in recent years. At one time Watson, the stage man, lived here.

The old M. E. parsonage is located on the corner of Grand and Pearl streets. This is mentioned as the first local M. E. parsonage. In 1831 George Kirtland paid $110.00 for this land and gave it to the Methodist church for a parsonage lot, the house itself being built the next year, 1832. The present owner is Mr. Thomas A. Perrins.

The old Johnson homestead is located at the first house north of the Arethusa Spring Water Co., where Samuel Hawkins now lives. The old house was built by Capt. Ebenezer Johnson, during the second century past. It was a large house of the old style, facing the west, two stories in front, with a long roof in the rear. It was a red house and before its removal, looked very old, having a tumbled down appearance. Some of the children were afraid to pass it because they believed it was haunted. The David Johnson place, between this and the rubber mill, was formerly a part of the old Capt. E. Johnson homestead.

The first house on the right going east, on Smith street, was erected by Capt. Julius Bassett 1847. The story and a half house next to the paper mill pond was the home of Timothy Hitchcock. This appears to be the oldest house in the street. The next across the road eastward was the house of Jared Bassett, built about 1832.

The Crowther house, the last on north side of the street, was built by Capt. Wilbur W. Smith in 1849. The residence of Rev. Sylvester Smith, father of Capt. W. W., was located on the right at the east end of Smith street. This house was built by Bennet Hitchcock in 1838, and was bought by Sylvester Smith in 1840.

This being a hilly country, with three rivers to make it more so,—Little River from the northwest and Bladens Brook from the east, flowing into the Naugatuck river above the Falls, it was natural for the people to build their houses at the cross roads or opposite, making two or three in the vicinity. And if there were about twenty houses in 1740 in the vicinity of the Falls, there were eight such localities.

Bladens Brook was one of these favored localities, due in part to the water power. The Beach paper mill marks the location of one of the first fulling mills in the region. In 1790 Titus Beach bought the land and built a fulling mill.

VIEW ON BLADENS BROOK

Johnson, French, and Chatfield were among the first to settle along Bladens Brook and north on Skokorat. The homestead of the Chatfields was on the south side of this brook, more than a mile eastward from the Falls, and one-fourth of a mile from the Milford, or Woodbridge line. The land was purchased from the proprietors of the town of Derby March 24, 1762, by Elnathan Chatfield and

HOME OF JOEL CHATFIELD, AND SON LEMAN.

Hannah his wife. He built a saw mill and a corn mill very soon after the purchase. From Elnathan it passed to his oldest son, Joel Chatfield, 1778, who built a much larger mill on the west side, two stories in height, the first mill being only one story and a half. There was a bridge from the flume leading to the second floor of the first mill, and two steps enabling one to pass to the second floor of the new mill. In the new mill there was machinery for grinding wheat and rye for flour. The stones were from France, and were among the earliest imported into this country. In 1782 he built the double house now standing and married Ruth Stoddard of Woodbury, Conn., the next year. Among their seven children were Lemman who lived on the old homestead, and Joel R. who lived on the Skokorat road to be mentioned later, and lived to be 90 years of age.

The old Chatfield house was large and roomy, with a two story ell on the northeast corner, facing the south and highway. Its appearance is very old looking, especially when shaded by a large spruce tree. Mrs. Chatfield was a progressive woman, who wanted something better than pewter or heavy yellow dishes, so she made an engagement with a sea-captain to get her a set of genuine china-ware direct from China, paying for the same in advance with the product of the farm. After many months the coveted crockery came, to her satisfaction. Though doing good service for many years there are now but two or three pieces remaining, being in the possession of Miss Mary Chatfield.

The original tract of land, or the first purchase made by Elnathan Chatfield, contained four and one half acres, located between the brook and highway, beginning one eighth of a mile from the Milford or Woodbridge line.

The old mill stood north of the house, but nothing now remains except the stone foundation and the embankments of the canals. After grinding was discontinued, the next industry was the making of plow beams and handles. The handles were turned, steamed and bent, and shipped to New York city. This industry was conducted by Jason and Burrett Skeeles until 1832. The next industry was that of clock making conducted by Burrett Hitchcock until 1836. The next was the making of the wooden heads for white-wash brushes, a business conducted by Rufus Hine 1837, which was the last work done in the old mill.

Skokorat--where is Skokorat? It is the large, broad hill 420 feet high, north of Bladens Brook. The Indian name was Scucurra, or Snake Hill. A number of fine farms are now on this hill, it being the locality first occupied by the pioneers.

This hill slopes gradually southward, and near the foot where now Howard Chatfield lives, there came one of the first settlers, Benajah Johnson, in 1728, who was married to widow Sarah (Brewster) Hawkins. Oct. 10, of the same year. He has been mentioned in history as building the first house in Seymour, but there was a Mr. Riggs near Pinesbridge, beside the Henry Wooster place, already mentioned and Miles in 1724 on the Bungay road. In 1750 Johnson built another house just north of the present Chatfield house, and directly opposite William Gilyard, which was torn down before 1880. Benajah was the first of the many Johnsons of this region, they having come from the prominent families in lower Derby. Stiles Johnson, so prominent in the Methodist church, lived here about one hundred years later. Isaac Johnson had for sons, Jesse and Stiles 1st, the latter had a son Stiles who lived on the old homestead on Skokorat and was a leading Methodist.

For situation scarcely a better one could be found, and here the lonely couple lived with only a path leading out of the wilderness to the civilization a few miles down the Naugatuck river. For 12 years they were without neighbors, until 1740 when Israel French secured land and built a house where now stands the home of William Gilyard, across the path west of B. Johnson. Israel French married Sarah Loveland September 11, 1739. Portions of this first house of Israel French were doubtless used in the present dwelling of Mr. Gilyard, the Gilyard family coming from England 1807.

The outlook over the country from this place is beautiful and charming. The land is productive. The moss covered orchards, further up the hill, with age resting upon them, bear witness to the past generations, that have gathered many harvests. To the present generation there is some wonder as to what use these great orchards served; the answer is given by the old brandy-mill that belonged to many of the old estates generations ago, and was one of the thriving New England industries, but very few of these mills remain to the present day. During or at the close of the civil war, legal restrictions were placed upon all cider brandy mills.

DANIEL HOLBROOK OR JOEL R. CHATFIELD HOMESTEAD

Near one of these old moss covered orchards in Skokorat there stands another old house of two stories facing the west with the overhanging upper story. This house stands back from the road, having a number of large maple trees in front. It is shingled on the sides and very brown with age. As one approaches in dusk of the evening, one might think the grove a good place for the witches to frolic.

This house was built by Col. Daniel Holbrook for his son Daniel who was married 178-. For many years it was the home of Joel R. Chatfield, until his death, having lived to be very aged, 90 years. Died Feb. 4, 1894. The interior arrangement of rooms shows the lack of skill and plan, due in part to the great chimney, as did many of the oldest homes, yet the common room was convenient, and there were comforts in those days amid great trials.

Other old houses on Skokorat have been replaced by modern houses, thus removing many of the ancient land marks, if not the ancient bounds. The distance from the Falls is about a mile and three quarters.

A tradition is sometimes referred to concerning a thoughtful youth who longed to get away from Scucurra, or Skokorat, because it was such a lonesome place, and if he should die, he did not want to be buried there, because he feared when the trumpet was sounded for the resurrection, it could not be heard as far away as Scucurra, and he would be left behind.

From Bladens brook the road runs north, called North street, and nearly opposite the west end of Gilyard street, there was formerly an old house belonging to the French family. One of the occupants was Israel French, who built the house on the old foundation, now the home of the Howis family. From the location, this old homestead appears to have been a part of the estate of the first Israel French who settled on the west side of the Skokorat road.

Still further north on the same street, on the corner of Nichols street, there is another of the Johnson homesteads. In recent years the place is known as that of the Ashbel Storrs place. Two generations before it belonged to Capt. Josiah Merrick; still earlier it was probably built by Benajah, or Isaac Johnson, a large old style house with two stories in front and one in the rear, very similar to the Tomlinson house on Rockhouse Hill and also to the Samuel Botsford house on the Bungay road. This was the home of Isaac Johnson, who first owned the land upon which was built the Congregational parsonage and where now the Methodist church stands. In later years Isaac Johnson became a Methodist.

Capt. Josiah Merrick came to Seymour from New Haven about 1825-30, and in 1838 tore down the old house and used many of the timbers in constructing the new house, still standing beneath the peaceful shade of the maples. During the destruction of the old house some shackles were found with which the Rev. Jesse Johnson, son of Isaac, was confined during periods of insanity, a method which was used during the days before asylums were established. Besides this homestead Capt. Josiah Merrick bought of the Johnsons the tract of land extending to the river including the present Seymour Park. By inheritance this farm came from Capt. Josiah Merrick to his grandson, Geo. H. Merrick, the father of Mrs. H. D. Northrop, and by him was sold to Raymond French. The last occupant was Ashbel Storrs.

Capt. Josiah Merrick was born in Harwich, Mass., in 1766, died in 1845, and was buried in Seymour. He was a communicant of Trinity church. He descended from William who was born in Wales 1603, and emigrated to America in 1636, and for six years served under Miles Standish in the Colonial Militia, as ensign. In the "Merrick Lineage" the family is said to have descended from both the princes of Wales of the Welsh royal family, and of the English royal family from King Edward I. As early as the 6th century the line was established in North Wales. At the coronation of Henry VIII, Apr. 25, 1509, Merrick was a Captain of the guard and by order of the King the name Merrick became one of the first surnames in Wales. On the coat of arms there was this motto of the Welsh Merricks; "Without God nothing; God and enough."

Between the Rimmon and Mud brooks that flow into Rimmon pond on the east side, against the bank, there was an old log-house belonging, in early days, to the Davis family. Daniel was one who had sons named Daniel and Reuben. In that locality wolves and rattlesnakes were abundant, and by some means Reuben discovered a cure for rattlesnake bites, but he never would reveal the secret, except to his son, who finally died without giving it to the world.

BY RIMMON POND, NEAR THE WOLF PIT.

Just west of Rimmon brook, on the crown of the hill, a wolf-pit was dug by the early settlers for the purpose of catching wolves. A large pit was dug in a bed of clay, a sheep placed in it, then covered over lightly with brush. From five to seven wolves have been caught at one time in this pit. The place has been marked in recent years by a depression in the soil, in the center of which there was growing a butternut tree.

A little distance up Rimmon brook there is still to be seen the foundation of a mill, that received its water supply from the region of the present icehouse of M. E. Wheeler.

At the very foot of Rock Rimmon on the south, where now lives A. E. Wheeler, there was found in 1892 an old cellar of long duration while men were digging for a new cellar. Though having long been covered with earth, the stones of the old cellar wall still stood upright from two to three feet on all sides except the north side towards the rock, there was a stone about twelve feet long and nearly the height of a man in its widest part, the cellar being about twelve by fifteen feet. Within this stone enclosure there were also found shells and rude pieces of crockery, so called. This may have been one of the cellars referred to in 1685, soon after the first division of the lands. The arrangement of stone upright recalls the old-time method of the use of stone in the building of the humblest dwellings.

On the eastern slope of Rock Rimmon, many years ago, there lived a slave named Brister or Bristol, at one time belonging to Alexander Johnson, who remembered being stolen from the coast of Africa when a little boy, but lived to spend his last days beneath the shadow of Rock Rimmon. (Rock Rimmon in the Holy Land is where six hundred Benjamites took refuge to escape slaughter.)

Judges 20:45: "And they turned and fled toward the wilderness unto the rock of Rimmon."

The Record office on Main street, the second building south of the station, is one of the old landmarks still standing in the heart of the village. Probably a Mr. Mix built this house about 1790. The Benhams came here in 1817. While there have been many occupants, the most noted was the Benham family, that had twin boys, who in after years were among the most wealthy men of Bridgeport. Being masons by trade, they built up a large business that was exceedingly profitable. In their declining years they occupied the house on Great Hill back of the schoolhouse, spending the summer days with delight amid those solitudes. Further reference will be made to the Benham home.

"The Robbin's Nest" said a young man, "I know where there is a Robbins' nest with ten young Robbins in it."

Capt. Robbins followed the sea, and his family lived in the oldest house on Main street, known as Robbins' Nest, now occupied by The Record office, W. C. Sharpe, editor. There were nine daughters in the family, and some living at present remember the good times at the "Robbins' Nest." In the attic was a loom where Mrs. Robbins wove carpets. Previous to the extension of the railroad, 1849, the Robbins' garden was famous for growing the most beautiful flowers. At present none of the family reside here.

Directly west near the river is the old Humphreys woolen mill, built in 1806, and said to be the first in the country of its kind, which made the best broad cloth. The merino wool was used here. This old mill is a curiosity, having lived through the era of the development of manufacturing. The mill is long and high, with long windows and many dormer windows. There were formerly a tower, and bell on the east end. Thomas Jefferson procured from this mill cloth for his inaugural suit.

THE DE FOREST—FRENCH PLACE

The large house opposite the railroad station was built by John H. DeForest, first President of Humphreysville Mfg. Co., in 1822 for his own dwelling, a model for its day in architecture, location, and comfort. The fancy woodwork compares well with the best of the present day. The rooms are high, large, cheerful, and fourteen in number. Everything about is substantial. Also the grounds testify to the taste of the occupant, there being numerous trees and a variety including the musical pine and spruces. DeForest lived here until his death in 1830, the property then passing into the hands of Raymond French who lived here for many years. Mr. French did much toward building up Seymour industries.

The old tannery is an object of interest because of its antique looking structure, located at the east end of the iron bridge, on the bank of the river, the south part of the block of houses composed of three. It is easily to be distinguished from the others by its age, the old chimneys, and the west side which is covered with wide boards. This is what is left of the old tannery, a two story building having many names associated with it, as those of Benham, Judson English, George Kirtland, and Alfred Hull. The bark mill was located by the little brook a number of rods south.

SEYMOUR IN 1838—FROM BARBER'S HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS.

Deacon Isaac Kinney had a tin shop close by the east end of the bridge, south side. Dea. Isaac was known as "the salt of the earth," because of his noble and useful life. He was an active member of the Episcopal church.

On the north side of the road opposite the Kinney tin shop, (the place now being marked by cellar and river wall) there was a store, which was built by Ezekiel Gilbert. The "Turnpike Co." gave Gilbert the right to build there, because he built the stone wall next to the river. This store was burned.

Leaving the east side of the river, one crosses the bridge below the Falls to a slight elevation which becomes a small island in high water, and during floods is nearly covered. The first bridge built here was before 1763.

Another was built in 1783, the money being raised by lottery, etc. The Falls bridge ordered in 1782 and begun in 1783, cost about $725.00, the money being raised by lottery tickets. There were 88 tickets sold to 33 persons, most of whom were doubtless living in this part of the town. Names:

On this island there are two houses of note, the Seymour House on the south and the little dwelling on the north, a small house of one story with two windows in front. This was the house in which John Winterbottom and family lived only for a season, the summer of 1817. The daughter Ann was about eight years of age. She became the distinguished writer known as Mrs. Ann Stephens. This house has been pointed out as the birth place of Mrs. Ann Stephens; but it is not. She leaves a letter that removes all doubt and corrects the error. She tells of living in this little house next to the "Pines," a beautiful grove of white pines with scattering oaks, where she spent many a happy day through the summer, while waiting for the completion of the new house with stone foundation on the corner south of the old blacksmith shop on the hill.

Following events soon led them to move from town, and the little house was occupied by Richard Hine, who built before 1820 the east part which is the same shape as the old, but about two feet higher, though not quite as long; the like of which is rarely seen in these days, though a hundred years ago more common, building on a little as the family increased. At present the house belongs to the Strapp family.

The birthplace of Mrs. Stephens is on West St. more than half a mile from the Falls, in a house standing on the south side of the road, known in late years as the Swift house. Ann was born here in

BIRTHPLACE OF MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS.

1810. This house was built in the preceding century, a story and a half, facing north, and the south roof somewhat longer than the other.

To the writer the following description was given of its appearance seventy-five years ago: "It was then an old red house, whose partitions inside were ceiled to the top and painted a deep red. It had the usual fire-places upon which Mrs. Stephens remembers 'warm drink was kept in a tin cup' during sickness, the cup standing on the hot stone hearth. After this there was a change of owners and the house was clapboarded and painted white. Besides many other improvements were made costing more than to build a new house.

While living here Ann attended school in a little red school house a little way up the road where also attended the children of Dr. Stoddard. In her "recollections," she refers both to her first home, the little red school house and those families living near. During the last visit of Mrs. Stephens to this home, she peeled some of the bark from the large maple trees, standing in front of the house, as a memento of her birthplace. They were little trees when she was a little girl living there.

The Seymour House stands on the south side of Broad St. on the bank of the river close to the bridge. It was built by John Moshier in 1824, the main part being of stone, cemented and painted, the other additions being of wood. In its early history it became the center of great activity because of the stage route passing here, and this was one of the places for changing horses on the stage line between New Haven and Albany. Thus it continued for many years until the coming of the railway in 1849. During the period of travel by teams exclusively there were occasions when dozens of teams stopped here for the night, and like other prominent houses in those times, this was witness to exciting scenes, and strange it would be if there were no romances worthy of a longer story. For many years this was the chief tavern and hotel for this vicinity. In 1830 Ezekiel Gilbert kept tavern here for two years; after which time, or in 1833, he occupied the house and store on the bank at the east end of the bridge. In 1835, Mar. 14, E. Gilbert bought this place of William Humphreys, which included a house, store and barn. This appears to be the location of a cellar belonging to Gen. D. Humphreys in 1812. (See Sey. Hist., p. 63.) Again John Moshier occupied the old tavern. At one time Horace Hurd owned and occupied this house. In recent years Henry A. Dunham has owned and kept the hotel, and the livery stables have been in the hands of A. B. Dunham, under whose skillful management, it has done good service. With the coming of the wheel and railroad, the hotel meets the new demands of modern days.

The Glendenning Academy is still remembered by many of our prominent people as the place of their schooling. This Academy was established in 1849, and occupied the old Congregational church building, which formerly stood on South Main street next north of the cemetery, later being moved to its present location, the first house down the river below the falls, now owned by John Schofield.

As the railroad had just come to town, May 14, 1849, it was thought that this locality would be a most favorable one for the establishment of an academy for the benefit of the youth in this region and neighboring towns. There were forty-seven pupils who were taught here, having the advantages of the English branches, the classics, Latin, Greek, also French and music. The academy passed through several changes into a public school, which continued until the high school was built in 1884, at a cost of $45,000, which is one of the finest school buildings in the Naugatuck valley.

Across the road, on the corner of Broad and Pine streets, there is a landmark more lasting than old houses, and that is the sidewalk made of useless pins from the pin factory. This walk extends around the corner of the residence of Mark Lounsbury for more than three hundred feet. Seventy-five barrels or more of waste pins have been used in the construction of this walk. Through the process of rusting, the walk has become solid iron, and has remained firm even against the force of the flood during high water in the river, which, like a torrent, sweeps through with great fury to the depth of nearly six feet.

The wide interest concerning this walk is illustrated by the "Newspaper Cutting Bureau," which offered to furnish four hundred and fifty clippings concerning this walk, published in different parts of the world.

The old elm so long admired was dying, and was cut in 1900, and a 20th century tree, the gift of Hon. Carlos French, from his land east of Walnut street, was set in its place.

THE PLANTING OF THE 20TH CENTURY TREE.

On the corner of Derby avenue and Broad street, in the triangle of the highways, there was planted April 30th, 1901, by the Rev. H. A. Campbell, aided by George W. Burroughs, a handsome hard maple tree four inches in diameter and twenty-five feet high. The address :

"I plant this tree in view of future years, with hopes of joy to childhood, youth or age. Wide may thy branches spread, and every season wider still ! May thy beauty grow with years ; may thy charms dispel both signs and fears, until it be that ten thousand hearts shall say with me,

" Fair tree ! for thy delightful shade
 'Tis just that some return be made :
 Sure some return is due from me
 To thy cool shadows, and to thee.
 When thou to birds dost shelter give Thou music dost from them receive :
 If travelers beneath thee stay
 Till storms have worn themselves away,
 That time in praising thee they spend,
 And thy protecting power commend "

Thus, Fair Tree ! may thy years be spent the century through, into another century that shall be called new.

Seymour, Conn., April 30, 1901.

One of the old roads extended from the north over Rimmon Hill, down across Little River up past the Episcopal church, dividing at the four corners, one leading down Falls Hill to the ford at Broad St., the other road led south along the side of the hill, now Cedar St, down under the shadow of Castle Rock to the ford near the Henry Wooster place. There were only two houses in all the region south of the corners and below the Falls. One of these houses is where Geo. Hurlburt now lives, a substantial looking place, said to have been built by Bradford Steele, a story and a half, with rooms in the basement, situated second below the old Shrub Oak schoolhouse, and the rocky ledge that extends down to the Falls. It stands on the upper road directly west of the Congregational church, and the view from this high road is one of much beauty, looking down upon the Falls, the village, and across the valley to the Promised Land. Being on the road that led to the ford, this house has been witness of many events and changes that were not recorded, and is known to have stood about the time of the Revolution. Other occupants were H. Upson and W. Buf-

fun. Hiram Upson lived here when his daughter was married to Harpin Riggs.

The other old house is on Derby avenue, near Rose street, known as the Abel Bassett, Lum, or Holloway house, and formerly stood where the road now runs, having been moved back about ten feet. The south part stands in the original form and is very old, the date 1747 being found on the stairway which was replaced by a new one many years ago. Previous to the time of Mr. Bassett, this place was owned by a slave who acquired it from his master. This house served as a tavern, being the nearest to the ford, on the west side of the river, nearly a quarter of a mile above the ford. Dancing must have been common in those days, and to aid the sweet and harsh sounds of music, there was a mysterious sounding apparatus placed in the ceiling. It can hardly be called a sounding board. A number of bottles were imbedded in the plaster of the ceiling with their necks down three inches, and when the fierceness of the dance and music reached their height, strange sounds came from the ceiling, being sent forth from the empty bottles. Little is known about this place through its long and eventful history. Like the ancient homes in general, the passing public does not even give a thought concerning the history of their past. Now the thousands of wheels pass by where more than a century ago there was only a path for the Indians and pioneers. Under the shadow of Castle Rock this house stood on the land which David Wooster bought of the Indians in 1692.

The old "Pound" for stray cattle, so well remembered by the school children of half a century ago, was located five rods south of the corner of Pine street and Derby avenue, close to the walk, with a high fence, beneath two great white pine trees. In the later period it was used as a chicken yard. Being shady and cool the cats found it good hunting ground. The chickens disappeared. One season, Philo Beecher, the owner, lost twelve chickens and shot thirteen cats for compensation. The pound was destroyed about 1896.

Now and then in New England, the beginning of a home is similar to the one just north of the Union cemetery. This was begun by Gipson Lum, in 1837. He was a young man, being a sea captain, and having a young family. Before he finished the house, he received an urgent call to take charge of a ship about to leave port. At first he declined because of a very strong feeling coming over him that he ought not to go. But finally he consented, much against his own will. Soon after his departure, other ships brought news of a severe storm, and Captain Lum and his ship were never seen or heard from. The place is now owned and occupied by Albert F. Warner.

Going south from the Falls the road follows the River, with hills on the right, the river on the left, and being overshadowed with trees, it is the favorite road in the region, traveled over by thousands of wheels. The first house below the woods is the early home of Jonathan Miles, 2nd, a tory; it being on the west side sheltered by the woods and hill, a two story house but of little interest at present, except as the stopping place for the wheelmen.

Ebenezer Keeney was born in Wales, in 1718; came to Derby when a young man, and resided a little way southeast from Old Town until he built his house at the Landing in 1754. It was the first house at Derby Narrows, and his son, Ithiel Keeney, was the first white child born at the Landing, March 17, 1755. Ebenezer Keeney married Betsey Davis, daughter of John Davis, Jr., December 7, 1738. Ebenezer was a man of large influence in the town and possessed great business energy and ability, as indicated by his being elected tax collector most of the time during the Revolutionary war. He was also appointed war inspector. He was among the number who purchased of the Indians in 1763 two and a half acres of land near the Falls, together with the Falls, for eight pounds. He also owned the land where now stands the Congregational church and parsonage.

He lived in the old Canfield-Booth house on the hill, and also in a house that stood on the flat now covered by the buildings of the Copper Co. Ithiel his son was for thirty years treasurer of the town of Derby, and was said to be one of the most reliable men ever in town.

William was the ninth child of Ebenezer Keeney, born July 16, 1757, and married Millie Steele. Their oldest son was Ebenezer, born Nov. 28, 1779, and married Betsy Buckingham; their oldest child was Betsey, born Jan. 9, 1804, who married Jeremiah Durand, and their oldest child was Elizabeth, who married Edwin A. Lum.

Keeney—Kinney. Keeney is the Welsh name. The Irish name is Kinney. The greater number of the Keeneys spell their name Kinney. The correct spelling of the Welsh name is Keeney, and the spelling of the Irish name is Kinney. It will be seen that the descendants of Ebenezer Keeney are in error when spelling the name Kinney, as the greater part of them do. Kinneytown is the locality near Kinneytown falls.

The first Keeney who settled at Kinneytown, was William, who was married about 1778, becoming the father of Ebenezer, a carpenter and shipbuilder, William, a tinner, Medad, a blacksmith, Deacon Sheldon and Isaac Keeney. As the road then ran close to the side of the river, the first homestead was built facing the east, a small, one story, red house, the roof extending very low on the back side. The old cellar is still to be seen, a little northeast of the present dwelling, under the shadow of a cherry tree.

The present Keeney homestead is located near the falls, known as Kinneytown falls. The house is a large, pleasant two story dwelling with the modern appearance, with shade trees of long standing, surrounded with orchards and many comforts. The barns are on the west side of the road.

The house was probably built by Deacon Sheldon Keeney in the early part of the 19th century. Sheldon was a deacon of the Congregational church, and it was his generosity that provided a parsonage by the side of the church.

The Keeney families have had a large share in the interests and welfare of the town, notably Deacon Sheldon and Deacon Isaac, whose names are still familiar to many an household.

Doubtless the fine river lands contributed much towards the prosperity of this, and the neighboring families below.

Less than a quarter of a mile below the Keeney place, there stands a large two story house, some distance back from the highway, with the back of the house toward the street. In this last respect the house is similar to the home of Mark Twain in Hartford, that has the kitchen facing the main street. However, this old home was not built according to the modern fashion. But more than a hundred years ago, the house was built facing both the river, and road which then ran east of and in front of it. This old homestead is known as the Capt. Philo Holbrook place. Captain Philo was a man of affairs, and the old home itself would indicate no little prosperity in its best days.

CAPT. PHILO HOLBROOK HOUSE.

In 1852 a Mr. Canfield lived there, a tailor by trade, and to him many of the people brought their home-made cloth to have it cut for garments, and in many cases he finished the garments. Capt. Philo Holbrook occupied this old homestead in more recent years.

One is impressed with the dignity of this old house, located on the east side of the highway, with its little lean-to and corner porch, and the well near at hand. The picture of the old time home would have been complete, if the well-sweep had been preserved and were still in service.

Westward from the house near the Bungay road and little brook, there was formerly a cider mill, and its companion a brandy mill, but both are now in ruins.

On going south and approaching the brook, at the foot of King's Hill, a row of large trees, maples and elms, will be seen.

In the field nearly west, there once stood another old homestead of one of the Tomlinson families. One family by the name of Tucker and another by the name of Smith, also lived there. The trees are all that now remain, which would indicate the existence of this ancient landmark. Abel Church set out this row of maples and elms in the early part of the last century, and tried to sell them to the owner of the place. The house has long since disappeared. Abel Church lived just back of this house on the Bungay road, in the same home that Rector Davis, or his widow, spent their declining years. The next house above on the Bungay road was long ago the home of Enos Smith, and later the home of two generations of the Williamson family.

Another old building, fast becoming an old landmark, is the "Shrub Oak" schoolhouse, situated on the high rock west of the Congregational church, on Cedar street. The "Shrub Oak" district was laid out Dec. 27, 1779, and the first schoolhouse was built on north side of road back of James Swan's upper shops, near the corner of the Walter French garden, and the path leading to the shops. From this location the schoolhouse was moved to, and forms a part of the Beers house, nearly opposite of the Trinity cemetery. The third location for the Shrub Oak school was on the rock mentioned above and was built about 1850. It has been used but little since the new high schoolhouse was built, 1884, and its present deserted condition makes the old "Shrub Oak" schoolhouse a monument of the past.

Shrub Oak was the name given at an early date to the region west of the river and Falls. Still earlier, 1702, it was known as Camp's Mortgage, a section three miles square. The origin of this last name was due to the selling of liquor to the Indians by Mr. Camp, who took a mortgage on this territory.

The houses of interest in Shrub Oak are located at the crossing of the roads, Church and West streets. Formerly the Rimmon road came down by the Episcopal church, now a part of Church street. These corners might have been well called the doctors' corners, for doctors lived here for more than 100 years.

The first physician was Samuel Sanford, coming to town about 1790, and died in 1803 at 38 years of age. He lived on the right hand corner going up the Bungay road, or West Church street. Across the road towards Castle Rock, there was a pest house for small-pox patients, in which the town took an interest.

The house of Dr. Sanford has passed through many changes, the old part being now the west part, while the large square house in front facing the east is the work of Gen. Humphrey, at least so stated by the best authority. The Hon. John Humphreys occupied it early in the century. He was a lawyer, being called Judge. Judge John and William were nephews to the General and had charge of the woolen mill, T. Vose & Co.

Mrs. Anna Stephen says, that Judge John and his wife, called Lady Humphreys, an elegant, handsome lady, were great favorites with the General, and were generally looked up to in the neighborhood as superior persons. The whole Humphreys family were remarkable for their personal beauty. Judge John had two daughters, Mrs. Canfield and Mrs. Pease, who were beautiful and elegant women. Judge Humphreys died in 1826, and between that time and 1830 the house was adorned by A. M. Bassett with the present style of architecture.

JUDGE JOHN HUMPHREY'S PLACE.

This large white house was the most conspicuous on the west side of the river, pleasantly located on the corner, having large, high rooms, a generous hall, a colonial window in the attic, fancy frieze, a veranda supported by six doric columns. There were balustrades on both the veranda and roof of the house. This place has lost but little of its former dignity. The more recent occupants were George F. DeForest, Henry Wheeler, E. E. Adams, W. A. Warner and C. S. Boies, cashier of the Valley National Bank.

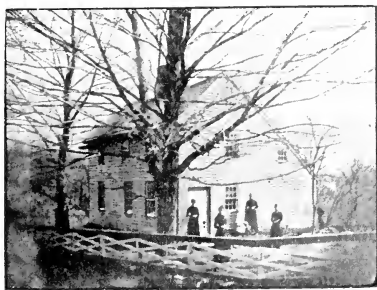

Across the road to the north and on the corner was the Doctor Johnson house built by him in 1842. He married Hannah, the daughter of the old Dr. Stoddard, and began housekeeping in an old house that stood back of the new one where the barns now are. This was a very old house. Its early history cannot be found, but this has been ascertained, that it was the first home of Dr. Stoddard, who came here in 1804, and probably lived there for a number of years and sent his children to the same school with Mrs.

Ann Stephens, in a little red schoolhouse on the road back of James Swan's upper shops, next above Walter French house. Mrs. Stephens writes later of the good doctor making his visits going horseback. This will answer many inquiries where Dr. Stoddard lived.

From this old house so near the corner and Episcopal church, the doctor moved to the Rimmon road, a little way up Rimmon hill, on the west side, the barns being on the opposite side of the road. The house was small and one story, but the location was dry and the views most beautiful, as they are all along the southern slope of Rimmon. This house was burned in 1894. This large farm was afterwards given to his son Joseph, and the old Doctor moved to the east side as already described, a mile below the Falls.

For many years after 1842, Dr. Johnson lived in the new house which he built in front of the old one, on the north corner of West and Church streets, and today it is one of the best locations for a fine residence in town. In May 1901 this property passed into the hands of W. L. Ward, the undertaker, who will make it his permanent home.

Dr. Kendall lived on the corner towards the cemetery. This house was formerly used as a store. The Rev. Dr. H. D. Northrop's family live in the home on the opposite corner, the house having been built by Hiram Upson in 1847, the work being done by his two sons. And the first physician, Dr. Sanford, lived on the other corner, so there has been a doctor living on each of the four corners.

OLD CANFIELD HOUSE.

Abiel Canfield, son of Joseph, came from that part of Great Hill, known as the Bungay district, southward from the present Bungay schoolhouse. Abiel married Mary Barlow of Stratford Dec. 23, 1779, and lived in the little house on West St., where now lives George F. Robinson, the fifth house from the corner, on the west side of the street. Capt. Bradford Steele lived here until he sold it to Abiel Canfield. This is a small one story and a half house with a basement kitchen, thought to have been one of the houses built by Capt. Bradford Steele, who built several houses and lived in a number before he moved across the river to the present Johns place. There is a well, mentioned in a deed given by Theophilus Miles to Abiel Canfield, May 18, 1784; and this well is located among the invisible landmarks beneath the concrete walk in front of the first house south of the Canfield-Robinson house.

As early as 1760 Ebenezer Keeney owned land at the Falls, and also the land and house which he lived in, or the place now known as the Canfield-Booth place on North Church street. In 1785 the name of Bradford Steele appears among the names of those who leased land at the Falls, who also became the owner of the house which Ebenezer Kinney previously occupied. Abiel Canfield becomes the next owner of this old homestead, about 1800, which still remains in the family. Located on the east side near the road, with maple trees in front, this old red house was two stories, facing the west, the east roof sloping down to one story. Besides the front door, there was a small door on the south side near the front corner. The house was built on the old plan, with corner rooms in front, small hall in the center, back of which was the great chimney and fireplace of the largest pattern, opening into the kitchen, which was on the back side of the house. Standing beneath the maples and weeping willow, the well sweep pointing heavenward, this old homestead has been a fit subject for the work of artists.

Abiel Canfield was followed by his son, Samuel, who was followed by Henry T. Booth, who married Harriet, the daughter of Samuel. These two families occupied the old house for nearly a century, or until a few years ago, when the new house was built, being located east of the old one, leaving the well, still to be seen, in the front lawn.

The memory of Napoleon is associated with this well. A traveler visiting the tomb of Napoleon cut from the historic weeping willow some branches and brought them to this country. Transplanting them they began to grow. From one of these a branch was taken and set out about two rods from this well. Growing rapidly, it became in the course of years a large, beautiful and graceful tree. To the surprise of the family, one summer season, the well failed for the first time in its known history. On making investigation, there was found at the bottom of the well a perfect wreath, as large around as the well, made of the fine rootlets from the willow tree; this wreath was taken out and the tree cut down.

The large red house opposite the Canfield or Booth place, is the oldest looking landmark in the vicinity. Having two stories in front and one in the rear, it stands on the crown of the hill, great in contrast to the buildings of modern days. It is like a monument, or memorial of the past. Formerly it was occupied by Hiram Upson, but later Samuel Canfield became the owner of it.

Like Capt. Bradford Steele, Hiram Upson occupied many houses making it difficult to trace him in his wanderings.

In 1847 Upson built the house on the corner of Cedar and Church Sts., now the summer home of Dr. H. D. Northrop, and his two sons helped to build the house. Still later Upson moved to the old Miles homestead on the Bungay road a mile above, now the home of Clark Chatfield.

In 1791 Isaac Baldwin had a mill at the mouth of Little River, and a house on the flat below the little iron bridge, and just south of the river at the foot of the Rimmon road. It was in this house that the Methodists held their meetings some year after 1790. At the time of one of their meetings, some of the young fellows got a ladder and covered the chimney, thereby smoking out the devoted worshipers. In after years, the good people thought that the judgment of God was upon those young men, because they all died in the prime of life.

It appears that Hiram Upson began his local career at this place. Though the Baldwin house was burned down, Upson built another on the same foundation, which is still standing, the story and a half house, with a two story addition on the north of it.

Returning to West street, next to the Dr. Johnson place, there stands on the bank above the road a long, low one story house, with little convenience in the arrangement of rooms, once occupied by one of the Humphreys, probably William or John, who was in the office of the T. Vose and Co. It has long been known as the Reynolds' place, but now owned by Hildebrand. Another old well used in early times is to be found north near the south line of Geo. E. Matthies' place. Up the hill from the well stood the large old house two stories in front and one in rear, where once lived Theophilus Miles, 2nd.

After crossing the little brook the road turns to the left and here stands the house known for many years as the Bell place.

Smith Botsford sold this place to Horace Hurd, who built over the small one story house into a good size two story dwelling in 1847, making it very attractive in its best days. At one time this was used as the Episcopal parsonage. Directly opposite is the Warren French home, son to Walter, and the only house in the vicinity shingled on the sides.

Passing the Swift place, already described, there stands nearly opposite the old Walter French house, called by Mrs. Stephens, the French Mansion. This was built after 1812, Walter French being the first to engage in the auger business in town. "Star" and John Washburn occupied this house later. An old Samuel Bassett house stands next, across the road, a large two story dwelling, facing the north, occupied by him 1814 or 1817, having the appearance of age of more than a century, having small windows, is weather beaten, neglected and now the home of the transients. In this vicinity there was a little red school house long since removed, but of note because Mrs. Ann Stephens and the children of Dr. Stoddard attended school here, and the good old spinster taught Ann how to sew, as well as to read and write. Scarcely any one remembers this school, but it stood midway between the French mansion and the saw-mill according to Ann's account. Also Edward Pritchard says the red schoolhouse stood where the road or foot path commences that goes to Swan's shops, within a few rods from the corner of the Walter French garden. If this building was moved, it now stands and is a part of the house where Mr. Beers lives opposite Trinity cemetery.

The old Pritchard place has been known in recent years by the Betts place, located on the west side of the road, on West street, the south end of Swan's reservoir being opposite. The Pritchards had a land interest in this locality, buying it from Ebenezer Johnson as early as 1740, the year that James Pritchard, Jr., was married, being the first of the several generations that lived here. In 1760 the town granted to James Pritchard the right of and use of Little River for mill purposes from the mouth up to the Fairchild place. It is not known when the Pritchard house was built. If not by Johnson, or at the time, in 1746, when James was married, it is probable that 1760 is the date when the grant was given for the use of the river. The old house was a story and a half, facing the east and looking down upon the sawmill and river.

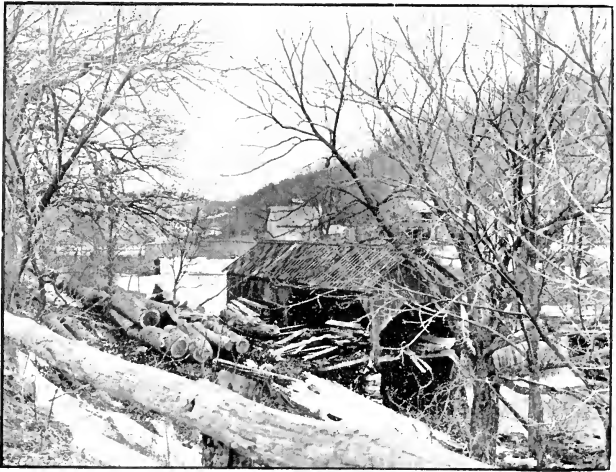

Following James Pritchard was his son Jabez, who married Emice Botsford Oct. 31, 1764, and his son Leverett was born Sept. 16, 1765, who spent his whole life on or near the homestead; his son Jabez E. was born there, and his son Edward Pritchard was also born there May 24, 1830. B. Steele, Jr., and Jabez enlisted for the war July, 1777, and were taken prisoners near Fort Independence while aiding a wounded companion.

Falling into the hands of his inhuman captors, Jabez survived but a short time after being taken to the prison ship in North River. Before his death he gave his money to aid others, and especially Bradford Steele, Jr., who used some of this for provisions which preserved his life until released; then he was scarcely strong enough to get home. However, he recovered, and lived a very useful life, and his name is revered even to this day. He was deacon of the Congregational church. He died at his old home on the New Haven road in 1841, aged 80, and was buried in the old Congregational yard.

In 1847 Isaac Lindley built a new house a little south of the old Pritchard house, but the old Pritchard house remained standing until 1866, when Richard Aspden tore it down, and, using old lumber, built a house for himself, now standing, the first house west of the old Bell place. To the past generation, the new house on the Pritchard place has been known as the Betts place. In March, 1901, this passed into the possession of V. A. Page of Derby. The property is situated between the Bungay road and West street and comprises about fifty acres of land, upon which is erected a dwelling house and a large barn.

The location of the old Pritchard home is still indicated by the high hollow mound just a little north, which now remains as a monument of the past, and which is crowned by a living memorial, in the shape of an ancient looking lilac bush, the silent sentinel, still guarding over the sacred memories of the old Pritchard homestead. The lilac bush is often the only living remnant which now marks the location and ruins of the habitations of some of the noted families of New England. The lilacs once planted by gentle hands are still growing by the foundation of the old homesteads, and sometimes are even overshadowed by the later growth of forest trees, while the hands that planted them have long been at rest.

The old Pritchard saw-mill and the Pritchard farm house were opposite each other, the mill being close by the river and lower than the main road. Josiah Washburn was an early owner of this mill, and conducted a large lumber business. At intervals for more than a century the old saw has furnished music for the neighborhood, the last work being done in 1898, which was the sawing of large whitewood logs by Mr. George Wakeley. The second year following, the mill was dismantled, leaving only the stone work. Standing by the side of the falls and beneath the large overhanging trees, and together with the surroundings, this mill made a fine picture of a New England industry, that is fast passing away. These monuments of ruins and departed days speak the silent lessons of the story of life.

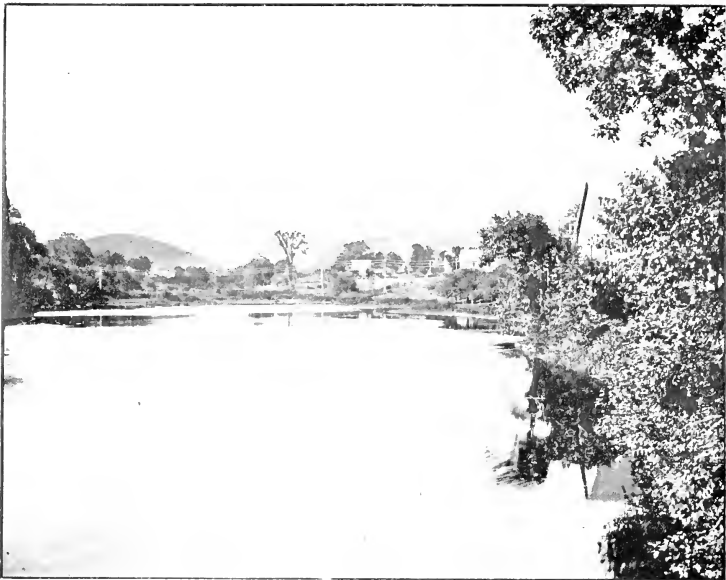

This old sawmill was first owned by the Pritchards, second by Josiah Washburn, then by "Star" or Sterling Washburn, who gave it to his daughter, Mrs. Osborn, then bought by John Washburn about 1865. James Swan bought the property in 1868, and in 1875 it was built over and leased to E. L. Hoadley who occupied it for 20 years, the last work being done there in 1898. It was torn down in 1899.

The second house above the Hoadley bridge was formerly the residence of Gen. Clark Wooster, now the home of Frederick Beecher. An old landmark, to many of the people of two generations ago, is still standing a little back in the lot in the appearance of a shop. This was used in its earlier days as a store, and the old fashioned "wet goods" were also kept and sold in such quantities, that the saying went abroad, that "more liquor including cider brandy was sold there than there was water in Little River."

In those days cider brandy was a common drink, sold at 3 cents a glass and some of the patrons ran up such bills at this store, their accounts being kept on the wall, "chalked down" so they could be seen by all. In recording those drinks, a large piece of chalk was so cut and so used, as make two marks—two drinks—instead of one.

Little river winds among the hills, and where the valley is narrow there have been many mills, but the rich meadows invited the pioneers as early as 1731. Up this valley runs the Oxford turnpike, which was chartered 1795, being one of the oldest turnpikes in the state, and a much traveled road. A number of old houses are still to be seen, and there is one still standing on the corner of the Oxford road and the lane leading to the S. W. Buckingham slaughter house, a medium size one story and a half dwelling, rudely furnished, but pleasant in location, and rural-like, because of the many large maple trees growing near. The house was built by Philo Holbrook, one of the Holbrooks who came from the old "hive," the son of Capt. John, Jr. Philo was married to Ann Wooster, June 3, 1779. She was long known as "Aunt Annis." It is probable the house was soon occupied after this marriage. Abijah, one of their sons, lived at the place on the Great Hill road, now the home of Mrs. John Church and sons.

VIEW OF LITTLE RIVER.

The home of Eugene Wyant is in the open field. Its location is on the rise of ground across the Little river more than 20 rods east of the highway or turnpike, and, with the bridge, trees, buildings and their surroundings, this little home makes a picture more like some of the European dwellings among the hills of Switzerland. The low lying roof forms the covering to the south veranda, while the veranda also extends around the west side, making the house appear broad and low. This is called the "Woodside dairy farm." The house was built by Ebenezer Johnson, who was married 1814. Immediately following their marriage they lived in the Wooster place until the barn was finished; then they lived in the barn until the house could be occupied, in 1815.

EUGENE WYANT'S HOUSE.

This family has in its possession a relic of much interest handed down from the time of the Indians; it is a large, heavy cane carried by one of the pioneer Johnsons. Having this cane in hand one evening while returning home, he discovered an Indian following him with noiseless step and tomahawk in hand. In the dim light the anxious man quickened his steps thinking what was best to do. The Indian followed with similar pace nearer and nearer to strike the fatal blow. Suddenly Johnson turned; there was the sound of a heavy blow and the Indian fell upon the autumn leaves and his spirit went to the unhappy hunting ground. This cane did the work of saving Johnson's life and now stands in the corner unconscious of its service in warlike days of the pioneer's life.

The old Wooster saw and grist mill, recent owners Sheldon Church, his son William, Edward Pritchard and Mark Lounsbury. At one time plaster was ground at the grist mill. About 1830 Washburn ("Wop") Wooster lived on the north corner of Oxford and Great Hill roads, about the date of the house. The Walter French house was occupied following him by Star Washburn and John, his son. The John Humphrey house was occupied by Dr. Kendall, Reynolds, etc.

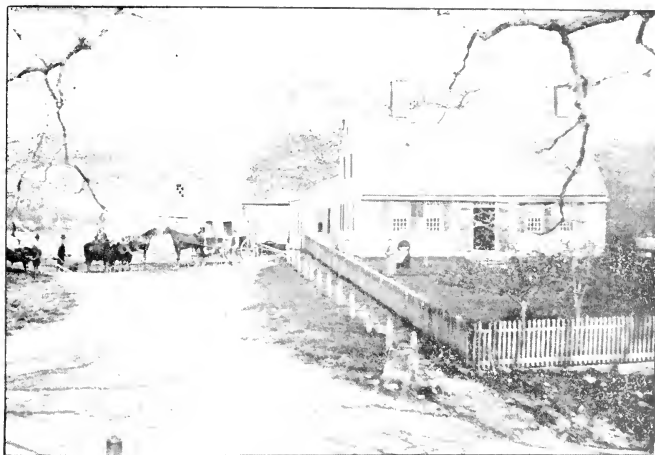

At an early date the Woosters owned land north of Chestnut Tree Hill, on Great Hill and Moose Hill which sloped eastward toward Little River. Some of these lands are mentioned in the division of the estate of Edward Wooster, I, in 1694. The selection for a dwelling was one of the best in the Little River Valley, at the north end of the long meadow, which became the home of the Woosters, John and Thomas, and others.

On Little River about two miles from the Falls there was a mill property sold in 1747. From the description and distance this is the locality near the dwelling of David C. Riggs, known in the time of the Revolution as the Capt. John Wooster tavern. The old Wooster house stood near the corner made by the main road and the Park road coming from the west. Capt. John probably came here near 1750 and for many years kept a tavern of considerable note long before the Oxford turnpike was laid out. There was a large deer park owned by the Woosters northwest of the house, covering the hilly section, and was protected by the early laws of the state. South of the tavern was a fine level meadow of many acres lying on both sides of the river.

Located near and north of the well, and a little southwest from the present house, the old house is said to have been red at first but later was yellow, a large two story dwelling facing the east and highway, the back roof long and sloping to one story. The general plan of the house differed but little from others of that date. The chimney was very large, being made of stone, with the usual fire-places including one in the basement room, the corner of the house towards the corner of the roads. In later years this was used as a cider room, and one of the old tables is still preserved. The rooms were large and a good number of them adapted for the purposes of a tavern. In the attic there was a place built for smoking hams.

This old tavern had a history, though not written. Capt. John Wooster was one of the principal men in town, being a justice of the peace.

The old house became famous because of the visit of Graham, the traitor, with his band of robbers, in March, 1780, on a cold stormy night. Here they sought food and rest, but before morning the officers disturbed them and they fled to a barn, where they remained through the day, cold and hungry, waiting for the storm to cease. Almost starving, they again sought food at the tavern as the dusk of evening came, but before getting it, the alarm of their presence was given, causing them to flee over Great Hill as already stated.

THE WOOSTER CHURCH HOUSE

Many can look back to this old house as their home, remaining in the Wooster name for several generations, other names being Smith, Stoddard, Randall and Riggs. The old tavern and home was dismantled and torn down in 1872-3, and part of the material was used to build the second house above, and some of the stone from the massive chimney was taken to build the cellar wall of the Congregational church parsonage, 1873.

In the time of the Revolution, Thomas Wooster, a brother of Capt. John, lived in the story and a half house across the road to the east, nearly opposite the Capt. John Wooster tavern, being located on the south corner made by the main road and the one leading to Rimmon Hill. This house stood a good distance back from the main road, facing the west, being pleasantly located on a natural rise of ground several feet high, and much larger than the usual story and a half house. Covering a large foundation, it was built on a generous plan, with high ceilings, with a large hall seven yards long, and wide in proportion, the stairs being enclosed. On each side of the front door, there was a large hall window. The south front room was the barroom, and later used as the parlor. Among the four rooms on the ground floor, the largest was the sitting room, directly back of the hall, which was also seven yards long, containing the big fireplace and oven, which would indicate that this room was at first intended for the living room and kitchen as well as the dining room, and was extensively used in the busy tavern days. The growing demand led to the building of a large ell on the northeast corner, containing the dining room, kitchen, etc. In the angle of the back yard made by the ell and house, there stood a large sweet apple tree and the well, and all about the ground was paved with stones. Later occupants were Sheldon Church, followed by his son Henry and family. At the time of the fire the house was rented.

This was probably at first a red house, but in its latest period when white, it had the look of many years service. Afterward it was burned in August, 1894, and with it a number of valuable pieces of antique furniture. The old chimney stood complete for a long time, and now crumbling, becomes the monument of former days and places, telling of a history, even though without inscriptions.

Along Little River southward extends a fine meadow for a quarter of a mile. About half way down this meadow on a rise of ground east of the highway there stands one of the stately homes of more than a century ago. Here lived the Washburns for many years, they being early comers into this fertile region. Just inside the fence there is an earth terrace, the house standing back several rods. The entrances are by two gates more than twenty rods apart, the driveway making a semicircle to the back of the house and to the barns. Scarcely could a better location be found. At the north gate there stands a massive elm tree with very large branches, and of great age, which served in colonial times and before as the boundary between the Indians of Chusetown and those of Woodbury. About the house are maples planted in the early part of the century, adding much to the beauty of the surroundings. At the present time the appearance is not only that of quiet but of loneliness, as if commanding reserved solitude. Nevertheless, this place has a history dating back to the middle of the preceding century.

THE WASHBURN HOMESTEAD.

The Washburns were among the early comers, there having been at least four generations living on this place, Josiah, 1st, Josiah, Jr., Staples, and his children still living there, Catherine, or Mrs. Rose, and Seth S. Washburn.

The first house was very small, with one story and attic, containing but one room below with pantry and cupboard, and one of these was under the stairs. The way into the cellar was down stone steps, made from the stone gathered from the fields, very rough and uneven. When there was need of extra rooms, blankets were hung up for partitions. To this little house there were three outside doors. The second house is now standing, a story and a half, probably built before the Revolution, and many signs of age are to be seen in the architecture and hand-wrought iron hinges, latches and the like. The large fire-places have been bricked up. Differing from most houses, the corner is toward the street, and the principal living room is on the south side, receiving the direct sunlight all day. In this respect there could be no improvement.

About the time of opening the Oxford turnpike, 1794-5, New Haven was building the long wharf so as to make the city a port of entry, and soon after there was a large trade for many miles around, and much of it came over the Oxford turnpike, passing the Washburn place. The distance favored the establishment of a tavern, so a large addition was built, —in fact a separate house set at the same angle as the old one, the corners meeting. The new one was built on the southeast corner of the old.

Josiah Washburn, Jr., was of age to be married, and on account of opposition, he "stepped out" (ran away) and was married on Long Island May 4, 1793, to Catharine Smith, then 20 years of age. This smart young woman figures largely in the success of the tavern during the years when so many travelers and teamsters put up at the tavern in going and returning from New Haven. As the house was large, now containing 17 rooms, nine below and eight above, many could be accommodated at one time.

In those days a tavern was not complete without a bar, nor was this large estate complete without a cider-brandy mill. Cider-brandy sold at this tavern at six cents a glass. For the most part the teamsters brought their lunch, and sitting at the table ordered tea, which was the only article of food furnished for the table; so also the feed for the horses was carried by the drivers. The unwritten history of this old tavern would furnish material for an interesting story, if the facts could be gathered.

The large new house was built in the best style, with plank siding to make it warm and strong. The rooms were large, facing the south, one on each corner, the front door, hall, and stairs being between. In addition to the great chimney and fireplaces. These rooms have low ceilings, but are exceedingly pleasant, looking out upon the gentle slope of the lawn to the bridge and Little River, and off to the hills.

Back of the front rooms was the bar room, extending the length of the house, making another pleasant room, the bar proper being at the east end and somewhat secluded by a little partition. The work on these rooms was of the best order. In the bar-room there was a long mantle above the great fireplace, and above the mantel it was finished in woodwork something like a large panel painted in a dark brown, and grained by the painter in a most artistic way, still remaining in its original form. In the east front room, there is a handsome corner closet decorated with fancy woodwork as is the rest of the room. Above the mantels also of these rooms it is finished in wood. The entrance to the bar-room is principally through a large door on the west side, a door which is set in about four feet, having little windows at the sides. In its present state this room is very pleasant.

The large ball room is above, where history has been made, but not written. In the height of the season, this room was fitted out with several cord bedsteads to accommodate a goodly number. On one occasion the house was full and among those assigned to this room was a young man of large and powerful proportions, who purposed not to have the night pass without some fun. No one thought it a wise thing to lay hands on the young giant, so he had the first fun in his own way. When all was quiet, he placed himself beneath the cord bedstead where two were quietly sleeping and suddenly rising to his feet spilled out the astonished occupants, shaking the house in so doing.

It might be mentioned here that several names were given to the lady of the house and one of them was "Tury," also called "Aunt Tury," the house being known as "Aunt Tury's Tavern."

After this disturbance, Aunt Tury was on hand to learn the cause, and as no one ventured to punish the giant she gave emphatic warning that there should be no repetition of any such disturbance. Soon all was quiet and all heavy in sleep, when suddenly two other occupants found themselves rising in air to fall to the floor, and the house again resounded from the shock. Aunt Tury grasped a heavy horse whip and ascended to the scene of action, driving the young giant about the room under the heavy blows of the whip, until she felt satisfied that he was justly punished. Then was the time for the others to have their fun, for they would certainly tell that Aunt Tury gave him a horsewhipping if he didn't "treat," a thing which he was glad to do to stop their mouths. Still taking advantage because of the second episode, he must treat again or else they would tell.

Aunt Tury was equal to all emergencies during those rough times and among rough men. She prospered, and the bag of silver grew in weight, as also did the bag of gold, until a little fortune had been secreted away in the hiding place. But such things are too often disturbed. There was a young negro at the tavern, who served on many occasions, also acting as the colored coachman. During some busy time, he saw Aunt Tury hasten to change some money, and while unobserved himself, he learned the way to the secret chamber of gold.

Soon it was missing. This was an emergency requiring some judicious acting to find out the thief and catch him before he was gone. Knowing the fondness which the colored boy had for pie, she made a fine pie with a good dose of jalap in it, for she mistrusted him. Soon he was very sick. But still to keep him within her control, some strong tea was prepared with more jalap. This brought him to the condition requiring the presence of the doctor and soon Dr. Stoddard was present. "What have you been doing to get so sick as this?" said the doctor, "You must have done something very bad!"

Having been informed of the case, he quickly ordered more tea—containing more jalap, for this was one of the favorite articles used by him. Becoming very sick, the colored boy began to get frightened. Seeing this the doctor said, "You are very sick—dangerous! You haven't long to live! You have done something! If you have anything to say, you must say it quick, for you can't live more than two hours!" After a moments thought, out came the confession, "I took the money." "Money! where did you hide it?" "Under the sill in the horse barn," was the faint reply. Hastening to the hiding place, the large bag of gold was brought forth safely; and from that hour the boy rapidly recovered.

Rimmon Hill is an elevation of 400 feet nearly two miles long, be-the Naugatuck and Little rivers. The land for the most part is well adapted for agriculture. Near the northern portion there are three old homes which belonged to the first settlers. Back a little west of the highways is a house in the last stage of service, long used for storehouse and shed. More than 300 broad acres stretch out over this region sloping to the east and northwest, now one of the best farms in the region of miles around. The house is a large two story dwelling, with long sloping roof to the north. The house was well finished, having a corner closet for the better household utensils. The old stone chimney to the very top bears witness of its age.

The earliest names now to be found are those of Clark and Edwin Hine. The family of William Clark is associated with this homestead. William was married about 1774 and his oldest daughter Eunice became in 1804 the wife of Dr. Stoddard.

In later years Sheldon Sanford kept house here while building a new house on the corner a few rods east. He was the last to occupy the old dwelling. The property now belongs to Albert Carrington. During the best days in a single year, 1870, $3,000 worth of cattle were sold from this estate. Near the corner stands a famous chestnut tree 26 feet in circumference, having increased three feet in 30 years. It is a fine specimen of a chestnut, with wide spreading branches, and still growing.

ONE OF THE OLDEST TREES IN SEYMOUR.

About an eighth of a mile on the eastward slope from this chestnut tree in the open field, there is a barn which marks the location of an old homestead, occupied last by Philo Sanford, the father of Sheldon, the house being destroyed by fire. Philo Sanford bought this place of Levi Riggs; the Riggs family was one of the first settlers in this region and towards Pinesbridge.

From the Carrington place and the old chestnut tree, going south, the first house is another of the old houses referred to as still standing on Rimmon, and the other is nearly opposite towards the south.

The one on the west side of the road was known a century ago as the Pangman place, the name Nathan Pangman appearing on the tax list of 1792.

This was probably occupied a generation before. At a later day, one by the name of Booth lived there. The house stands on a little elevation near the road, facing south, two stories, the roof in the rear sloping down to one low story, and the sides are shingled. Rising above the roof is the stone chimney. Sloping westward is the farm land of many acres.

On the other side of the road, there was at first an humble dwelling of small proportions, very rude in its structure, and evidently put together with unskilled hands. The living room speaks of many years ago. Scarcely is there anything at right angles; the doors do not fit; great cracks can be seen everywhere. Most of this room is finished in wood. Across one corner is a partition which makes a sleeping room. Through the many cracks the wind whistles and groans.

This was the little house bought or built by Mr. Simeon Wheeler, by whose name it is still known, being owned at present by Burr Howard. Lyman Wheeler built a substantial addition, two generations ago, making an excellent home. From this side of the road the land slopes toward the rising sun until it meets the Naugatuck River.

The views from this high road of 400 feet are fine and varied. On the southeast part of this hill, there was during the last century (18th) a road winding down to the ford extending northeast until it met the New Haven road on Beacon brook. This road has not been used for more than 100 years. However, by the side of this deserted way, there was a little cemetery, first occupied 1763, and having been deserted for more than 100 years, no one having been buried there since 1795. It is located about a mile above the R. R. station on the high bluff west of the track a few rods back in a perfect wilderness. Many of the stones were broken by boys and the falling of the first growth of trees, and now overshadowed by the half-grown second growth. The "deserted village" of the poet tells one story, and this little deserted cemetery tells another. It is said that one of the Brewster family of the Mayflower has been given a resting place in this solitude, calling to mind the burial place in the wilderness of the new world on Cole's Hill at Plymouth during the winter of 1621.

In the deserted burying ground on Rimmon Hill, there were seven gravestones with the following inscriptions; which are taken from W. C. Sharpe's History of Seymour, the original descriptions being now almost indecipherable.

Susanna, wife of Lieut. Thomas Clark, died Apr. 1, 1768, aged 29 years.

Phoebe, wife of David Johnson, Aug. 6, 1777, in the 47th year of her age.

In memory of Joseph Riggs, son of Mr. Joseph and Mistress Anna Riggs, who departed this life March 22, 1794, in the 8th year of his age.

Joseph Riggs died Mar. 19, 1791, in the 38th year of his age, who was a pattern of industry, a friend to virtue, and a pillar of society.

In memory of David Johnson Riggs, son of Mr. Joseph and Mistress Anna Riggs, who departed this life March 24th, 1794, in the 15th year of his age.

In memory of Mrs. Sarah, relict of Mr. Benajah Johnson, who departed this life May 7, 1773, aged 72 years.

Thomas Clark, died Oct. 11, 1797, aged 33 years.

Col. Ebenezer Johnson gave to his son Timothy land at Pinesbridge, located on the east side of the Naugatuck river, and upon it Timothy built a house about 1725, the house being located south-east of where Mr. Jones now lives on the old road, near the orchard. The other son of Ebenezer, Charles, received the land located on west side of the Naugatuck river just below the ford. Some of this land is still in the family.

Pinesbridge was the locality two miles north of the Falls where the Johnsons bought land previous to 1700 of the Indians, and came here to settle about 1720. A little red house still stands on the hill above the road on the east side which was the home of Alexander Johnson, the son of Timothy and Abigail Brewster, a descendant of Elder Wm. Brewster of the Mayflower, who were married in 1725. Alexander was born 1730 and married Dec. 30, 1755, which date represents nearly the date of the house. It is probable that Timothy did not live there, but rather south near the ford of the river, below the pines and cemetery. Alexander gave the ground for the cemetery near 1795, after which the old cemetery on Rimmon road was deserted. The great white pines add beauty to this solemn place. The first burial was that of Timothy Johnson, July 23, 1794. Alexander Johnson was also buried here. He died Sept. 8, 1817, aged 87 years.

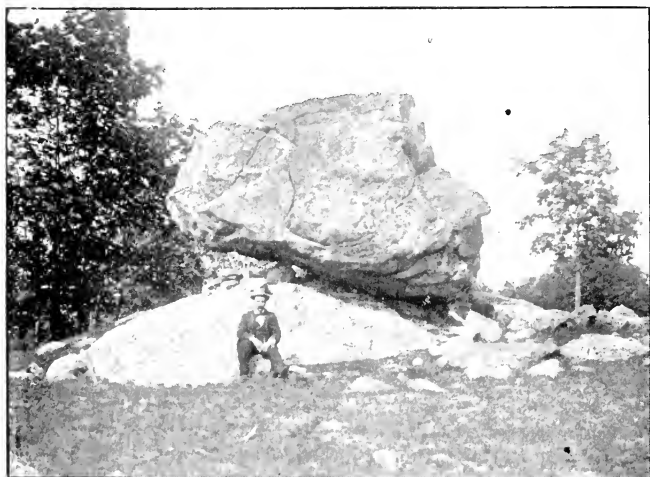

It is said that Alexander was very much troubled by the wild beasts coming down from Rock Rimmon to the injury of crops and flocks. In connection with the history of the Indian Chuse, there was mentioned as the most famous hunters among the whites the names of Alexander Johnson and Gideon Washburn.

FIRE-PLACE IN HOUSE OF ALEXANDER JOHNSON.

The little red house has but few rooms, including the small hall, facing the west. The south room contains a medium sized fireplace with a large flat stone in the back, —a stone as taken from the fields, giving the fireplace an artistic and primitive appearance. The view across the valley is a sightly one, and the house with the hill for a background reminds one of the pictures of a Swiss cottage. In the rear of the house is a little porch set back under the roof with stone floor. As every house has a spirit about it, so this one has, giving one the feeling that it is better to be absent than to be present.

ROCK ON BUNGAY.

The great rock on Bungay is on the estate of Robert Healey, northwest of his house. This estate formerly covered a large tract of land, more than a century ago, belonging to Abner Tibbals, who was a school teacher and farmer. In 1794 Abraham Bassett bought the estate, and three generations of Bassetts lived upon it. In 1816, 59 acres located on West street were given to his son Samuel. In 1874 Robert Healey became owner. Glover Bassett raised the old house making two stories, three generations ago.

On going up the Bungay road more than a mile westward from the Falls there is a rise of 400 ft., the views eastward being of the finest and most varied for a country road. This was the locality of several of the early families, the Canfields, Botsfords, and Miles. The region was a part of the Camps Mortgage, and when it was divided among the proprietors March 12, 1702, section No. 10 was set off to the Widow Miles, wife of Samuel, the land extending from the Bungay road to the Naugatuck river. Jonathan, son of Widow Miles, built a house on this land about 1724, and left two sons, Theophilus born Feb. 11, 1730, and Jonathan 2nd, born 1745. Theophilus had a son born Nov. 27, 1778, who married Freelove Nettleton and had six children, Mary Jennett, who married Isaac Botsford; Clark; Lucretia, who married Jabez Pritchard; John; Sarah, who married Judson Canfield, and Sheldon Miles, now living in an octagonal house which he built in 1855 on the southern slope of the ancestral lands.

OLD MILES HOMESTEAD

The Miles house now standing was built about 1768, a large, square, two story house, facing the west, with foundation 32x40 feet. The square stone chimney 12x13 feet foundation rises above the roof; the house is red, and homelike in its appearance. The fireplaces are of the generous size, and many have been the occasions when the family circle gathered about the flickering fire. Seven generations have come to the shelter of this old homestead and have gone forth again, and now the name Clark-Chatfield designates the old place. The ancient surroundings invite one's attention, as the great high stone posts for the gates to swing upon, the old stone walls covered with moss and age. The next house south was also an old Miles homestead, said to have been Jonathan Miles', 2nd, a small red house.

Some distance south, on the east of the road, on the crown of the hill, there stands a small red house known as the Isaac Botsford place, built by Clark Botsford 1816, with a little veranda set into the corner, covered by the main roof. Lovers of nature pause to take a view of the broad landscape from the crown of this hill, - a view that lingers in memory.

THE SAMUEL BOTSFORD HOMESTEAD. FRONT VIEW.

Near by is the Bungay school where many generations of the boys and girls began their distinguished career. This was the locality decided to Joseph Canfield in 1747, two houses near by have held families by the Canfield name. At the Canfield homestead, Sheldon Miles when a boy was thrown into the well by the breaking of the well-sweep. The water was deep, and he was not injured. He is now living, 84 years of age, this year 1901. The old homestead stood second from the schoolhouse, on the east side of the road, a large house facing the south, two stories in front, one in rear, after the style of the early houses and very similar to the Samuel Botsford house as illustrated in another place. This location has been chosen for a summer residence because of good air and wonderful natural beauty.

Judson Canfield built the new house a little north of the old one, a pleasant two story house. Joseph of a recent generation lived in the little old one story house on the corner south of the Bungay schoolhouse, now the home of T. Brennan.

THE SAMUEL BOTSFORD HOMESTEAD, REAR VIEW.

Because of the familiar name of Botsford, there will be much interest taken in a view of the old Samuel Botsford homestead, and its history. Located on the southern slope down the Bungay road from the old Canfield place, the first house on the west side, facing the east, two stories, and one on the west, the roof sloping very low to the height of the door. A few rods below runs a little brook. All about there are marks of an old homestead, as the old well-sweep and the well-curb itself, the great maples and the stone walls, the old swing gate balanced on a post and the old flags growing but a little distance back. On the first floor there are six finished rooms, around a very large stone chimney, all stone to the very top. Differing from many of the ancient homes, all the second and third stories are combined in one room, in appearance like a great barn loft like a scaffold, reached by a wide ladder. Here the chimney is very large with a single fire place on the south side. There was no attempt to finish off this upper story, that still remains in its primitive state with the plank lining, or siding, left rough and very irregular, a most realistic illustration of how the people lived in early times. A generation or so ago, one little room, including a single window, has been done off from the great attic.

A generation ago, the house was said to have been 150 years old, or at the present time about 175 years old, one of the oldest in the town. This would be about the date of the marriage of Samuel Botsford, which was in 1726. The same year that Samuel Botsford was married, he received from his father, Samuel, of Milford, 80 acres of land in the Camp's Mortgage Purchase. Before this John Prindle owned land on Bungay and sold to Samuel Botsford, June 29, 1722. (John Prindle was in Derby as early as 1677.) This same tract Samuel Botsford 1st sold to his son Samuel, 80 acres of land bounded south by the common land, east by the highway, north by Abiram Canfield, west with the high way. This sale took place Dec. 31, 1726.

Evidently Samuel, son of Samuel, was the one who first occupied this estate. Nehemiah, son of Samuel, left this house to his wife for life then to his daughters. Asa Cooper, marrying one of the daughters, bought the rights of the others. Still later an Andrews entered the family, and at present the old homestead is occupied by George Andrews and his sister, Mrs. Adelaide Williamson.

Another house belonging to this Botsford family was occupied by Nehemiah Botsford, doubtless having been built on the original estate. This was a small one story house southward below the brook, once an old looking house, but in recent years the large chimney has been removed, a new one built, and the rooms have been changed, now belonging to the Water Co. The first Nehemiah Botsford was married in 1766. His son Nehemiah was a man sensitive to religious impressions, and one day while in the field he heard a clear voice speaking to him, saying, "It is high time to awake out of sleep!" As there was no one to be seen, he regarded this message as a divine warning. From that day he was a different man. Becoming interested in religion, he was converted and lived a better life. He was chosen deacon in the Congregational church, serving well for many years, and to this date he is spoken of as Deacon Nehemiah Botsford, a true prophet in his Christian faith, died 1842, age 65. This was also the home of his daughter, Maria Botsford. Abram Collins married Sarah, the daughter of Nehemiah Botsford, and lived in this little house. That region seemed to be one where strange voices were heard, for Abram Collins had a similar experience to that of Nehemiah Botsford, for while returning to his home one day, he also heard a voice above his head, "Abram! Swear not at all!" It is said that he obeyed the summons, and ceased swearing from that day.

On leaving the Bungay road, either at the old Miles place, or the Bungay schoolhouse, and going westward towards the Great Hill schoolhouse, there is an old homestead located on the second four corners, facing the west, a small story and a half house, with a large two story addition on the south. The old stone chimney stands in contrast with the new. Ezra Botsford built the small house about 100 years ago and raised a large family. This family of Botsfords were large people, more than six feet in height, and some of the men weighed 300 pounds. As a matter of fact, in the early history, there were many large and strong men who were grown up on Great Hill. This was later the home of Timothy Scofield, who was a great singer; and still later the home of Cyrus Botsford, who raised a large family of seventeen children. Cyrus was a music teacher and chorister, being thus engaged as early as 1810.

This little home was the place of large activities, and this little hive has swarmed again and again. For many years the interior of this house was not finished off, according to modern ideas, or the modern term, but remained in its rough and primitive appearance until within a half a century. In recent years, this has been known as the home of Marcus Davis, who had many sons and daughters to gladden the old homestead. Under his wise management, the place was improved, the new two story addition was built, thus combining the ancient and modern home. The new part was built in 1873. A few rods just across the four corners, there is another old landmark of a well still in use. Marcus Davis still occupies this home in his old age, at the opening of the twentieth century. He was born in the old Davis homestead, located on the Davis corners towards the schoolhouse.

But before describing that locality, it is well to point out two or three Botsford homes located on the road north of the Marcus Davis place. One of these was the home of Curtis Botsford, known as "Curt," built in 1787, now the home of Edward Shay. These houses are some distance apart, and one of them was occupied later by a Hawkins family. Another Hawkins family early occupied the place where now lives Hildebrand, and where many years ago there was found in an old deserted oven, an account book, that was used at Derby dock in 1760; this was a large book, now in possession of John Riggs. This Hawkins-Hildebrand place is north on the mountain road that joins the Oxford road at the S. W. Buckingham place.

Great Hill was early the most important part of town. The section was purchased from the Indians in 1670, but in 1702 much of it was included in the Camps' mortgage, which was divided up soon after this date. There is a fragment of history, stating that "Jonas Tomlinson, emigrant, settled on Great Hill about 1680. He had two sons, Jonas and Agur." Samuel Bassett has generally been regarded as the first to settle on his land on the south side about 1717. Previous to 1745 a road was laid out over Great Hill and Rockhouse Hill on to Woodbury. This road or path is mentioned in deeds as early as 1693. The Great Hill region covers a territory two miles east and west, and three miles north and south, the highest point being 640 feet, from which the widest views may be had of the country, hills, valleys, and the waters of the Sound.

For a hundred years there has been but little change in the general appearance of this region, for it bears the marks of New England thrift and industry, in the wide fields, long standing homes, some of which are small, and others large and stately, indicating the stability of the period of prosperity. However, the great changes are marked by the generations that have gone, declining of the farming industry, and decreasing population. If anything, at present there is a reviving, by increasing activity on the farms, and especially the peach orchard of many thousand trees, under the management of M. L. Coleman. The old houses still show that much time and labor was required to build them, after the heavy timbers were prepared, and also the shingles, when the house was to be shingled on all sides.

Some of the upper rooms have never been finished off, remaining very much the same as when built. The general plan of one will serve for most of the larger houses. Two rooms in front with narrow hall and winding stairs between, the large chimney in the center, fireplaces, and the long kitchen, or living room at the rear, with a small room at one end. When the house is square, there is often an ell; but when a long sloping back roof, there is space for the smaller rooms about the living room. Some have stone chimneys to the top, as brick was not then to be had, at least not preferred. Some are shingled all over, the shingles being shaved by hand, enduring the weather beating storms for a century and a half. Now and then a huge well-sweep is still to be seen with its ancient grace in dipping up the living waters. Some of these houses are on the old stage road to Waterbury and have served as taverns in their early days.

The ancient furniture is set aside for the modern. The people themselves have been religious, loyal, patriots, contributing strength to the cause of freedom. The moss grown orchards are to be found here, sometimes in the very edge of the forests, so long have they been neglected, and also with them came the cider brandy mills which have wrought the work of error. By the side of the brook, there is still to be seen the ruin of the last of these; and another ruin caused by brandy and rum has touched some of the young men, who had not the endurance of their ancestors, the pioneers.

The Tomlinson-Beardsley-Davis-Scranton place is located on what is known as the Davis' corners on the Great Hill and Woodbury road. Being one of the best locations on Great Hill, it is doubtless one of the oldest. It may yet be learned that this was the homestead of Jonas Tomlinson who came to this region about 1680. Some time following the Revolution, Russell Tomlinson built the old house over, making a large house, and the best in all the country round about. He was called Squire Russell, and his place became one of the taverns (or stopping places) in the days of overland transportation of merchandise from the Derby landing up country to Woodbury. Evidently Squire Russell was one of the leading men in this vicinity.

About 1795 this estate passed into the hands of James Beardsley who held it for 15 or 18 years. At the beginning of the War of 1812, Anson Davis, son of Col. John, came from Oxford, and the old homestead on Chestnut-tree Hill, and took possession. Anson had a family of ten children, among whom were Rev. Sheldon, the rector, Samuel P. and Marcus. During his time, improvements and additions were made. Anson was followed by his son Samuel P. who carried on the large estate until his sudden death near the close of 1891, the place having remained in the family 80 or more years. A period of gloom overshadowed this fine homestead at the time of the death of Samuel P. and nearly all the household, several in number, including the help. The severity of the disease was intensified by typhoid fever, thought to have originated from the well. The contagion was terrible, judging from the results. However, recovering from that period of gloom, there was begun another period of sunshine and prosperity, when about 1895 the estate passed into the possession of Abraham Scranton, whose promising family may keep it in their possession for a century yet to come.

Located on the corner, this place is the most attractive of all in the region, the same as it was a century and more ago. In front there is a row of large maple trees, a neat fence, a large open yard and field to the south and east. The house faces the west and south, is very large, two stories, with a large ell on northeast corner, the well and entrance to the cellar being located in the middle on the north side. The north side looks the most ancient, but on the whole it is not an old looking house because of being so well built and well preserved. Everything about the house is of the generous order. For a great many years there were chambers that did not have the modern finish, being left unfinished like many other houses. Frequent reference is made to the large stone step at the south front door. Priest Abner Smith boarded here previous to his departure, then an old man of more than 80 years, in 1829.

As early as 1775 there was preaching in the schoolhouse at the foot of the hill towards the brook, and soon after petition was made for a separate society, which was granted, their first meeting being held on Sept. 20, 1779. This was "The Great Hill Society." The church was built in 1781, mostly by Capt. John Holbrook, who was a noble and generous man, an earnest and strong patriot, having given three sons to the American army. Capt. John was a man of great wealth, having many hundred acres, woodland, and a saw-mill. From his large resources he gathered the material and built the Great Hill meeting house on his own land. In 1786 the Rev. Abner Smith was engaged to be the pastor of this "Great Hill Society." He was titled "Priest Smith," and remained as their faithful pastor and preacher until 1829.

The old Congregational church, sometimes called the Presbyterian, was located a few rods from the Tomlinson-Davis place, across the road southward, near where the angle is to be seen in the stone wall. A part of the building stood where the road now runs. The church was a plain looking structure facing the south, shingled on all sides, without porch or spire, having three or four windows on each side, two windows on the south end, the door being in the center, with stone steps. The interior was plain and simple in its furnishings. Humble looking as this church was, for many years it was the center of interest and activity of the Great Hill and Rockhouse Hill people. Other denominations worshipped in it; the town meetings were held there every third year, and from 1830 to 1852 it was used for school purposes, at last being divided by a partition. It was dismantled and removed in 1852, much to the grief of some of the old members of the church. Some of the timbers of the church are still preserved in the barns on the Bassett place, nearest the parsonage and home of Priest Abner Smith.

The recollection of Marcus Davis brings us nearer to the old times than those of any other man living, unless it be those of Sheldon Miles, both of whom are over 80 years of age. Marcus Davis speaks of the old times when Rev. Abner Smith boarded at his father's house, then an aged man of more than eighty years. Though a little boy himself, he remembers the seasons of devotion which seemed very long to him. He speaks also of the school days of seventy years ago, the big boys and the big men; the time when the boys of twenty-five years went to school, but not having the ambition to learn. A part of the schooling then consisted in the development of muscle and mischief, and who could handle the school master or put him out of the school house.

The best teacher was the one who could keep on the inside of the schoolhouse, and the best pupil was the one who could put the teacher out. It may have been a case of a "little learning" being a dangerous thing. Yet we recognize the high attainments which some made in the line of education. One is reminded of the clans of an earlier date, while listening to the stories of the common meeting ground of the Great Hillers, Rockhouse Hillers, and the Hell Laners, with their particular traits and singular virtues. A school of sixty of these sturdy young men and girls demanded a master who was the master. It would be difficult to reproduce this "Deestriect School." Other recollections cluster about the old school, the meeting house and the great family gatherings, all of which are matters of history to the present generation. The once familiar names now have no living representative, and the thought of this brought an expression of sadness upon the face of him who has told us of these things.

Sheldon Miles relates his experience, when but a small boy. From the old homestead on the Bungay road he would walk to Great Hill to attend evening meetings, and still remembers that seventy years ago, 1830, there was a company of old men who were very active in the church, and especially in the prayer meetings, both earnest and spiritual to the profit of all.

From the old Davis homestead—now Scranton—land was taken to make another homestead, known as the Capt. Abel Holbrook place, a little distance south. The house was built by a Mr. Whitney, there being two men by that name during the period of the Revolutionary war. It appears that Capt. Abel Holbrook was a soldier in the Revolution, and in due time occupied this place, which was pleasantly located facing the west, a large two story house bearing the marks of age. On the southeast corner, there was a large addition which made the house quite spacious, and, like many old homes on this road within a mile, this was used as a tavern. Its general appearance is stately, large, and spacious, being overshadowed by several large cherry trees. The general plan and rooms are very much like those described. Some distance from the road and north of the house, there is a well and a fine old well-sweep, which makes one of the finest pictures of its kind having the orchard for a back ground. The barns are across the highway westward. This Holbrook family represented one of the swarms which came from the old Holbrook "hive," that will be mentioned later.

THE CAPT. ABEL HOLBROOK HOUSE.

Still going south, the first old red one story house on the right is worthy of mention because of its age, and being hidden among the low lying branches of the trees. About a hundred and fifty years ago this was a Bassett place.

Our interest is now turned to the old parsonage built in 1788, a little distance below, the home of Priest Abner Smith, the pastor of the Congregational church 1786-1829. Beautiful for situation, it is located on the highest point of Great Hill, on the west side of the highway, facing east, a good sized gambrel roofed house in good repair, and well preserved, now the home of J. W. Tomlinson. In front stand the old cherry trees, and the big swing gate, balanced on a post, guarding the entrance on the south. The north upper room was used for a study by the parson, and the book case is still in place under the gambrel roof. In the front north room, another reminder of former days may be seen, the old corner closet, where were kept the liquid refreshments, which was thought at that time to be one of the social necessities. It is said that the parson suffered a little because of this custom, due to the social generosity of his people, especially on those days when he made a great many calls. These visits to his scattered congregation he made on horseback, and was always able to return in the same manner that he went.

MOSES FANTON-BENDIAM HOUSE.

From this place extensive farms cover the southern slope embracing homesteads of other families, that have had a large part in the affairs of Great Hill. The wide landscape reaches out until it meets the Sound and the ships, seen from afar.

From the Davis-Scranton corners, the road extends west and northward. Near this turn is another corner, where the latest and present schoolhouse is situated, being finished about Jan. 1, 1878. This a neat and pleasant building, where few are taught as compared to the most prosperous days of the people.

CHAIRS OF RECTOR SMITH AND COMMUNION SERVICE.

One cannot fail to observe the picturesque and conspicuous house just west of the schoolhouse, on a rise of ground, as the hill begins to slope westward and north. Pleasant beyond expectation, the house is large, two stories, facing the east and south, shingled on all sides, and well preserved. This is known as the Moses Fenton place, the house being built by him in 1781. The present owners are twin brothers, Julius H. and Junius N. Benham, who are now old men. These are the brothers who lived where the RECORD office now is. The Benham brothers have in their keeping the old communion service used by the Episcopal people on Great Hill in the early history of that church, and also several chairs that formerly belonged to Rector Smith, some seventy years ago.

From the present schoolhouse northward there is a long hill, near the foot of which there is another locality of much interest, because of the meeting of the four roads, the Great Hill road over which we have gone, the Hell Lane road from the north, the Rockhouse Hill road that extends west over the hill towards Woodbury, and the Squantuck road from the Housatonic river and Squantuck section. Three interests have been centered here, namely, the Methodist church, the tavern, and school.

Considering the youngest institution first, the Methodist church, we recall that this region was one of the first strongholds for Methodism in Connecticut, beginning soon after 1790. They had no church of their own until their present church was built and dedicated Oct. 25, 1854, being still in use. Besides the work given the cost was $880.

THE TAVERN.—Somewhere near the corner of the meeting of the roads near the present M. E. church there was a house kept by Capt. Gillett, a tavern, road house, and hotel, all combined, where were entertained a great many people, and in the order of events the place became known as the "Hell House." Following events led to the name of one of the roads as Hell Lane, extending northward past the Holbrook, and west by the Gunn and Nettleton places. The exact location of this famous house has disappeared and is not known.

THE SCHOOL.—The first and oldest schoolhouse stood about opposite the M. E. church, where the barn stands on the Treat place. Mention of this school is made as early as 1766. The Great Hill school had sixty scholars, big fellows, in the early times, it being the custom then, of attending school winters until twenty-five years of age. Little learning was one quality in the school life, and the best scholar was the one who could put out the teacher and the best teacher was the one who would not be put out. This was the meeting place of the Great Hillers, six-footers, and the Hell Laners, who lived in the valleys where the brandy mills were, and the Rockhouse Hillers, who, like the historic Lot, pitched their tents towards the valley; and the Squantuckites from the river. In 1830 there was an exciting discussion about schoolhouse privileges. As a result of this discussion the church for a time was used for school purposes. About the same time the schoolhouse was built at the foot of the hill, near the M. E. church, now used for a horse shed.

There were numerous cider brandy mills in the valley of this Four-Mile Brook and the region about, one of the last being located near the brook west of the M. E. church, on the north side of the road. This continued in operation until 1888, when it finished business and closed up; the foundation is still to be seen. The one near the Gann-Nettleton place, on "Tite's Corners," was closed up about 1865, and now there is nothing to mark its location.

TOMLINSON HOUSE.

Notwithstanding this old time brandy business there were many noted families and names connected with this local history, and some of these were on the Squantuck road and along the Housatonic river, besides an old mill, and a road house of considerable fame. But this region is now more closely related to Derby.

Rockhose Hill, sometimes called Rocker's Hill, rises westward from the Four-Mile Brook to the height of 590 feet, and, together with the encircling hills north and east, forms a great basin, or hopper, with here and there an old farm house adjoining an extensive farm. From these encircling hills the views are beautiful, even grand. On the very summit of Rockhouse Hill there stands an old house south from the road and some distance back, facing the north.

The house is two stories in front, with roof sloping back to one, with a very large chimney. On the north and east there is a terrace, with the old time cherry trees to make the place more ancient looking. The entrance to the cellar is on the east terrace.

Like some other old houses, this one has a spirit peculiar to itself, impressing one while wandering through the unfinished rooms, for only one, the front room, has been finished, painted and papered. This looks out upon the road and the wild scenery beyond, down into the valley and beyond in stretches of beauty.

The other rooms appear in their rude, unfinished state, with no ceiling but the timbers and floor above. This house is without a hall. The cold of winter must have found free access through many thin places and cracks to the outer world. A feeling of primitive simplicity comes to one while looking into these rooms where a stove never stood, yet where many have lived and slept the sleep of the just.

The kitchen occupies the center of the back part, with a fireplace about ten feet across and near four feet deep, having two huge ovens directly back, one each side of the fire, about four feet apart. The fireplace has been described to be large enough to roast an ox in it. Doubtless with this great chimney heated, the house would feel a little less like winter.

One peculiar thing about the house differs from all others known is the way to the upper story; instead of stairs of wood there are stone steps made of long stone laid into and supported by the chimney. It is very uncommon to have stone steps to the attic. Among other attractive things a few years ago were several pieces of ancient furniture, not then discovered by the antique "hunter." This old home, known in more recent years as the Truman Tomlinson place, has sheltered one of the best families in New England, and doubtless some in the cities, who have spent their youth here, look back in fond recollection of those sacred memories that cluster about the old homestead that has braved the blasts of one and a half centuries. Glancing back there stands the long stone wall, supporting wooden posts, rails gone, holes gone, yet the sides stand moss covered with age.

This was a Tomlinson place. The house was built by Joseph Tomlinson in 1775, for his half brother Isaac, who was married Dec. 19, 1775. There is a tradition that the house was standing about 1750, being one of the oldest in that region. As already indicated, Tomlinson was among the first to settle on Great Hill. The name Isaac appears in several generations, and also the name Jonas. Sarah, the dau. to Jonas, married Andrew Smith May 21, 1696. Jonas was the father to Joseph, and Isaac his half brother was son to John Tomlinson, who died Nov. 1756, aged 70. Joseph was appointed guardian of his half brother Isaac 1756. Some sixty years ago this old home passed into the hands of the Lum family. These Lum families were prominent in the early affairs and history of the town. Two of their homesteads were located east of the Tomlinson place just described. The first house east is of a later date, where lived the widow Lum to the great age of 97 years, her death being caused by choking while eating. E. J. Leavenworth is now living here. The old original house has disappeared, but formerly stood a number of feet eastward from the present house.

The other Lum homestead is now the Henry Treat place, the present house having been built about a hundred years ago. The old house stood back of the present one, and a little west there was a small room where the slave of the family lived. This room remained until recent years. In those days it was a mark of social distinction among some families to have a slave. Only two other slaves are mentioned as living among the farmers of this locality. The Holbrooks owned one, the Nettletons the other, Titus and old black "Sim." The Treat family came from Quaker Farms, next south of the stone house belonging to the Griffin family. The old home of their fathers has fallen into decay; their present home is one very pleasantly located, beneath the great elm, a house of two stories, well built, facing the north, back from the road, with a fine outlook.

The name Lum often appears in the records of the town in connection with school matters. Still another Lum family lived on the Squantuck road.

Among the prominent names are those of the Russell families, who lived in the two houses east of the H. Treat place, the two sons of Timothy, Samuel, living in the one story house, and Joseph, who lived in the next two story house, near the highway. This last was used as an "inn" in the time of the Revolution and since.

Both of these houses were standing as early as the Revolution. The name Samuel Russell frequently appears in the records of the town as holding some office. This road was one of the most frequented because of being the direct route to Derby dock.

On the left and north is another substantial looking old house, now owned by Mr. Francis, but formerly belonging to the Smith family, a name of long standing in the region, one of whom, Ephraim, bought the place of Mr. Waters, and conducted the brandy mill now in ruins by the brook below. This house stands back many rods from the road on the shelf-like portion of the hill, from which there are beautiful views of the valley and hills. When the sun is declining, the most conspicuous object is the little cemetery a mile away eastward with the white marble stones marking the place of the dead.

CHRISTOPHER SMITH HOMESTEAD.

Returning from Rockhouse Hill to the little Methodist church and the little deserted schoolhouse by the corners, the first house north stands back from the old Hell Lane road, to the west and across the brook, approached by a lane from the highway. This is the old Christopher Smith homestead, one of the most picturesque places within the Great Hill region. Being so located in the center of the valley and near the brook, and being surrounded by the encircling hills, this old home makes a picture rarely surpassed, as seen among New England hills. On going down the lane there are two gates some distance from the house and on the east side of the brook, one gate for teams, the other a narrow gate by its side, not a common arrangement in these days. These two gates remind one of the work of Sir Isaac Newton who cut two holes in his study door, one for the old cat, the other a small one for the kitten. The use of the small gate was a matter of convenience when on foot, or for cattle. Crossing the bridge, the driveway led to the south of the house, the house facing the east, a large two story red dwelling, with only one story on the west side, the house being shingled all over. The usual large stone chimney, and also the arrangement of rooms are after the old plan. The back door is low and very near the roof.

This is one of the typical old New England homesteads, with surrounding trees, orchards, and a number of farm wagons, carts, old and new, to complete the surroundings. The stone walls about the sheds, yards, and barn, give more than usual appearance of thrift and security. A visit to this home will long linger in memory. Christopher Smith is said to have built this house in 1774. Another house probably stood here a generation before, though this may have been the first one, and older than the date mentioned. Among the five generations of Smiths living here are the names of Christopher, John, and Edgar, who was the last to inherit and use the estate, but not long. While in a demented condition he shot himself, 1893.

Not because he was poor did he take his life, for he had in his possession more than $25,000 in money besides the estate. Now deserted by the family there is a depressing loneliness about this old homestead when one recalls its past history and the work of five generations ago.

Some distance north from the old Smith homestead on the main road, there stands the old "hive," a large square two story red house shingled all over. Located on the east side of the road it faces the west looking toward the brook and Rockhouse Hill. Besides the front door, there is one near the corner on the south. This corner door is common in the homes of the period.

With the ell on the east side, the house is roomy and well worthy of the name of "hive." It was built by John Holbrook for his son John in 1745. There may have been a house on the same foundation or near, occupied by John Holbrook as stated in connection with the boundary. John Holbrook raised a large family here, and many were the times of swarming during its history, hence the name of the old "hive." Six generations, John, John, Daniel, S. D. Russell and others have been sheltered beneath the broad roof and within the spacious rooms through passing joys and sorrows.

Looking once more upon the old "hive" surrounded with fences, giving it a shut-in appearance, the great maple and the rock by the roadside, one beholds another picture where the swarming has ceased with the great family here, and a new but sad period of history has already begun.

It was John Holbrook who gave the land for the cemetery which was located on the corner of his farm not far eastward from his dwelling, a beautiful place on a low-lying hill of a dozen feet or so, and with the many white stones is the most conspicuous object from the encircling hills. More by far are buried here than there are living in the region round about. The first to be buried here was Joseph Canfield. The full inscription is as follows :

"Here lies the body of Joseph Canfield, the first deacon of the church at the Great Hill in Derby, and the first person buried in this yard. Died July 14, A. D. 1784, in the Faith and Hope of the Gospel, aged 65 years.

Also Sarah Canfield.

"In memory of Sarah Canfield, relict of Deacon Joseph Canfield, who departed this life January 25th, 1793, in the 67th year of her age. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."—Sharpe's Hist., vol. 2, p. 91.

Again going north on the old Hell Lane road for a considerable distance, one will come to another corner, said to have been called in the olden time, "Tite's Corners." Titus was a slave belonging to John Holbrook, and desired to enter the Revolutionary war to fight for the independence of the colonies. As all the sons of John were in the army, Titus was persuaded to remain and help his master until the war was over, and then receive his freedom and a tract of land. This he did. And in due time it is said that Titus built a little house eastward from the corners, which for a long time was known as "Tite's Corners," and the lane known as Titus' lane. This is in the north part of the valley. From these corners, what is now known as the Hell Lane road begins and extends westward to Quaker Farms. Somewhere near the north corner of these roads, there stood the old brandy mill already referred to.

Many years ago an Episcopal clergyman frequently visited his parishioners, who were located in this Hell Lane region, and on one occasion when he returned after making parish calls, said that the region was rightly named.

THE GUNN-NETTLETON PLACE.

Northwest from "Tite's Corners," and also in the north part of the valley referred to, very near the Four Mile Brook and at the base of a great hill rising to the north, there stands the old red house known as the Capt. Nettleton place. Though the builder was forgotten, his name was Capt. Abel Gunn who lived here as early as 1740. His name is mentioned when the new society at Oxford was being planned, the south boundary being at the "brook and bridge between the dwelling houses of Abel Gunn and John Holbrook."

Agnes Gunn, the daughter of Abel Gunn, married Josiah Nettleton in 1761. Among the seven children there was a son who became Capt. Josiah Nettleton, who lived on the old homestead for more than eighty years. He was captain of the militia. During the following years, John Riggs, and still later Abraham Scranton lived here, and several others.

The house is located on a knoll west of "Tite's Corners" and the brook, facing the south. In all the region about, there is not a house like it in shape, or architectural design. The overreaching roofs give it the appearance, on the end, of the shape of an Indian arrow head or spear head. The extended roof, without any upright supports, form a veranda on both sides of the house.

It is a large one story and a half house, there being room for two windows in the second story, and two smaller windows in the attic.

THE WEST END OF THE GUNN-NETTLETON-SCRANTON HOUSE

There are two large chimneys, eight fireplaces, a wide hall running through the house from south to north, with double "dutch" doors, that is the upper and lower parts opening separately. There is another such door in the house. At the east and front side of the basement there was a large, high kitchen, having a fireplace on the north side sufficiently large to receive an eight foot log in the back. The door to this kitchen is at the east end, near the front corner.

On the west end of the house there is a large ell which contains the kitchen and other rooms, also a smoke-house built in the chimney. Over the kitchen was a little room where for many years lived the slave known as old old "Black Sim." Sim was a faithful slave, and when he received his freedom, he had no desire to leave his old master, so he served well, remaining here as long as he lived. Very few remember old "Black Sim."

In the west room up stairs, there was an old loom where weaving was an industry for many years, and together with the other wheels about the house, there was little need of a shopping day.

As one now looks upon this strange red house shingled on its broad east end, and see the long window of the basement kitchen and the broad porch without the usual supports, and the well near the west front corner, there appears the very picture of one and a half centuries ago, but all who dwelt there are gone.

On Hell Lane just west of the Nettleton place is a red house of two stories where lived, among others, Capt'n Jim Beardsley, who, like many others, had a local reputation and his home became the center for the gathering of the spiritualists of the mystical order. It is not stated as to their communication with the spirits of darkness, or with the spirits of light. If every old house has an occupant or more of the spirit nature, doubtless they are present on their old camping ground. Great Hill reminds one of Vermont, having representatives of all known religious sects.

Beyond this place is still another, standing as a landmark of former activities; and some distance beyond out on a cross road southward is another brandy mill, that belonged to the English brothers, which has left the trail of the serpent in that vicinity. Notwithstanding this extreme of life, Great Hill has been noted from its early history for men of patriotism and faith.

So many noted places recorded in history were near, and so many noted battles have been fought upon the border of some peach orchard, that we will not leave these old landmarks without mentioning another noted peach orchard upon the very border of the region that has been described, — a region once noted for its prosperity and distinguished families, a region rich in soil and beautiful for situation, a region which now causes the long absent son and daughter to shed a tear over the marks made by death and time upon those homes made sacred by early associations.

From every point of the valley and encircling hills, looking northward, there rises gracefully that large, round hill, covered with a peach orchard of more than eighty acres and near 20,000 trees. In springtime this was a hill of flowers, in summer a hill of the richest fruit.

ONE OF THE OLDEST TREES IN SEYMOUR.

Close at hand, there is another chapter of history, known only to the oldest residents living, to the hunters and woodsmen. The region north and northeast of the peach orchards is now dotted over with cellar-holes, overgrown with trees and bushes, marking the former homes of many families, long since departed. The wilderness has claimed them, hiding those old landmarks so effectually, that neither path nor road can be found leading to them. The hunter alone disturbs those solitudes of the wilderness.

THE JOHN STORRS HOUSE.

While riding along the old turnpikes, there is now and then pointed out a gate-house, against which in olden times the road-gate swung. Many of the houses are now being forgotten. However, there is one old gate-house still standing on the east side of Rinmon pond, the first north of the iron watering tank, between the pond and the road.

Just below the watering tank, on the east side of the road, there stands a house conspicuous because of its architecture, a low lying, ancient looking structure. It was built by John Storrs on the sandbank southward, but as there was no water to be had there, it was moved to its present location and is now the home of the Hummell family.

Our search after old landmarks now ends and we return to The Falls. The waters here rose on the first of March, 1900, to the height of near 17 feet until all the rocks were covered, the river banks more than full, dashing and foaming in the mad race towards the sea. But only a few hours passed, when the river returned to its natural and common place. So is the flight of time, the making of history, the experience of our lives, at the greatest height at one time, but mostly in the natural and common level.

The old homes are but landmarks along the river of time, and while we have considered these as the humble and more spacious dwellings of men, our history is not complete without a look at one who has been a builder of home and church and state, the "old man."

The "old man" has more than passed the span of life, four score years. He still lives upon the southern slope of his ancestral lands, where in graceful curves the fields extend toward the river and woodlands. He looks eastward across the valley upon the real pictures of nature, growing more beautiful with his years.

His dwelling is not of the ancient type, rather it is octagonal in shape, two stories, always receiving the light from the morning to the evening. Encircling his grounds at his very door runs the swift brook, adding both music and a charm to his quiet home.

NAUGATUCK RIVER OPPOSITE UNION CEMETERY

The roadway winds from afar along the hillside, by the side of a great rock covered with a grapevine, and nearer still the long arbor shades the path to his quarters. To many, he would appear lonesome and alone; but he is not alone. The enlarged house makes room for a son and children. Their happy faces drive away the care of years. Yet he is alone. The companion of many years has fallen asleep, now resting in the narrow home of waiting.

In the bright March sunlight, the trees about his dwelling shine with a shimmering light, intensifying the natural beauty and giving a new warmth as often seen before the springing forth of life.

Here lived the aged man, - a little man, who is the last of all his schoolmates and youthful companions. But he remains peaceful amid all these changes. His locks are white with age, his eyes a little dim, his hearing a little dull. But his voice is still sweet and clear, as he tells of his ancestral people and the days long since gone, of those events that have made history what it is. There is a nobleness about his countenance and a neatness about his appearance, his clothes well worn and well cared for. Like the strength of mind his spirit is strong, and thus the more willing to wait the coming of the reaping angel.

His room of waiting is one of simple comfort, full of light and cheer. The old wood stove, the cushioned chairs, a place to recline, add to the comfort of his surroundings. After his day's work is done, and while the sun is still high, he sits by the window, and draws near to him, not a table, nor a stand, but a little frame made strong to hold the great Book upright with its large clear letters that reveal the light and truth of the other world. He again listens to the Sweet Singer of Israel; he walks by the side of the Man of Galilee; he waits by the sea shore; he goes into the mountain to pray; he again hears the invitation "Follow me." In company with John he beholds visions of strange and beautiful things. Though in the evening of life, he does not look down into the valley of the shadow of death to fear, but rather, his look is upward, looking the way that angels and spirits go. He is not like the bud, nor the flower; he is the ripened grain, clad in righteousness, ready and waiting for the breath from heaven, to drive the little chaff away, thereby freeing the spirit, that it may fly upward and away.

TO ROCK RIMMON,

BY ARTHUR FREMONT RIDER.

To thee Rock Rimmon with thy rocky height,
A sheer expanse of grey and in between
The clump of bushes ; 'tis to thee I write ;
Thy crown which towers above the valley green.
Calmly the river flows around thy base,
Broadening below thy image to reflect ;
But thou so silent stand, thy scarred face
Seems cold and harsh, all sunshine to reject.
Erect thou standest, as if keeping guard
And silent watch upon the vale below.
All things around thee thou dost disregard,
Above them all though winds around thee blow ;
Unchanged thou dost remain to mortal eye,
Unchanged and silent as the years go by.

CHAPTER I.

THE CHURCHES OF SEYMOUR.

BY W. C. SHARPE.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

THE oldest existing religious organization in Seymour is the Congregational society, which was formed Nov. 3d, 1789, as appears by an old manuscript preserved in the records of the town of Derby, which reads as follows :

DERBY, November 3d, A. D., 1789.

This may certify all whom it may concern, that the subscribers have joined and paid towards the support of the Gospel at the Congregational Society, in Derby, near Bladen Brook, and mean for the future to support the Gospel there :

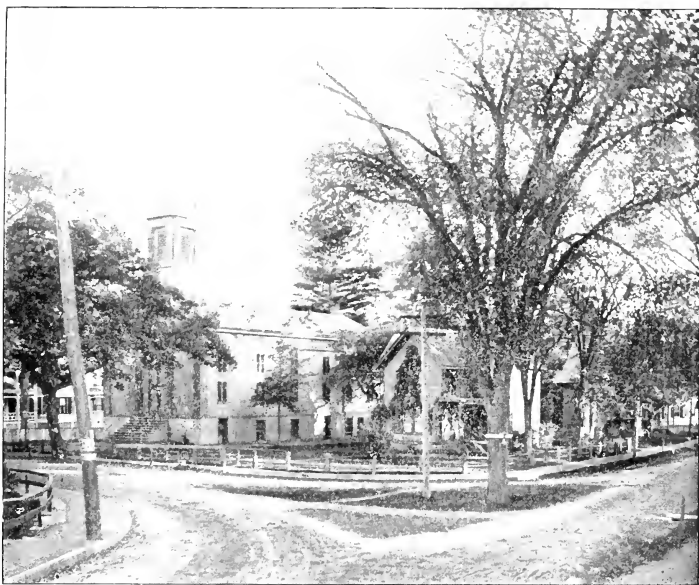

Capt. Timothy Baldwin,	Truman Loveland,
Asahel Johnson,	Ebenezer Warner,
Gideon Johnson,	Leveret Pritchard,
Capt. Bradford Steel,	Levi Tomlinson,
Elisha Steel,	John Coe,
Isaac Baldwin,	Eben. Beacher Johnson,
Ebr. Turel Whitmore,	Nathan Wheeler,
Amos Hine,	Bezazel Peck,
Bradford Steel, Jr.,	Frances Forque,
Medad Keney,	Joseph Loines,
Hezekiah Wodin,	Moses Clark,
John Adye,	Philo Hinman,
Ashbel Loveland,	Thomas Hotchkiss.

Sertified by me,

LEVI TOMLINSON,

Society Clerk.

Rev. Benjamin Beach was the first pastor and appears to have been here before the formation of the society, as he had the parsonage built in 1789. The church, which is represented on page 47, was built in 1791, on the ground where the M. E. church now stands. Rev. Mr. Beach was the pastor of the society for fifteen years. Capt. Timothy Baldwin and Levi Tomlinson were appointed deacons in 1789. Beyond this and a few sermons by Mr. Beach, which have been preserved, with the date of delivery, scarcely any record has been preserved of the first twentyeight years of the history of the church.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH AND PARSONAGE

In 1817 the church, or as it was then called, the meetinghouse, was sold to the Methodists and a new church was built on the plateau south of the Whittemore tavern. This church was begun in 1818 and was built in more modern church style than the original structure, the spire, however, not being added until 1829.

The growth of the village in succeeding years was in such direction as to make the location of this second church seem altogether too much to one side of the center of population and in 1846 a third church was begun, the church now standing. This church was dedicated April 20, 1847, and has been in use fifty-four years. In 1890 the church was enlarged by an addition on the south end, with interior changes at a cost of about $5,000, and a new pipe organ was secured at a cost of $2,500.

The pastors of the church, so far as appears on record, have been as follows :

- Rev. Benjamin Beach, 1789 - 1805.
- Rev. Zephaniah Swift, 1817 - 1825.
- Rev. Ephraim G. Swift, 1825 - 1827.
- Rev. Charles Thompson, 1828 - 1833.
- Rev. Rollin S. Stone, June, 1833 - August, 1834.
- Rev. John E. Bray, 1834 - 1842.
- Rev. William B. Curtiss, 1843 - 1849.
- Rev. E. B. Chamberlain, 1850 - 1852.
- Rev. J. E. Willard, 1852 - 1855.
- Rev. Henry D. Northrop, 1857 - 1858.
- Rev. Elijah C. Baldwin, 1859 - 1860.
- Rev. Sylvester Hine, 1860 - 1861.
- Rev. John L. Mills, 1862 - 1864.
- Rev. George A. Dickerman, 1864 - 1865.
- Rev. Abram J. Quick, 1865 - 1867.
- Rev. Allen G. Clark, 1868 - 1869.
- Rev. H. P. Collin, 1869 - 1870.
- Rev. J. W. Fitch, 1871 - 1872.
- Rev. W. J. Thompson, 1872 - 1874.
- Rev. S. C. Leonard, 1874 - 1879.
- Rev. F. Stanley Root, 1879 - November 18, 1884.
- Rev. Francis J. Fairbanks, April 30, 1885 - March 4, 1886.
- Rev. Thomas E. Davies, October 24, 1886 - March 31, 1891.
- Rev. Hollis A. Campbell, January 1, 1892, to date.

- Capt. Timothy Baldwin, 1789.
- Levi Tomlinson, 1789.
- Bradford Steele, 1817 to 1840.
- Nehemiah Botsford, 1817 to 1840.
- Sheldon Kinney, Sept 6, 1840 to 1844.

Alfred Hull, Sept. 6, 1840.
Andrew W. DeForest, 1844.
William Kinney, 1853.
Miles Culver, 1853.
James L. Spencer, 1853.
Wallace M. Tuttle, 1858.
Charles Bradley, — to October, 1868.
David Johnson, 1865.
Levi Lounsbury, 1865.
Joshua Kendall, October, 1868, to April, 1888.
Wilfred I. Warren, April, 1880, to April, 1888.
Edwin A. Lum, Apr., 1888, to Apr., 1889. Apr., 1890, to date.
Thomas Thomas, April, 1888, to April, 1890.
Robert Hungerford, April, 1888, to September, 1888.
George E. O'Meara, April, 1888, to date.
Edward R. Davis, Apr., 1889, to Apr., 1891, and 1896, to 1900.
Thomas Williams, April, 1890, to 1900.
Wm. B. Nichols, April, 1891, to 1894.
George W. French, 1899.
Charles Maybury, 1901.

Among those who have been most efficient in advancing the interests of the church in the earlier years was John H. De Forest, known as Squire DeForest, who was a member of the society's committee from 1825 to 1830; Hiram Upson, Andrew W. DeForest, Daniel White, Albert J. Steele and Lemuel Bliss.

The parsonage was built in 1873-4, the expense being mostly defrayed by a gift from Deacon Sheldon Kinney. The church was incorporated in 1890 as the "Seymour Congregational Church."

The church has an excellent parish library of several hundred volumes, which was donated by Hon. James Swan in 1883, for the use of adults, and to which he has since made large additions, beside the Sundayschool library of several hundred volumes.

The church is in a prosperous condition, with a membership of 260. The present pastorate has already exceeded in length all except that of the first pastor of the society, Rev. Benjamin Beach. During the present pastorate 150 persons have been received into membership and the number of members has increased from 193 to 260. The Sundayschool numbers 329.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

REV. Jesse Lee, the New England apostle of Methodism, first came to Derby in 1791 and from a Methodist society formed there came those who constituted the first Methodist organization in what is now Seymour. This, according to evidence recorded by one of the early veterans, was Feb. 7, 1797, with Daniel Rowe as leader. The original members were Jesse Johnson, Isaac Johnson, Ester Baldwin, Sarah Baldwin and Eunice Baldwin. George Clark, Lucy Hitchcock, Silas Johnson and Olive Johnson were soon added to the number.

At first the meetings were held in private houses and in schoolhouses, and in the assembly rooms of the Dayton, Whittemore and Moulthrop taverns, and it is recorded that as early as 1803 they were allowed to hold meetings in the old Congregational meetinghouse, represented on page 47, and that in that year the first Methodist quarterly meeting held in this place was held there.

In 1817 the Methodists purchased this church and raised it a story, increasing the seating capacity by putting in side galleries. The trustees at this time were Stiles Johnson, Bezaleel Peck, Robert Lees, Thomas Gilyard and Timothy Hitchcock, and Newel Johnson was the secretary.

Stiles Johnson died Oct. 4, 1818, aged 36 years, leaving by will to the Methodist Society the ground on which the church stands, with the green in front, and $334 in money. The building was soon after enlarged and galleries built on the sides, but no paint was used either within or without. In 1819 there were three classes of which the leaders were Robert Lee, Timothy Hitchcock and Orrin Peck, the latter living in Woodbridge and having his class there. The early ministers were circuit preachers, going the rounds over large districts, and it was not until the church was favored with a resident pastor that any could be considered exclusively as pastor of the local church. The first parsonage, at the corner of Pearl and Grand streets, was built in 1830 and since then the church has had a resident pastor, the list of those during the term of the church second building being as follows:

- 1830, Rev. Robert Travis. 1837-8, Rev. David Miller.
 1831, Rev. Daniel Smith. 1839, Rev. J. B. Beach.
 1832, Rev. C. W. Turner. 1840-41, Rev. Thomas Sparks.
 1833, Rev. Thos Bainbridge. 1842-3, Rev. Ezra Jagger.
 1834, Rev. Humphrey Humphries. 1844, Rev. Moses Blydenburgh.
 1835-6, Rev. Josiah Bowen. 1845-6, Rev. George L. Fuller.

The original church, pictured on page 47, had served its purpose for more than half a century. Its walls had echoed with the eloquence of men mighty in faith and zeal, its pews had been occupied by men and women who had helped to lay deep and strong the foundations of our governmental and social institutions. But the feeling was growing that a better building should be erected and that the society was able to do it. Many precious memories clustered about the old building, with its antique arrangements. A central aisle ran between two rows of long seats reaching to the sides of the building. Galleries on the north and south sides and across the west end, supported by large wooden pillars, were reached by a narrow stairway in the northwest corner. The building had never been painted or plastered. The swallows built their nests against the roof, and flew in and out of crevices under the eaves during the services. At the east end of the church was a platform raised one step, surrounded by a railing, and in front of this was an open space where for a few years had stood a "box" stove, though the foot stoves, or tin boxes filled with live coals, were still in use. In the center of the space within the railing was the quaint old pulpit, with a door or gateway about three feet in height. The pulpit was somewhat elevated, but not nearly so much as was common in those days.

During the pastorate of Rev. George L. Fuller, in the fall of 1846, a subscription was opened for a new church edifice and in the spring of 1847 Rev. Charles Stearns was appointed pastor and pushed along the new enterprise. The old meetinghouse was sold for a hundred dollars and was torn down, and the corner stone of the new church was laid June 19, 1847. The church was Gothic in design, 40 by 60 feet, with a basement mostly above ground, containing a commodious lecture-rooms and two classrooms and had an excellent toned bell of 1,150 pounds weight. The slips, the ceiling, the altar and the galleries were grained and the walls were frescoed. The front windows were of stained glass. The cost of the building, bell and furniture was $5,800.

Thomas Gilyard, who died Nov. 12, 1853, left a will by which he gave to the church about three acres of land on Skokorat, from which the church has since had an annual income.

SECOND METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, 1881-1891.

Mrs. Harriet Kirtland, who died Oct. 20, 1865, left a will by which, after giving to her husband the use of her property during his lifetime and providing for the payment of certain legacies, she gave the residue of her property "to the Methodist Episcopal church of Seymour, for the use and benefit of said church." The property was sold in 1876.

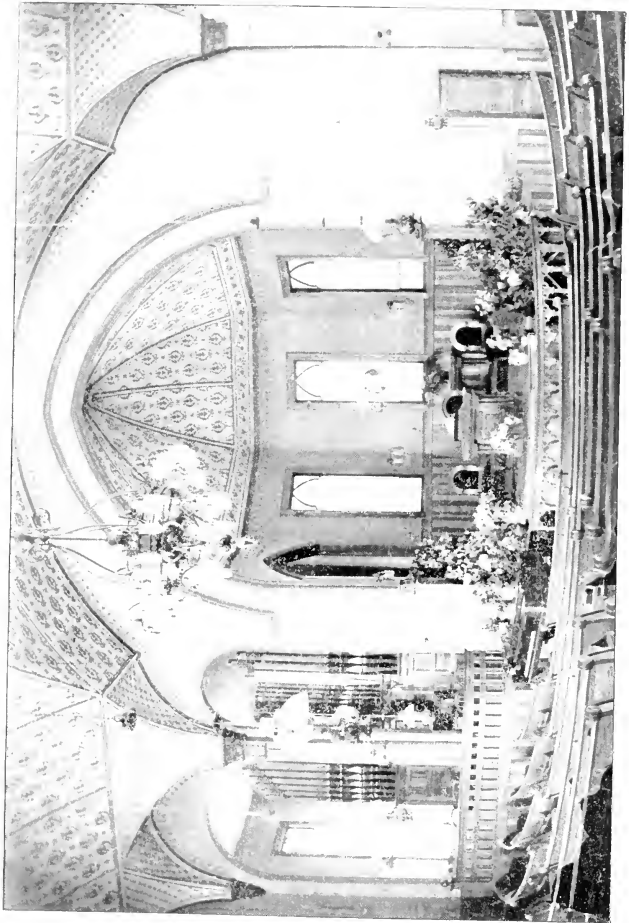

The pastors of the church since 1847 have been as follows:

1847-8, Rev. Charles Stearns.	1855-6, Rev. Wm. T. Hill.
1849-50, Rev. Seneca Howland.	1857-8, Rev. Thomas Stevenson.
1851-2, Rev. David Osborn.	1859-60, Rev. L. P. Perry.
1853-4, Rev. Rufus K. Reynolds.	1861, Rev. Albert Booth.

1862-3,	Rev. Geo. Lansing Taylor.	1880-82,	Rev. Charles W. Lyon.
1864-5,	Rev. A. B. Pulling.	1883-4,	Rev. Horace Q. Judd.
1866,	Rev. Sylvester Smith.	1885-8,	Rev. Arthur McNicholl.
1867-8,	Rev. Joseph Pullman.	1888,	Rev. C. S. Williams.
1869-70,	Rev. Bennett T. Abbott.	1889-90,	Rev. Geo. B. Dusingberre
1871-3,	Rev. Joseph Smith,	1891-3,	Rev. James E. Holmes.
1874,	Rev. Wm. R. Webster.	1894,	Rev. Jas. A. MacMillan
1875,	Rev. E. H. Dutcher.	1895-6,	Rev. C. Elmore Barto
1876-7,	Rev. A. B. Pulling.	1897,	Rev. J. T. Hamilton.
1877-9,	Rev. Joseph Vinton.	1898-1901,	Rev. E. C. Tullar.

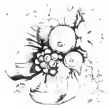

INTERIOR OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

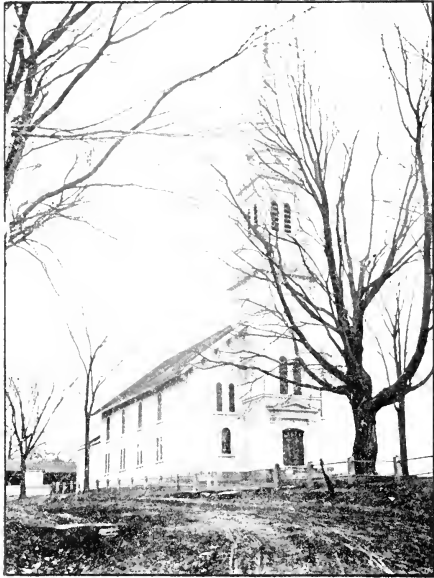

The present edifice was built in 1891 at a cost exceeding $18,000, including the refitting of the older structure, which is used for a lecture room and for the Sundayschool. The subscription for the new church was headed by L. T. Wooster with $1,000, and all gave very liberally, then and since, so that the society is now clear from debt and in possession of one of the handsomest churches in the valley. The new church was dedicated June 19, 1891. The beautiful pipe organ, which was put in at a cost of $1,500, was also the gift of L. T. Wooster.

The superintendents of the Sundayschools have been as follows :

1826-33, George Kirtland.	1868, Sheldon Miles.
1841-2, Samuel R. Hickox.	1869, William C. Sharpe.
1843-50, Lugrand Sharpe.	1872, William W. Dibble.
1851, Frederick Durand.	1873, '75, '78, Samuel R. Butler.
1852-3, John Adams.	1874, Charles N. Blanchard.
1854, William A. Hughes.	1876, Edward N. Botsford.
1855 and 58, William S. Mallory.	1877, Henry C. Rogers.
1856-7, Albert W. Lounsbury.	1879-80, George E. Stockwell.
1859, Warren French.	1881-87, Thomas Sharpe.
1860, '61, '66, '67, '70, 71, William N. Storrs.	1888-92, A. C. Butler.
1863, '64, '65, H. W. Benedict.	1893-7, C. H. Guild.
	1897-01, E. T. Humphreys.

TRINITY CHURCH.

ON the 12th of February, 1797, thirty-nine persons living within the bounds of the proposed new parish, were notified to meet on the 20th of that month at the house of Dr. Samuel Sanford for the purpose of forming a Protestant Episcopal society. At the time named all were present and Benjamin Davis was elected moderator, Samuel Sanford clerk, and Joel Chatfield, Israel French and Jonathan Miles society's committee.

The land upon which the church now stands was purchased of Leverett Pritchard March 23, 1797, for sixty dollars. We copy from the original deed to show how much was included in the parish "lately formed in Derby and called by the name of The Union Episcopal Society, the same being formed out of the First Society in said Derby, that is to say, out of a part hereof; out of Great Hill Society; and out of the Society in Oxford, all in said Derby."

The first load of stone for the foundation of the church was carted by Leverett Pritchard, and the first of the timber by John Riggs. The committee worked so energetically that early in the spring of that year the corner-stone was laid by the Rev. Edward Blakeslee, an assistant of the Rev. Dr. Mansfield, and before winter the whole building was inclosed. Work on the inside was delayed for a time for want of funds and slab benches were used for seats.

INTERIOR OF TRINITY CHURCH

The first rector of the church was Dr. Mansfield, whose parish consisted of the present towns of Derby, Orange, Woodbridge, Seymour, Oxford, Southbury, Naugatuck and Waterbury. He was rector of St. James's church, Derby, 72 years without a break—a solitary instance, it is believed, in the Episcopal church of this country. He lived to the ripe old age of 96, and died in 1820.

The Sundayschool dates from 1827 and in the same year a bell was obtained for the church at a cost of $257. The church was never warmed until 1827 when a stove was presented by Deacon Isaac Kinney. In 1829 the pews were first rented, immediate payment being made. The first organ was put in in 1831.

The name of the parish and church was changed from Union to Trinity at Easter, 1856, and in the following year the church was repaired and improved at a cost of about $6,000. The seating capacity of the church was doubled and the interior was refurnished. The remodeled and renovated building was dedicated by Bishop Williams, May 11, 1858.

The longest rectorship has been that of Rev. O. Evans Shannon, who remained thirteen years, during which time 105 were confirmed.

In 1891 a new chancel was added to the building and the interior was finely decorated. A beautiful memorial window was placed above the reredos, the gift of Hon. Carlos French, in memory of his daughter Carlotta. A new chancel organ by Roosevelt was at that time built to supplant the old Jardine organ, which had stood in the western gallery for many years. Two years later, a new oak pulpit was given, and in 1895 the society of the Daughters of the King gave chancel furnishings, and the Brotherhood of St. Andrew placed a copper cross over the roof of the new chancel. This chancel was consecrated Feb. 26, 1897, the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the parish.

A beautiful, spreading maple tree, planted before the door around which the horses were hitched whilst their owners worshipped, and under whose branches the congregation gathered at noontime, between services, generations ago, still shades the old church, and almost hides it from view in the summer time.

During this period of a hundred years, the parish has enjoyed the ministrations of twenty-three rectors, whose term of office has varied from one to thirteen years. The roll is as follows :

1797-1802, Dr. Richard Mansfield.	1845-6, Rev. John Purvis.
1803, Rev. Solomon Blakeslee.	1847, Rev. Abel Nichols.
1804, Rev. Calvin White.	1848-50, Rev. Wm. F. Walker.
1805-6, Rev. Ammi Rogers.	1851-2, Rev. Charles G. Ackley.
1807, Rev. Ambrose Todd.	1853-66, Rev. O. Evans Shannon.
1810, Rev. Solomon Blakeslee.	1867-75, Rev. George Seabury.
1813, Rev. James Thompson.	1875-7, Rev. E. K. Lessell.
1814, Rev. Calvin White.	1878-81, Rev. James H. VanBuren.
1815-16, Rev. Chauncey Prindle.	1881-88, Rev. J. D. S. Pardee.
1817-19, Rev. James Thompson.	1889, Rev. E. H. Cleveland.
1819-21, Rev. Aaron Humphreys.	1890-94, Rev. Joseph B. Shepherd.
1822-32, Rev. Stephen Jewett.	1895-9, Rev. Robert B. Kimber.
1833, Rev. Charles W. Bradley.	1900-01, Rev. W. A. Woodford.
1834-44, Rev. John D. Smith.

The wardens of the church are L. A. Camp and L. W. Church. The vestrymen are Peter Ward, F. G. Bassett, R. W. Chatfield, J. B. Honey, C. G. Smith, F. G. Hurd and W. S. Cooper.

THE CHURCH OF ST. AUGUSTINE.

ROMAN Catholic services were first held in Seymour in 1844 in the "Old Long House" on the site of the fire engine house, by Rev. Father Smith of New Haven. There were then only six men of the Roman Catholic faith in the village then known as Humphreysville. They were Nicholas and Daniel Brockway, Nicholas Cass, Patrick and Thomas Gaffney and James Quinlan. The "Long House" referred to above, in which mass was celebrated in 1844, was on the east side of what is now Raymond street. It was a two story building, intended for six families and was torn down some forty years ago, and the fire engine house now stands where the south end of the "Long House" was.

At first they usually went to New Haven to attend mass, and an occasional service was given here. After a little the village was made a mission station, included in the Waterbury parish, later in Naugatuck and Birmingham, the latter being in the time of Rev. John Lynch. In 1851 he purchased the lot where the church now stands for $400, and in 1856 the first Catholic church of Seymour was built. This is still standing just south of the new church, having been fitted up for a rectory.

INTERIOR OF THE CHURCH OF ST. AUGUSTINE

The first resident pastor, Rev. John McMabon, was stationed here in October, 1885, and remained until May 1, 1886, when Rev. R. C. Gragan was appointed pastor. There was then a floating debt of $1,000, which was soon paid. A larger church being greatly needed, in January, 1887, he commenced an effort to build a new one, by issuing subscription papers. These were generously filled up by the parishioners and friends of other denominations who aided liberally.

Ground was broken for the new church May 4th, 1888, and the corner stone was laid by Rt. Rev. Bishop McMahon July 15, 1888, and on that day a collection amounting to $1,100 was taken up. The church was occupied for the first time Dec. 25, 1889, and was dedicated May 18, 1890.

The Church of St. Augustine is a handsome building, of wood, facing on Washington avenue, and overlooking the central part of the town. Its dimensions are 53x101 feet, with a spire 118 feet in height, and dials on the four sides, ready for a clock. A fine bell has been put in. The interior of the church is finished in cherry and oak and the frescoing is in light shades, giving a very pleasing effect. The windows are of stained glass. The seating capacity of the church is 600. The cost of the edifice was $13,000.

The side windows are large and handsome, and were donated by the following: Matthias Bunyan, Sr., and family; John McCarthy, Sr., and family; James Howard; James Shay, Sr., and family; Timothy O'Brien and family; John Kelleher and family; Patrick Crowley, Sr., and family; Michael Reagan and family; Michael McNerney and family; John Ryan memorial, Mrs. John Ryan, Sr.; James Daniher, double window, memorial, Mrs. James Daniher; Mr. and Mrs. Owen Conroy, double memorial window by Michael, Eugene and Mary Conroy. The chancel window was the gift of William Molans, and the vestibule windows were the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Molans.

The three handsome altars finished in gold and white, were all donated, the large central altar by Rev. R. C. Gagan, then the pastor of the church; the altar of the Blessed Virgin by the Scapular Society and the Society of the Children of Mary; and the altar of St. Joseph by Mrs. Ellen Fitzgibbons. The altar rail is of polished cherry, with burnished brass pillars. The choir gallery at the rear of the church is large and wellfitted, jutting out in a half octagon bay at the front. A fine organ was placed in the choir gallery.

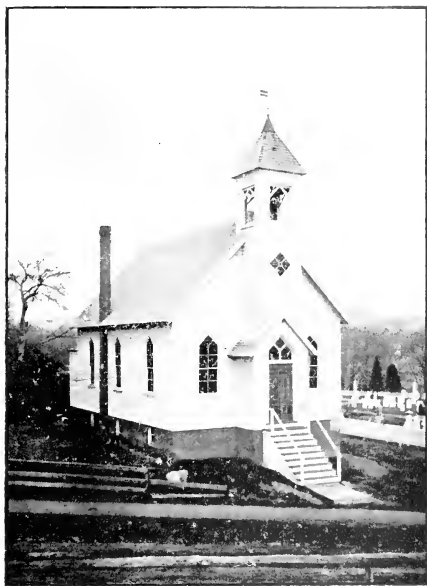

Rev. M. F. Rigney became pastor of the church in April, 1894. There was then an indebtedness of $6,635, the larger part of which has since been paid and many improvements have been made, including the fitting up of the basement and building granite in place of the original wooden steps. Starting with six Catholics in 1844, St. Augustine's parish has today, about 700 members—600 in Seymour proper, and the remainder in Beacon Falls and Oxford, which are in Father Rigney's jurisdiction.

THE GERMAN LUTHERAN CHURCH.

THIS church was organized in 1893 under the direction of Rev. Jacobus Wittke. A site was selected on West street, near Church street, and the building was erected in 1894 and was dedicated on Thanksgiving Day. Rev. Jacobus Wittke resigned in 1894 and was succeeded by Rev. R. Lucas, who remained until 1897. Rev. Max Mueller was the pastor in 1897-8, and Rev. Paul E. T. Lempke since the latter date.

The officers of the church are : president, Fred. Reimann ; vice-president, Christ Grele ; recording secretary, Louis Schuster ; financial secretary, John Schuster ; treasurer, August Schwentor ; trustees, Herman Wirth, Jacob Keller, Gustav Fischer, John Grele, Geo. Kuhlmann. There are in the Sunday-school twelve teachers and about one hundred children. Henry Rnmetsch is the superintendent.

The following societies are connected with the church : Ladies' Aid society, founded in 1898 by Rev. M. Mueller, having thirtyfive members, Mrs. Charles Mannweiler president. Young People's society, organized in 1899, twentyfive members, of which the pastor is president, meets twice a month.

THE GREAT HILL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

THE first formation of an Ecclesiastical society on Great Hill took place Nov. 29, 1775, when the inhabitants of Great Hill and Rockhouse Hill met in the Great Hill schoolhouse and elected the following officers: Benjamin Tomlinson, moderator; Joseph Canfield, Joseph Tomlinson and Noah Tomlinson, committee; Samuel Russell, clerk, and Lieut. John Bassett of Five Mile Hill, collector. The bounds of the society were, north by Five Mile Brook and Little River, west by the Housatonic or Great River, south by the road leading by the old Bassett place, east by the Nangatuck river. They held their first meetings in the schoolhouse at the foot of the hill, near the M. E. church and continued to hold their meetings there for four years.

In May, 1779, they petitioned the General Assembly to grant an act of incorporation into an ecclesiastical society to be known as the Great Hill Society, bounded as follows: beginning at the southerly corner of Benjamin Bassett's land by the Great river, running thence in a straight line to the mouth of Hasekey Meadow Brook where it empties into the Nangatuck river, thence up said river to the great new bridge, thence running northeasterly as the road runs, to the easterly corner of David Wooster's meadow, thence running to Abner Johnson's dwelling house, leaving the same on north side of said line, from thence to Five Mile Brook where it crosses the Woodbury road leading to Derby, thence down said brook to the Great river, thence down said river to the first mentioned boundary. This memorial was signed by Deacon John Holbrook and others. The following resolution was passed by the General Assembly:

Resolved, That all the inhabitants dwelling in that part of the township of Derby, lying within the above described lines and boundaries be, and the same are hereby constituted and made an ecclesiastical society, by the name of the Great Hill Society, with all the privileges, immunities and advantages that all other ecclesiastical societies by law have and enjoy.

John Holbrook was elected the first deacon, and it is said that Mr. Holbrook built the church at his own expense. It is stated in the Derby History that he and his wife Abigail gave the land for the Episcopal church at Derby, but the John who was the first deacon and built the church at Great Hill was a grandson of John (who d. 1752) and Abigail (Gun) Holbrook of Derby. This John Holbrook married Huldah Fox and was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He lived where his son Benjamin afterward lived, near the burial ground at Great Hill.

The organization of the society and the building of the church is said to have come about in this wise: John Holbrook was an ardent patriot, having given three sons to the cause of freedom, and he was greatly displeased with Rev. Mr. Mansfield's views regarding the Revolution and was so offended that he left the church at Derby, and having a sawmill and plenty of timber, built the meetinghouse on his own land in what was long known as meetinghouse meadow, and soon there was a prosperous church in the midst of a thrifty farming community. Deacons Bassett and Holbrook were the stewards. It was said that the singing could not then be excelled.

The first society meeting held after the charter was received was held in the schoolhouse Sept. 20, 1779. The church was built in 1781, and the first meeting in the church was held in March, 1782. On November, 1783, they voted to hire preaching every other Sabbath until the first of May.

Capt. John Holbrook, Benjamin Bassett, and Jonathan Lum, Jr., were appointed a committee by the society to select a place for a burying ground, and selected a place east of John Holbrook's land, on land belonging to his father.

Dec. 3, 1782, they voted to hire a Mr. Birdsey to preach until the first of May. On Dec. 21, 1787, they voted to hire Mr. Abner Smith, with a salary of seventy pounds and fire wood, and a settlement of one hundred pounds. Rev. Mr. Smith accepted the call March 8, 1787, and preached there for many years. He married a daughter of Major Bull of Woodbury, whose grandson was the late Hon. Thomas Bull of that place. Her remains, with one child, rest in the Great Hill cemetery, where a plain marble memorial stone was erected to their memory. Mr. Smith continued in the pastorate until age and infirmity obliged him to retire. He then went with his son-in-law, the Rev. T. Babbit, to the West, where he died, having lived nearly a hundred years.

The old parsonage is yet standing on the forty-acre farm on the top of the hill, in good condition. The old communion service, with the parlor chairs of the old parsonage, are in possession of the Benham brothers whose summer home is the first house west of the location of the old church, and with other ancient relics, are highly prized for their antiquity and associations. The old road opposite the meetinghouse was then a wide public street where on training days the military used to parade. The town meetings were long held at Great Hill, Derby and Humphreysville, each in their turn every third year.

The main road across the Hill was the principal thoroughfare for travel for teams transporting merchandise from Derby Landing to Woodbury and the northern country merchants. The stopping places or taverns were at Capt. Abel Holbrook's, and Squire Russell Tomlinson's, where Mr. Scranton now lives.

A romantic story is told of the early times of the old church. A young clergyman, James Noyes, of a distinguished family, came from New Haven to preach, and when Deacon Holbrook's handsome daughter Anna came into church he fell in love with her. Espying her book in her vacated seat, he wrote in it, "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" She wrote in return, "Come and see." The acquaintance thus oddly begun led to a happy union. They settled in Wallingford and had two sons and daughters. The sons were Rev. James Noyes, Jr., and Joseph; the daughters, Anna, Esther and others.

Rev. Abner Smith had no successor as pastor there. The old church has vanished, its records have mostly disappeared, but it is worthy of remembrance as having been one of the centers of religious influence and patriotism in the formative period of the republic. Though the church is no more its influence is perennial and ever widening, through the descendants of those who once formed its membership. Scattered far and wide, east and west, they help to make up the representatives of that sterling character and enlightened Christian principle which alone can maintain a free government.

GREAT HILL METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

THIS is one of the oldest Methodist societies in Connecticut and at one time ranked highest in strength and numbers in the Derby Circuit, which then included the towns of the Naugatuck Valley as far as Waterbury. Rev. Heman Bangs, who was presiding elder about eighty years ago, said Great Hill was his main stay, and Rev. Elijah Woolsey, circuit preacher in 1814, in his book called "The Lights and Shadows of the Itinerancy," gives space to incidents of his experience on Great Hill. Capt. Bassett heard Mr. Woolsey preach in the schoolhouse and was so impressed with the sermon that he asked Mr. Woolsey on his next round to preach at his home. The invitation was accepted, with the result that he and his family became members of the society, and the end is yet, one of his descendants being now an able Methodist minister.

From the time when Rev. Jesse Lee proclaimed the "Glad Tidings" through the valley of the Naugatuck, service was held here by his successors from time to time, and a prosperous church grew up. For a number of years, between 1810 and 1820, Cyrus Botsford was chorister and was considered an excellent music teacher. The choirs in those days were large and some humorous anecdotes were told of corrections made by Mr. B. when discordant notes were heard.

Anson Gillette, son of Capt. Jeremiah Gillette, of Revolutionary times, was converted under the preaching of Rev. Jesse Johnson. He was the first class leader and his wife and five of his sons became members of the church. Others of the early Methodists were Mrs. David Tomlinson, with one son and three daughters; Capt. Isaac Bassett and wife with one son and six daughters, and James Tomlinson and wife. Eli Gillette, son of Anson Gillette, was from his youth a consistent and efficient member of the Great Hill church. He was one of the trustees for more than forty years and was for many years a member of the board of stewards. He died in 1899 aged eighty-nine years. Judson English was a zealous, old-fashioned Methodist and was closely identified with the Great Hill church for half a century. He was a class leader from 1851 to 1865, died Aug. 12, 1876, aged 81 years. He left to the church a legacy of $1,000 in bonds, which, however, before they came into the possession of the church had depreciated so much that only $400 was realized from their sale.

In 1838 Rev. David Miller was pastor at Humphreysville and Great Hill, making his home at Great Hill. In 1842-3 Rev. Ezra Jagger, in 1844 Rev. Moses Blydenburgh, and in 1845-6 Rev. George L. Fuller, all pastors of both the Humphreysville and Great Hill churches, lived on Great Hill making the church at the center take a secondary position, the parsonage there being rented for what income it might bring.

The eccentric Rev. George L. Fuller is still remembered by many. Fearless and untiring in his Master's service, he labored with great success and many were the anecdotes told of his labors. A man, at whose house a prayer-meeting was to be held one Saturday evening, sent an invitation to a neighbor, a staunch Presbyterian, to attend. He sent back word that he wished to be excused as he "kept Saturday night," but he soon began to attend the meetings and continued to be a regular attendant for more than thirty years.

The old Congregational church which stood near the top of the hill, and had long been given up to the Methodists, had never been finished, and in winter was so cold that meetings were held in the old red schoolhouse at the foot of the hill.

Many colored people were accustomed to attend the meetings but they took the rear seats, next the wall, and always remained in their seats until the white people had passed out.

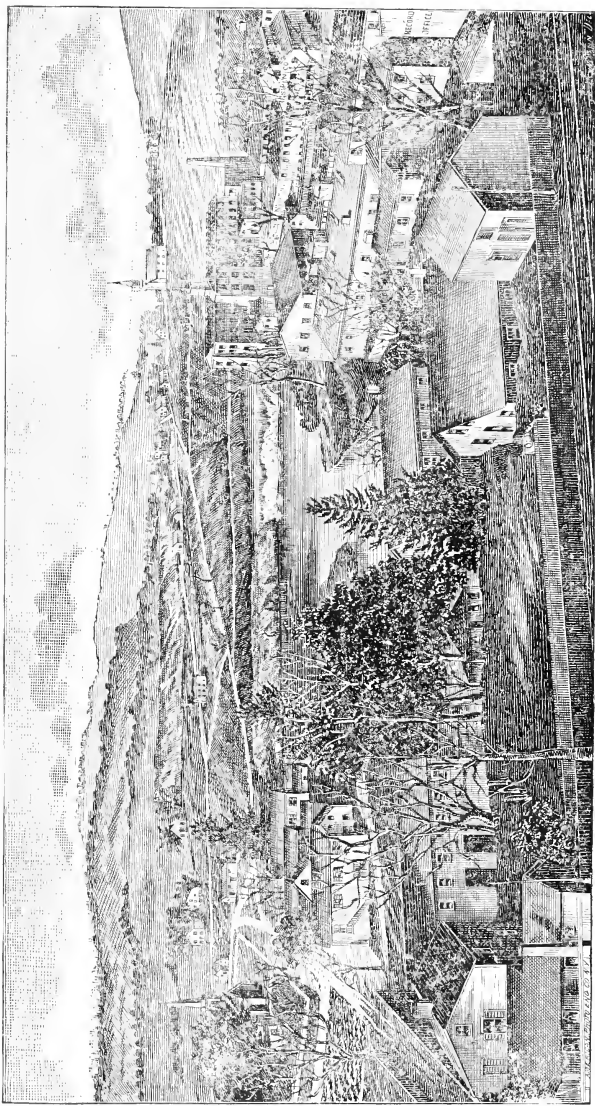

The present church edifice was built by subscription in 1853-4. Almost the only preaching on the hill for the forty years preceding had been by the Methodists, to whom the old Congregational church had been given up. The church was dedicated on Wednesday, October 25th, 1854. The subscriptions that day were $580, leaving a debt of only $300, which was soon paid. Abel Holbrook deeded land Feb. 8, 1862, to Judson English, Eli Gillette and Josiah Bassett, trustees, for the use of the church.

The church has a fund of $400 given by Judson English, who left bonds to the value of $1,000 for the church, but before the church came into possession of them they had depreciated in value so that only $400 was realized.

A legacy of $5,000 was left to the church by Mrs. Cynthia Treat Merrill, of New Haven, who died in 1887, the money to be paid over to the society at the end of ten years from her death. She also left $2,000 to the society on condition that an evening school be maintained several months every year, and $2,000 more for library purposes. The first payment of $5,000 has been made but the conditions of the other two legacies of $2,000 each have not yet matured.

Frederick M. Clemons was a liberal and efficient member of the board of trustees and was also one of the stewards. He was several times elected a member of the board of education of the town of Seymour. He was a member of New Haven Commandery, Knights Templar, whose emblem, the cross and crown, attested his faith in the christian religion. His death, which occurred July 25th, 1886, was a great loss to the Great Hill church.

J. W. Tomlinson has for many years been one of the most efficient members of the church, filling the office of trustee, steward, class leader and Sunday school superintendent. He is a zealous temperance man and is universally respected as a conscientious and upright citizen.

THE FALLS AND VICINITY IN 1872

THE MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES OF SEYMOUR.

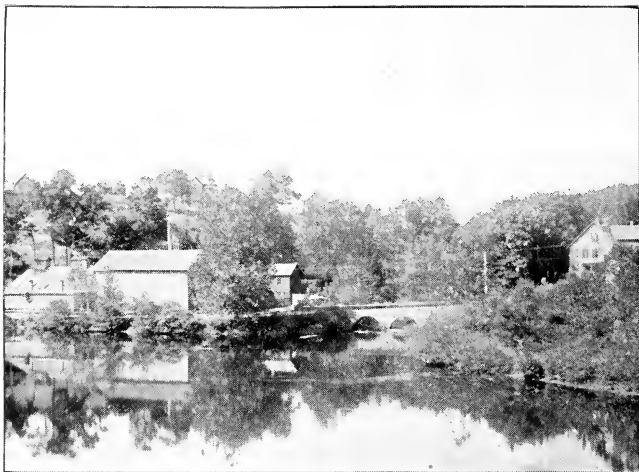

BY W. C. SHARPE.

EVEN in the early years of the settlements here incipient manufacturing industries were carried on in the households of the settlers, industries which were in later years to develop to great magnitude and become leading factors in the growth of the community. The settlers cultivated flax and their wives and daughters were dextrous with the spinning wheel and the hand loom. Flocks of sheep grazed upon the hillsides and in the valleys and their fleeces were utilized in the fabrication of clothing. The spinning wheel for flax and wool was considered a necessary article in a well ordered farm house, and it was often accompanied by the hand loom, reel, and cards, soon to be superseded by carding machines. Mothers and daughters were skilled in making stout and durable cloth, as well as in the preparation of woolen yarn for mittens and stockings. The first record of a mill in this vicinity was by a deed of transfer dated August, 1747, from George Abbott of Derby to Stephen Perkins of New Haven. The mill was located on Little River, it is said about two miles from where it empties into the Naugatuck. This deed transferred to Mr. Perkins "one half of a sawmill, the whole of a gristmill or corn mill, and a dwelling house." The consideration was "five hundred pounds money, old tenor."

The next enterprise recorded was a corn mill built by James Pritchard in 1760 on Little river, near where the James Swan Company's upper mills are located. It appears therefore that Little River was the first stream in this immediate vicinity to be used for mill purposes and has continued to be used from that time with constantly increasing efficiency, both as to the quantity and value of the manufactured products and the number of people employed.

In 1760 Joseph Chuse and John Howd, Sachems, sold to Thomas Perkins of Enfield and Ebenezer Keeney, Joseph Hull, Jr., and John Wooster of Derby, an acre of land on the east side of the river at the Falls, including the water privilege, for the purpose of putting up some iron works, but nothing was done until after Oct. 4, 1763, when Keeney, Hull and Wooster purchased from the Indians one and a half acres of land for a roadway through the Indian field. This deed was signed by Joseph Chuse and John Howd as the chief men of the tribe. The payment was "fifteen pounds lawful money." On this land was erected first a fulling mill, then a sawmill and a grist mill.

THE STONE BRIDGE. STEELE'S FULLING MILL WAS AT THE LEFT

In 1785 John Wooster and Bradford Steele leased for 999 years, for fifteen pounds, "a certain spot or privilege at a place called Rimmon Falls upon the east side of the Naugatuck River" for the purpose of building a blacksmith shop, and erecting a hammer to go by water. They manufactured scythes and did other blacksmith work, setting up a grindstone and other machinery necessary for conducting the business. The deed states that the land had a front of fifty feet on the flume and was next to the river.

About 1790 Nathan Stiles, a son of Benjamin, bought out John Wooster and Ebenezer Keeney, part owners of the property at the Falls. This property consisted of two fulling mills, a saw mill, grist mill and a clothier's shop. The company was reorganized with the following stockholders: Bradford Steele, Sr., George Steele, Bradford Steele, Jr., and Nathan Stiles.

Bradford Steele had his fulling mill and dye shop at the mouth of Little River, and his finishing shop at the top of the hill east of the church. He lived in the old house on the hill until he sold it to Abiel Canfield. He made no cloth, the cloth dressed and finished by him being woven on hand looms in the homes of the people.

A fulling mill and a saw mill were built about 1790, on Bladens Brook, about one mile east on the railroad station, by Mr. Thaddeus Hine of Derby. Mr. Hine sold the property in 1790 to Titus H. Beach, who afterward sold it to Charles Oatman, who carried on the business for a number of years. This property subsequently came into the possession of Sharon Yale Beach, who in 1850 built a paper mill there.

Isaac Baldwin came from Litchfield about 1785 and built a gristmill in Little River near where the James Swan Co.'s middle shops now are.

Gen. David Humphreys, who was to be so closely identified with the interests of the place, came and purchased the Falls property Dec. 13, 1803. The deed states that "Col. David Humphreys, now of Boston, in the commonwealth of Massachusetts," purchased of Bradford Steele, Bradford Steele, Jr., and George Steele, for the sum of $2,647.92, "one certain piece of land lying in said Derby at a place called Rimmon Falls, it being the same tract of land formerly deeded by John Howd and Joseph Chuse, Indians, to John Wooster, Ebenezer Kinney and Joseph Hull, Jr., * * * with all the privileges, together with the sawmill, two fulling mills, clothier's shop, and all the utensils, implements and apparatus belonging to and used in, and appendant and appurtenant in and to the said mills and clothier's shop standing on said land, together with the buildings thereon standing, together with the whole mill dam across said Rimmon Falls."

Gen. Humphreys had while minister to Spain in 1802 imported 100 merino sheep and he chose this place for the headquarters of the sheep raising business as well as for the manufacture of woolen cloth. The great superiority of the wool of the merino sheep being immediately manifest, farmers were everywhere glad to avail themselves of the opportunity to improve their stock.

Gen. Humphreys did not encourage speculation but distributed his sheep judiciously among the farmers at $100 each, a price said to be less than the original cost. When the price rose to $400 he refused to sell, saying that he believed such sales would lead to ruinous speculation. But soon the price of merino bucks went up to $1,500 and a few were even sold as high as $3,000, and ewes sold from $1,000 to $1,500. John Bassett was offered $1,000 by Philo Bassett for a full-blooded merino ewe lamb eight days old and refused to take less than $1,500. A few days after it was killed by a fox. Two young farmers united in buying a buck at $1,500 and the same day it died by being choked with an apple. But such mishaps checked the speculation but little, and it rapidly extended throughout New England, Vermont people in particular being quickly supplied with some of the merinos.

Gen. Humphreys considered it of great importance to the interests of the country that manufactures, especially that of woollen cloths, should be introduced, and went to England, investigated the manufacture of woollen cloths there, and made the acquaintance of John Winterbotham, who was thoroughly informed in every branch of the business. Gen. Humphreys persuaded Mr. Winterbotham to sell his business there and come to this country to establish the business here.

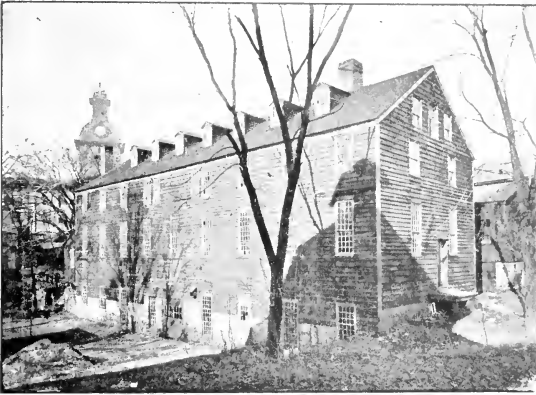

Gen. Humphreys associated with him in business also Captain Thomas Vose of Derby, the business being conducted under the name of T. Vose & Company. They brought over from England Thomas Gilyard, Robert Lees and others, skilled workmen in this line, and in 1806 built a mill for the purpose of manufacturing woollen cloth, the frame being raised on the 5th and 6th of June. This mill is still standing. The "mills and clothiers' shop" purchased as above mentioned, and the people who had acquired considerable skill in the manipulation of wool, formed a considerable nucleus for the new enterprise.

"The name "Chusetown" appears on the Derby records as late as 1804, but was changed by the legislature in that year to Humphreysville in honor of Gen. Humphreys and this name was retained until 1850.

That he might the better carry out his plans Gen. Humphreys made several other purchases of large tracts of lands in the vicinity. He employed a large number of boys in the factory whom he had brought from different parts of the country. For these he established evening and Sunday schools, with competent teachers to instruct them. He also indulged his military taste by organizing them at no light expense as a military company, drilling them himself and furnishing the uniforms.

In 1810 the company was reorganized and the name was changed from T. Vose & Co., to the Humphreysville Manufacturing Company.

OLD WOOLEN MILL BUILT BY GEN. DAVID HUMPHREYS IN 1806.

President Dwight, of Yale College, wrote an interesting sketch of Humphreysville, as he found it in the fall of 1811, which is here given: "Within the limits of Derby, four miles and a half from the mouth of the Naugatuc, is a settlement named by the Legislature, Humphreysville, from the Hon. David Humphreys, formerly Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of Madrid. At this place a ledge of rocks twenty feet in height crosses the river, and forms a perfect dam about two thirds of the distance. The remaining third is closed by an artificial dam. The stream is so large as to furnish an abundance of water at all times for any works which will probably ever be erected on the spot. Those already existing are a grist-mill, a saw-mill, a paper-mill, woolen manufactory, and a cotton manufactory, with all their proper appendages, and a considerable number of other buildings, destined to be the residences of the manufacturers, and for various other purposes.

A strong current of water in a channel, cut through the rock on the Eastern side, sets in motion all the machinery employed in these buildings. By this current are moved the grist-mill; two newly invented shearing machines; a breaker and finisher for carding sheep's wool; a machine for making ravellings; two jennies for spinning sheep's wool, under the roof of the grist-mill; the works in a paper-mill; a picker; two more carding machines for sheep's wool; and a billy with forty spindles in a third building; a fulling-mill; a saw-mill, employed to cut the square timber, boards, laths, &c., for the different edifices, and to shape many of the wooden materials for the machinery; two more fulling-mills on improved principles, immediately connected with the clothier's shop; and the various machinery in a cotton manufactory, a building about one hundred feet long, thirty-six wide, and of four stories, capable of containing two thousand spindles with all their necessary apparatus.

"The houses can accommodate with a comfortable residence about one hundred and fifty persons. Ten others in the neighborhood will furnish comfortable residences for upwards of one hundred and fifty more.

"In 1813; the Legislature, at the instance of Gen. Humphreys, passed a law, constituting the select-men and magistracy of the several towns in which manufactories had been or should be established, visitors of these institutions. This law required the proprietors to control in a manner specified, the morals of all their workmen, and to educate the children, as other children in plain families throughout the State are educated. The visitors were directed to enquire annually, into the manner in which the proprietors conformed to this law. The reports of the visitors in Derby, concerning the establishment at Humphreysville, has been in a high degree honourable both to the proprietor and his people.

"The manufacturers at Humphreysville are esteemed excellent. The best broadcloth made here is considered as inferior to none which is imported. Americans make all the machinery; and have invented several kinds of machines, which are considered as superior to such as have been devised in Europe for the same purposes. Most of the weaving has been done in private families."

Tanneries were among the early enterprises here and the business was carried on both at Great Hill and at Chusetown. The tannery at Great Hill was located at the northeast angle of the crossroads near the schoolhouse. On the 12th of March, 1846, Daniel L. Holbrook sold to Philo Gillette for $12 the corner between the schoolhouse and the distillery, containing 54 rods of land, with one half the water of Broad Brook. The deed mentions that Gillette had built one half of the building 24x36 for a tannery, one half the building and waterpower to be retained by Holbrook for a cidemill and distillery. Holbrook, as assignee of Philo Gillette, sold the property Jan. 5, 1854, for $300, to William Gillette, Asa Hawkins, Judson English and Eli Gillette, who carried on the tanning business for some years as a joint stock company, with Philo Gillette as superintendent. They sold out to Capt. James Baker and the business was soon after discontinued.

There was a tannery on what is now South Main street, just south of the railroad crossing, the power for grinding the bark being supplied by a dam on the east side of the road.

In May, 1822, the company was again reorganized with John W. De Forest, President, and J. Fischer Leaming, Secretary. The capital stock was then 50,000. In 1845 the company sold their cotton factory to William Buffum for $12,000.

Furniture making was one of the early industries here. One man, the ancestor of some of the present people of Seymour, built a dam and a little mill, fitted up with a saw and lathe, and some other labor saving machinery, made bureaus and bedsteads, tables, chairs, cradles and coffins, for his neighbors, and then, to fill in the spare time, made up stock for great numbers of chairs and sent them "knockdown" to New York. They were drawn by an ox team to Derby and taken thence by a sailing vessel to New York. A young man who had been an assistant in the "cabinetmaker's" little shop went to New York with the cargo, put the chairs together and sold them, and remained there as agent for this cabinetmaker and others, and became wealthy. This was George Tomlinson, now living in the first house north of the Great Hill church and nearly ninety years of age.

In 1844 a company was formed under the firm name of Dwight, French & Co., and bought part of the property of the Humphreysville Manufacturing Co. The Humphreysville Copper Co. was organized in 1849, with John W. Dwight as president; directors, Raymond French, Harrison Tomlinson, George Rice and Sheldon Keeney. In 1852 it was reorganized and the capital was increased from $100,000 to $200,000 by the addition of 4,000 shares of $25 each. A large part of the stock was taken in Humphreysville, the bank taking 700 shares. The company in addition to their works in Seymour had a wharf and mill in East Haven, and were in 1853 authorized by the General Assembly to build a breakwater for the protection of their vessels from the surf and winds while loading and unloading.

The Eagle Manufacturing Co. was organized June 27th, 1850, with a stock of $50,000, for the manufacture of goods from silk, wool and cotton. The stock was increased in 1852 to $100,000. In 1855, Geo. P. Shelton was the president, and Harrison Tomlinson secretary.

The American Car Co. was organized in the spring of 1852, with a stock of $150,000, but was soon increased to $200,000. Five large shops were built on the "flat," with track laid to each, and a large business was done for a time. but in 1855 the business was removed to Chicago and Springfield, Ill., and the shops utilized for other purposes. One was fitted up for a hotel, now the Windsor, one is now known as the beehive, and the power shop was afterward a mill for the manufacture of pins.

AUGER AND BIT MAKING.

For nearly a century this place has been noted for the manufacture of augers and bits. Walter French came here from Mansfield, Conn., about 1810 and commenced the manufacture of screw augers by hand. He built a shop near Little River, about half a mile from its mouth, on land now owned by the James Swan Company.

The first double twist screw augers ever offered for sale in New York City were made here by Walter French. He carried a few to the city, no more than he could conveniently carry in a bundle in his hand, and the merchant to whom he first showed them was so enthusiastic over them that he said to Mr. French, "You are an honor to your country." Mr. French was over eighty years of age when he told this to George Leavenworth, now one of the veterans of auger and bit manufacturing. Previous to that time only pod augers, without screws, had been used, and a gouge had been required to start the hole before an auger could be made to work. "But," said the merchant, "here is something that does the whole work." Among old augermakers fifty years ago it was disputed whether Walter French or Jesse Hartson made the first screw augers. Hartson was one of the early augermakers here.

Mr. French had also a shop opposite the corner of West and Beecher streets, at the southeast corner of the place formerly owned by Warren French, son of Walter.

Gilbert & Wooster carried on the manufacture of augers and bits in Bennett Wooster's blacksmith shop, which was located near where the rear of the copper mill now stands. The bits were forged in this shop, while the filing room was in the south part of Ezekiel Gilbert's building, at the corner of Main and Maple streets, and the machinery for polishing was fitted up in the sawmill at the Falls.

Gen. Clark Wooster built an auger shop on the west bank of Little River, just below the sawmill formerly owned by E. L. Hoadley, and employed Walter French to superintend it. This shop was closed in 1844 and Walter French returned to Westville to commence the manufacture of augers there. Wales French bought the shop by the sawmill, and with his brother Warren carried on the business about two years, when Wales also sold out and removed to Westville.

The Globe Works were located on a little stream about half a mile south of the Falls. The dam for this factory was built by Glover Bassett. It was first used by Mr. Radford for a blacksmith shop. Mr. Radford sold the privilege and shop to Albert Steele who used it for the manufacture of furniture and later sold the property to Henry Wheeler and Andrew Hartson who manufactured augers and bits there for several years. The building was then made into a grist mill.

Hiram Upson came from Waterbury to Humphreysville and began the manufacture of augers in a building that stood near where the James Swan Company's upper shop now stands. Mr. Upson was afterwards associated in business with Horace A. Radford and Lucius Tuttle, under the firm name of the Upson Manufacturing Co. The business was carried on where the Novelty works now are at the mouth of Little River. The property was sold by H. A. Radford to Charles Douglass in 1859. The shop was originally built by Timothy Dwight, Sen., son of President Dwight, of Yale, about 1836, and by his heirs sold to H. A. Radford. After a number of changes it became the property of James Swan in 1877.

Raymond French & Co. commenced the manufacturing of augers and other edge tools at Blueville, on Bladen's Brook, July 25, 1832. The dam and shop were built by Newel Johnson in 1830 and sold to Dwight & French. This shop was destroyed by fire July 15th, 1841, but was soon rebuilt.

The business soon ougrew this mill and the power furnished by the stream and Mr. French looked about for a better location and decided to build a dam across the Naugatuck at Kinneytown, about two miles below the Falls. This was a notable undertaking for those days but Mr. French first satisfied himself that beneath the water was a ledge of rock extending the whole width of the stream, making a good foundation for the dam, and then began the work. Anson G. Phelps had been looking over the location and made purchases of land on the east side, but Mr. French outgeneraled him by securing the site and the land on the west side, and built the dam so secretly that there has never since been needed any more than ordinary repairs to the woodwork. Mr. Phelps finally purchased the dam Dec. 5, 1844, and Mr. French's enterprise proved to be the initiatory move which resulted in the present enterprising city of Ansonia.

Mr. French immediately looked about for another location for a mill and with his associates purchased land and water rights near the Falls owned by the Humphreysville Manufacturing Company, and in 1845 built the large brick mill and office building opposite Davis Block, and fitted it up with machinery for the manufacture of augers and bits, plane irons, chisels and drawing knives. The brick used in the construction of the buildings were made on land of Bennett Wooster, a little east of the M. E. church. These works were run without a break, employing a large number of men, for nearly thirty years, Mr. French being the superintendent of the works. The business was later reorganized under the same name, with Norman Sperry, George H. Robinson, David R. Cook and Marcus Sperry as proprietors. Mr. Norman Sperry is now the sole proprietor.

THE F. H. BEECHER'S WORKS.

The firm of French, Swift & Company was organized April 5, 1847, by Warren French, Charles Swift, John F. Marshall, Lemuel Bliss, Henry B. Beecher and Horace Radford, for the manufacture of augers and bits. This factory is situated on Little River about one third of a mile from its mouth. Mr. Beecher finally bought out the other partners and carried on the business for many years, until his death in 1880. The works are now owned by his son, F. H. Beecher.

Warren French, one of the "Six Partners" in the auger works on Beecher street, told the writer many years ago that his father, Walter French, who was the first to make augers in this place, made them first in the old blacksmith shop at the corner of Maple and Pearl streets. At first he worked for Col. Ira Smith, and afterward in company with him.

Twist augers and auger bits and the screw point are admitted to be of American invention, as well as a large proportion of other improvements in the manufacture of these tools, and the probability is that more of these improvements have been originated here than in any other town in the world, evidence of which may be found in the large number of patents issued to James Swan and others engaged in the business here. Appleton's American Encyclopedia, after describing twist and screw point boring implements, says (under date of 1883)—"All these twisted tools are of American invention and were hardly known in England thirty years ago."

George Leavenworth, a veteran augermaker who still plies his trade from day to day, can probably recall the history of the auger and bit business in this place for a longer period than any other person living. He came to Humphreysville, now Seymour, Aug. 17, 1846, to the Humphreysville Manufacturing Co's works, to learn the mysteries of auger making. The shop then stood higher than the road and opposite the shop was Spring Pond, fed by the Rock Spring, and the stream running from it ran on the surface and crossed the roadway from about in front of where Davis Block now stands. Beside the pond and close to the roadway were two large elm trees. There were then about 150 men working in the shop.

Mr. Leavenworth says that of the men working in the shop in 1846 only four are now living, Thomas Cochran, Horace Hurd, William Losee and himself. The last two were carpenters, making boxes for packing and doing other carpenter work about the mill. There was then no railroad and the heavy freight was mostly hauled from New Haven by horse teams. The manufacture of augers and bits is still carried on there, the old company name having been retained.

PAPER MAKING.

Paper making has been an important industry here for nearly a century. The first to establish the manufacture of paper in this place was General Humphreys, who built the first paper mill in 1805. The journal of the mill from October, 1805, to June, 1825, was long preserved. Five names appeared on the time account for October in that year, Thomas Hudson, Chester Jones, Elbridge G. Ware, John Canfield and Philo Smith. This list was soon largely increased, including Major A. A. Stone, Wm. Lewis, Wm. Ball, James Bowman, and many others. Four or five reams of paper a day was the average for the first few years.

At this time the paper was made by hand. An engine for preparing the pulp was in use, but from this it was dipped out into fine sieves of the size the sheet of paper was to be made, shaken about to pack the fiber, a felt or flannel laid on, and the paper tipped out on it. One hundred and twentyfive sheets were so piled up, making, with the felts, a pile about fifteen inches high. This was pressed in a screw press, then taken out of the felts and hung on poles to dry, then pressed in one and a quarter ream bunches. The next day the sheets were "stripped" or separated and pressed in the dry press. Writing paper was laid sheet by sheet between press boards with occasional iron plates and pressed again.

This papermill was sold to Worrull & Hudson, who in 1816 sold it to Ebenezer Fisher and Henry La Forge. The view given below is reduced from a wood engraving used in printing the wrappers for the paper made at this mill.

In 1825 the mill was built up another story and paper was then first made altogether by machinery. In 1831 the mill was sold to the Humphreysville Manufacturing Company who made paper for the New Haven Palladium and other papers. Not only news but tissue and colored papers were produced. Five hundred pounds of paper was then considered a good days work.

In 1833 Chester Jones was foreman and a bevy of lighthearted girls sorted the paper stock and made the old mill ring with their merriment. Among those employed there in the 'thirties were Laura Tomlinson, Sarah Broadwell, Julia Reynolds, Caroline Smith, Jane Cochran, Eliza, Mary and Lucy Bowden, Mariette Scott, Sarah Canfield, Eliza Blackman, Mary Umberfield, and Harriet Beers. Wm. Barber was employed there in 1838-9-40 and won one of the girls of the 'Ville for his bride. She survived him and after the lapse of nearly half a century made her home here again.

In 1843 the mill was leased by George L. Hodge, Sharon Y. Beach and Samuel Roselle, under the firm name of Hodge & Co., this partnership continuing two years. In 1845 the Humphreysville Manufacturing Company, by their special agent, Timothy Dwight, sold the papermill with a five years' lease of the water to Ezekiel Gilbert, Sharon Y. Beach and Samuel Roselle, who carried on the business five years under the firm name of Gilbert, Beach & Co. The water lease expired in 1850, and as the Humphreysville Manufacturing Company declined all offers for a renewal, Mr. Beach bought out the other two partners, pulled down the mill, and put it up again on Bladens Brook, about a mile east of the old location, where the business has now been carried on for fifty-one years. The mill was burned June 14, 1885, but was immediately rebuilt with brick, and reservoirs were made on the hill near by to insure the full supply of pure water so much needed in the manufacture of paper.

Lewis Bunce had a papermill at the mouth of Little River, where the H. A. Matthews Manufacturing Co.'s works now are. This was burned Dec. 23, 1848. The Rimmon Paper Company was then organized with the following stockholders: Andrew W. De Forest, Burritt Hitchcock, Eli Hayes, Horace Riley, James H.

Bidwell and James Wallace, and rebuilt the mill. Burritt Hitchcock was elected president and A. W. DeForest secretary. Mr. Bunce continued in charge.

The mill at Blueville was purchased by DeForest & Hodge Oct. 31, 1845, and changed to a papermill, making fine calendered book paper. They sold out to Smith & Bassett who continued the papermaking but added the grinding of rubber. In 1854 the mill was sold to A. G. Day and the papermaking was discontinued.

The first papermill at the corner of Main and Day streets was built in 1831 under the direction of John Riggs, for John S. Moshier. The machinery was designed and built by Cyrus Lee, millwright, in whose employ were Smith Botsford and Sheldon Hurd. The papermill was completed and commenced running in the spring of 1832. William Bates was employed as superintendent and Samuel Bassett run the paper machine. John Bodge was also employed in the mill, and so continued until his death in 1868, a period of thirtynine years.

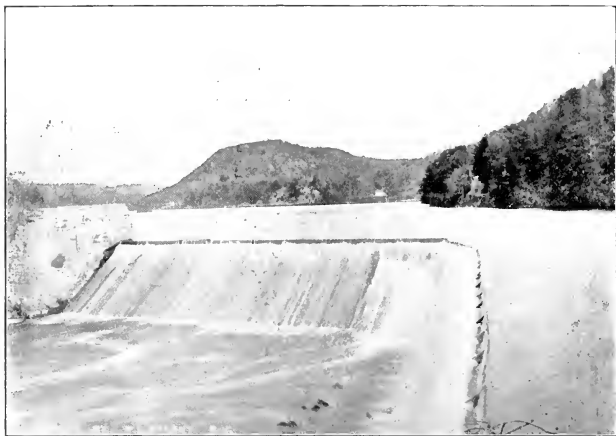

In 1833 the papermill passed into the hands of John C. Wheeler and was leased to Daniel White for three years at an annual rent of $600. Mr. White was then in the paper business at the Falls and his lease there had one year longer to run. Sylvester Smith, who had been in Mr. White's employ one year in the old mill, was now transferred to the superintendency of the new mill. The most of the paper then made in the mill was of a fine quality, for books and periodicals. All paper was then sold on six and nine month's credit. For about four years this mill furnished the paper used by T. Foster of New York in reprinting Blackwood's Magazine and other foreign periodicals.

Mr. White gave up the mill in the spring of 1834 and Mr. Wheeler gave Sylvester Smith a one quarter interest in the business, Wheeler furnishing the capital. Their partnership lasted three years. In April, 1837, the dam was carried away, but was rebuilt before July, and Wheeler then rented the mill to Smith and Bassett for fifty dollars a month, to be paid in wrapping paper. This was the commencement of a partnership which lasted nineteen years. In 1840 Smith & Bassett bought the mill for $4,220, payable in wrapping paper.

Straw was first made into paper in this mill in 1837 and was the first paper made from straw in Connecticut. In January, 1856, Mr. Bassett sold his half of the mill to Mr. Smith. During the time of their partnership a large proportion of the paper made in the mill was straw boards and button boards. In the last twelve years of their partnership the mill was much used in grinding and cleaning rubber, which added largely to the profits of the mill, but in 1855 this branch of the business was closed. In 1866 W. W. Smith took charge of the mill and his father retired from the business, and in May, 1870, the mill was sold to W. W. Smith.

The original dam at the Falls, or so much of it as was not formed by the ledge of rocks which reach two thirds of the way across the river, was built of timber and plank, but in 1850 this was rebuilt in solid masonry by Raymond French.

RIMMON FALLS, ROCK RIMMON BEYOND.

In 1847 French & Dwight began the erection of a dam across the river a quarter of a mile north of the Falls, Mr. French being in charge of the work. After building the abutments and a wall and embankment on the west side the work was suspended, but was resumed in 1866, again under the direction of Mr. French and the work was vigorously pushed forward and the dam was completed at a cost of $65,000. The gates were first closed Oct. 27, 1867. The overflow is about 300 feet long and the fall is about nineteen feet. It floods about two hundred and fifty acres and fur-

THE MILLS AT THE FALLS IN 1808.

The above illustration is a fac-simile of the prints used ninety-three years ago upon the packages of woolen cloth woven in the Humphreys mill. The woolen industry in which water power was first made use of here in the fulling mills, and which had its greater development in the enterprise of General Humphreys in the early years of the last century, made the place widely known for the superior fabrics produced as well as for its being the headquarters for the trade in merino sheep. Gen. Humphreys gave to Charles French, the grandfather of Hon. Carlos French, a power of attorney to act as agent in the management and sale of the stock, a fac-simile of which (reduced in size,) is given on another page.

Know all Men by these Presents, That I David
 Humphreys of Humphreysville, in New Haven
 County, State of Connecticut, do constitute and appoint
 Charles French of said Humphreysville, County & State my true & lawful Attorney, for me & in my name, to manage, receive & collect all monies due for Sheep, heretofore already disposed of, belonging to me, in the States of Vermont, Massachusetts & New Hampshire, and to settle all matters of dispute, which exist or may exist respecting merino sheep belonging to me in those States, or to sue & prosecute to final judgment for me & in my name all matters of dispute which exist respecting merino sheep, and to do all legal acts requisite & necessary to effect the premises. And for the more I do hereby fully empower my said Attorney to let out on hire or spare, such number of my merino & mixed blooded merino rams, and in such manner as he shall judge expedient, & to sign and confirm all that my said Attorney shall do herein for me & in my name. In Testimony, &c. hereof I have hereunto set my hand & Seal at Humphreysville, this 15th Day

David Humphreys

In presence of

D. Humphreys

General Humphreys also gave to Mr. French a letter of instructions of which the following is a copy, with an engraving of General Humphreys' seal, the original being in the possession of Hon. Carlos French.

INSTRUCTIONS TO MR. CHARLES FRENCH.

You will proceed immediately on your way to Vermont, endeavoring to collect in Waterbury, Hartford, at Bellows Falls and elsewhere the money, now due, for merinos sold by yourself. You may let on shares, at the Rates which have been stated to you in a separate Note, the use of Rams for one year, always requiring, even of the most respectable & wealthy farmers, two responsible Bondsmen, for the fulfilment of each Contract. You know this precaution originates from a desire to guard against such fraudulent & illegal proceedings as have already been practiced in Vermont; and particularly in the sale of some full-blooded merinos, now belonging to me. This is likewise in conformity to the general System now adopted, as will appear from the third Circular letter of my agent.

You will next solicit Capt. Pettis & some other well-known & trustworthy Person, to attend with you as witnesses, in your application to Messrs. Lebbins & Jonathan Chace, of Cornish in New Hampshire, for the purpose of recovering the last mentioned merinos from them, without the trouble & expense of a Law Suit which you are directed to commence, unless the affair can be amicably adjusted. To effect this, I am perfectly willing and ready to do everything which can be judged right & equitable, by any impartial Referees—whose opinion shall be final and conclusive, and you are authorized to make any sacrifice in money, which they shall award as a fair compensation for the trouble, expense, disappointment or loss which the said Lebbins & Jonathan Chace may have so unmeritedly experienced or are likely to suffer, in consequence of the unlawful transaction of Elias Gallup in pretending to dispose of the Sheep in the way he has done, without any permission, license or authority for so doing.

Thence you will go to get possession of the half blooded Ram near Hartland, which Col. Oliver Gallup engaged should be returned to me—also one mixed blooded Sheep in the possession of Walker of Hartland, which he has refused to deliver to Capt. Pettis, altho' Hotchkiss gave him an order for the delivery.

You will then proceed to learn from Elias Gallup (at Woodstock) the name & dwelling of the person above Dartmouth College, on the New Hampshire side of the River, who has in his keeping one of the high mixed Bloods of my flock, which went from this Place, at the same time when Gregory conducted those full-bloods to Vermont, which are now in the hands of the Chaces. I was assured, when at Woodstock, by Gallup, there would be no possible difficulty, in recovering & getting back, the said Sheep before mentioned to be above Dartmouth College ; and that it should be effected long before this time. Should any difficulty occur you will apply to Judge Niles, with my best respects and solicitations for his aid, in a particular transaction, with which he is well acquainted. And doubtless he will be the more disposed to render any services in his power, from his having been himself the primary cause of my sending Sheep into Vermont—and which he knows have unfortunately been so unproductive of advantage to me—tho' it is presumed, of great benefit to the State.

After accomplishing these things you will return by the route prescribed.

(Signed)

D. HUMPHREYS.

GEN. HUMPHREY'S FLAG.

This flag was made by the wife of Gen. Humphreys and was used in the military drills to which he accustomed the young men employed in the factory.

Axes were manufactured for some years in a shop on the bank of Little River, where are now the James Swan Co's middle shops, then owned by Clark Wooster. Both broad and narrow axes were made. The accompanying cut represents an old broadaxe which was found by Wm. B. Swan some years ago near where the old shop now stands. It is supposed to have been made by Walter French and is of an excellent design, far better than most of the tools were made at that day and time, proving that Mr. French was a workman of more than ordinary skill and originality. Another axmaker who was employed there and afterward continued in the same business in Ansonia was John A. Bland. After Mr. Wooster discontinued the ax business the building was changed to a gristmill and turning shop.

THE OLD BROADAXE.

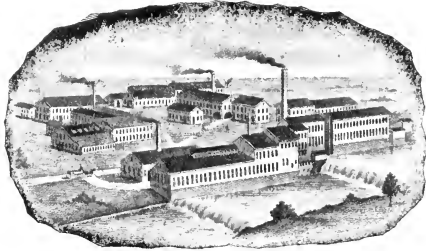

The large brick factory at the Falls was built by the Eagle Manufacturing Company. This company also built the brick store opposite the railroad station. The company discontinued the business and leased the mill to James Leigh, who continued the manufacture of silk goods for a time, after which the mill was closed for some years. The Zurcher brothers carried on the worsted business in this mill for several years, the works being then known as the Kalmia Mills. In the winter of 1869-70 the mill was closed and so remained until 1880.

The United States Pin Company was incorporated in 1860 and for thirtyseven years from that time the manufacture of pins was carried on in the factory southeast of the Humphreys mill. The pins were manufactured by processes and machinery invented by the late Thaddeus Fowler. For a number of years John W. Smith and Mark Lounsbury manufactured the pins on contract, and from 1887 to 1867 the latter operated the works. There were in the factory fortyseven machines, each capable of making 125 pins per minute. The officers of the company are -President, Henry L. Hotchkiss; Secretary and Treasurer, Lewis H. Bristol of New Haven.

Corrugated car springs, the invention of Hon. C. French, were manufactured for a number of years in the basement of the old cotton mill and were extensively used throughout the country.

PRESENT MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES.

W. C. S.

THE JAMES SWAN COMPANY.

The James Swan Company is the leading representative of one of the oldest manufacturing industries in the town, the manufacture of mechanics tools. The Douglas Manufacturing Co.'s auger and bit works at the mouth of the Little River were established in 1856. There were then two factories, one in Seymour for the manufacture of augers, auger bits, etc., the other at Arlington, Vt., for the manufacture of edge tools.

The works were purchased in 1860 by Mr. F. L. Ames, of the firm of Oliver Ames & Sons, who also purchased the exclusive right to manufacture Cook's patent boring implements. Mr. Ames found the factory in Seymour insufficient for the purpose and built a second large factory above the old one, on the same stream. The property was controlled by Mr. Ames until 1873, when it was sold to Thomas Douglass and Richard P. Bruff. Under their management still further enlargement was made, a third factory further up the stream being hired from Mr. James Swan who had been identified with the business as superintendent and manager since June, 1865.

In 1874 the property passed into the hands of Mr. James Flint and the Russell & Erwin Manufacturing Co. of New York, and was incorporated in that year. In 1876 the auger and bit business was concentrated in the upper shops, and the edge tool work at Arlington was brought to Seymour and carried on in the middle shops.

The works were purchased by Mr. Swan in 1877 and he has since had the entire control. From a small beginning the business has grown steadily until more than a hundred different kind of tools are manufactured, including all varieties of chisels, gouges, drawing knives, screwdrivers, augers, bits, gimlets, hollow augers, bung borers, Cook's and Jennings' bits, boring machines, etc.

Mr. Swan has originated many improvements in mechanics' tools of various kinds and in the mode of manufacture and has probably taken out more patents for improvements in bits than any other person. His improvements include a patent expansion bit, his "No. 7 Perfect" augers and bits, patented in England and America; and his concave cut bits, which for certain lines of work are unequalled by any other bits made. This business has been enlarged under the management of Mr. Swan until it is one of the largest enterprises in the town. The business is now owned by The James Swan Company, incorporated in November, 1865, with a capital of $125,000, James Swan being president and treasurer, David Torrance is secretary, Wm. B. Swan is superintendent of the auger and bit works, and John Swan is superintendent of the chisel and edge tool works.

About a hundred and twentyfive skilled mechanics are employed and the class of goods manufactured have no superior in their line. Many of the workmen have been in the employ of this establishment from twenty to twenty years, and in that time have built themselves nice homes.

One important feature of the establishment is a reservoir covering something over seventy acres, in the town of Oxford, in a valley adjacent to Moose Hill and Five Mile Hill, which keeps up the supply of water during a good share of the dry season. Should this run low they have steam engines in each factory, furnishing ample power whenever required. There are also powerful force pumps with some two thousand feet of hose, ready for instant use. The whole constitutes one of the most complete establishments in the country for the manufacture of mechanics' tools.

A large export trade is done, the goods being favorably known in Europe, South America and Australia. They took premiums at the American Institute Fair in 1865, at the Paris Exposition in 1867, at the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia in 1876, and at the Paris Exposition in 1878. They took the first prize at the exposition in Sydney, Australia, in 1879, and at the New Orleans Exposition in 1885.

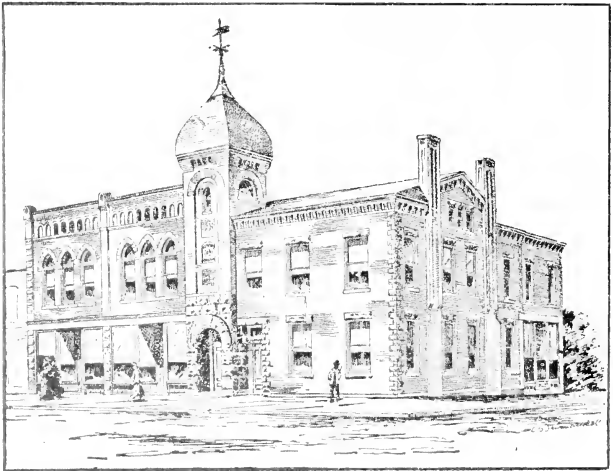

THE HUMPHREYSVILLE MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

The Humphreysville Manufacturing Company has had an unbroken existence since 1806. The principal line of manufacture by the company for more than half a century has been augers and bits and the business is still carried on in the buildings erected for that purpose in 1845, though other buildings have been added.

Mr. Norman Sperry is the present owner and has been the manager since 1875. The buildings are as follows: main building 60x80, two stories; office and shipping department, 20x30, two stories; three forging rooms, 30x50, 20x35, and 20x30, respectively. The goods manufactured consist of the common auger, auger bits, car bits, boring machine augers and Jennings pattern bits, the goods being widely known for the excellence of their material and workmanship.

THE FOWLER NAIL COMPANY.

The Fowler Nail Company was organized and incorporated in 1866 with a capital of $60,000, for the manufacture of Vulcan horseshoe nails, the machinery and process being the invention of Thaddeus Fowler, from whom the company was named. These nails, which were the first satisfactory machine pointed horseshoe nails, have won a reputation for reliability under the most difficult tests, which has made a demand for them throughout the United States and in foreign countries. The officers of the company are Carlos French president and treasurer, Louis H. Bristol secretary, and Raymond T. French assistant treasurer.

THE FOWLER NAIL CO'S WORKS.

The business was first begun in the Humphreys mill but soon increased to such an extent that a larger building was necessary and the property now occupied was purchased. The main building had been erected for the manufacture of wire, but had not been occupied for that purpose. Additional buildings have been erected and for thirtyfive years the company has given employment to a large number of people and has paid them liberally, contributing largely to the prosperity of the community.

THE TINGUE MANUFACTURING CO'S WORKS.

The Tingue Manufacturing Company was organized in 1885 by John H. Tingue, who purchased the brick mill and other buildings at the Falls. The company has a capital of $200,000 and began with John H. Tingue as president and treasurer and Charles Coupland as general manager. On the death of the former W. J. Tingue succeeded to the presidency of the corporation. The principal product of the mill for many years was mohair plush, which was manufactured by machinery and processes made possible by the ingenuity of the late Charles Coupland, who in 1880 invented a new and very speedy way of weaving mohair pile goods by a process which was a radical departure from all previous methods. Until the business was established here this line of goods was manufactured only in Europe. The mohair consists of the fleece of the Angora goat, whose home is in Asia Minor, but has since been imported and bred in this country.

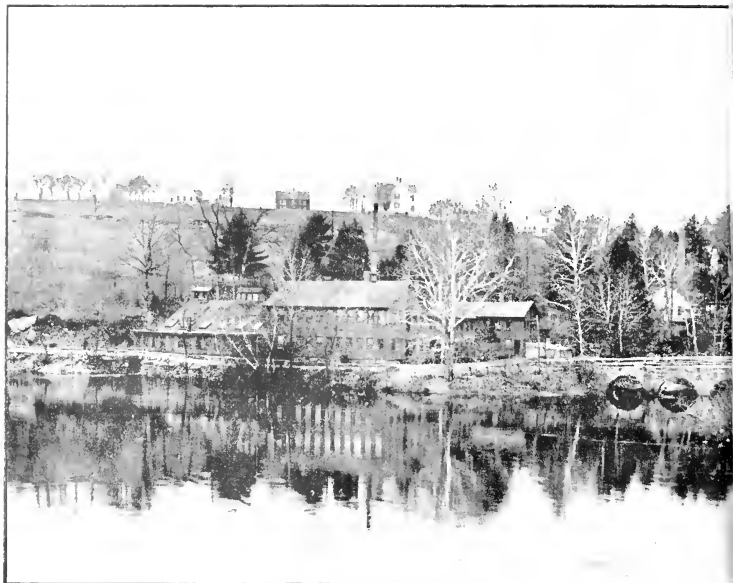

SOUTHEASTERLY VIEW OF THE TINGLE MANUFACTURING CO'S WORKS.

GARRITT & BEACH.

This firm has been engaged in the manufacture of German pattern bits, electricians' and bellhangers' bits and gimlets, double cut gimlets, screwdriver bits, reamers, &c., for twentysix years, and the goods manufactured by them are admitted to be of the best made. Mr. Garritt is a native of Litchfield, a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., and of Mechanics' Lodge, I. O. O. F., and is one of Seymour's most esteemed business men. Mr. Beach is a native of Cheshire and served in the War of the Rebellion as Sergeant in Company B, 20th Connecticut Volunteers, and was a participant in the famous battle of Chancellorsville. In 1877 he represented the town of Seymour in the General Assembly.

THE H. A. MATTHEWS MFG. CO'S WORKS AND CHURCH HILL.

The H. A. Matthews Manufacturing Company, capital $85,000, was organized in 1890 for the manufacture of stove trimmings and other hardware, and in 1895 added the making of bicycle parts. Their works at the mouth of Little River have been enlarged and greatly improved, and now include the main building 36x125, an annex 24x89, an office and stock room, and a boiler house. The machinery is of the most improved patterns and includes mammoth presses the largest of which has a weight of nine tons. The works turn out numerous specialties in brass, steel and composition metal. The officers of the company are James Swan, president; Carlos French, vice-president; Geo. E. Matthies, secretary; and F. H. Beecher, treasurer and manager.

THE NEW HAVEN COPPER CO'S WORKS.

The New Haven Copper Company, manufacturers of braziers and sheathing copper, was organized in 1848, and the large stone building now in use was then erected on land which a century before was every spring planted with corn by Mauwehu, better known as Joe Chuse. For many years before the building of the mill Bennett Wooster's blacksmith shop stood where the flume now is. When the wheelpit was dug large springs were struck which so flooded the pit that it was with difficulty that the water could be lowered sufficiently to permit laying the foundations for the walls.

In 1860 this became the property of W. W. Goddard of Boston, who knowing that in order to make the business a success he must have a man to direct it who was master of the work in all its branches, employed for this responsible position Mr. Thomas James, who had learned the trade in Wales, where his ancestors for several generations had been engaged in the manufacture of copper.

In 1864 Mr. Goddard, who had other large interests which required his attention, sold the business here to Hendricks & Lissberger, and it was conducted by them until March 13, 1872, when it was reorganized with the following stockholders: Samuel Holmes, Thomas James, Franklin Farrell and Lazarus Lissberger. Mr. Lissberger was elected President, Samuel Holmes Secretary and Treasurer, and Thomas James Superintendent and Manager. From the commencement of Mr. James' management until his death it was a grand success in every way, giving employment to a good number of men who held him in high esteem and respect.

The process adopted by the company for the finishing of their polished copper is the invention of Thomas James, patented Sept. 12, 1876. By means of it the gloss on the polished copper remains permanent, whereas, by the old method of polishing, it was liable to become tarnished in a very short time. It has proved highly satisfactory and has gained for this product of the company an enviable reputation.

The buildings of the company are extensive. The dimensions of the principal ones are as follows: main rolling mill, 100x200 feet containing ten sets of rollers. The power used in this building is supplied by a steam engine and boilers of 250 horse power and four turbine water wheels aggregating 250 horse power, making altogether five hundred horse power for the rolling mill. The stamping shop covers an area of 50x70 feet; the polished copper department, 50x90 feet.

This company is also largely engaged in the manufacture of augers and bits, turning out a very superior line of goods. The forging room, bit and auger shop are 60x125 feet. The latter building derives its power from a turbine waterwheel of seventy horse power. There are also two gasoline engines of twentyfive horse power each, for use in time of low water.

The various departments necessitate the employment of from 100 to 125 skilled workmen and their long familiarity with the work and intelligent use of the knowledge gained by experience, enables them to manufacture superior goods which sustain the well-earned reputation of the company. In their success the town has also prospered, as they are public-spirited and liberal men, and always ready to aid in the advancement of the best interests of the community.

The capital stock is $200,000. The present officers are Thomas L. James, president; Lewis A. Camp, secretary; Frederick A. Rugg, treasurer; and George A. James, superintendent.

W. R. BRIXEY'S KERITE TELEGRAPH CABLE WORKS.

Mr. W. R. Brixey, proprietor of the Kerite Insulated Wire and Cable Works, and manufacturer of Kerite Insulated wire and cables, has been connected with the works for more than twenty years and in 1892 became the sole owner. The works were first established by Austin G. Day, who in 1854 purchased the property and fitted up machinery for the manufacture of hard rubber goods and insulated electric wires. Mr. Day was the inventor of many improvements in the manufacture of rubber and in making submarine telegraph cable took the lead of all competitors.

Mr. Brixey has largely increased the plant and has added to the facilities for the speedy execution of large orders. At the World's Fair, his exhibit, which was located near the head of the main stairway of the Electrical Building, was one of the finest, and after the most thorough tests and trials, and upon thorough examination the only medals and awards given to high grade insulated wires and cables were awarded to W. R. Brixey, for excellence of material and construction, high insulation, and reliability and durability demonstrated by prolonged service under exacting conditions.

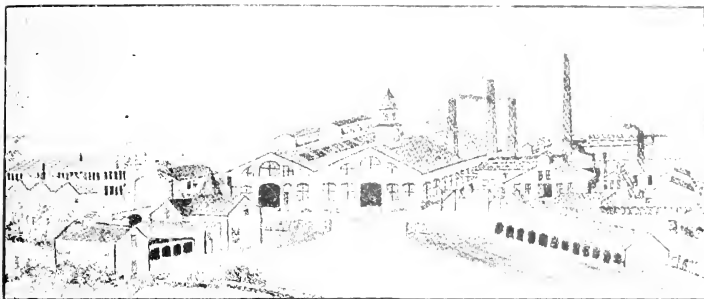

Mr. Brixey has been the manufacturer of submarine, aerial, and underground electric cables for the Western Union Telegraph Co., Postal Telegraph Co., N. Y. Telephone Co., and other large corporations, and for the United States government, furnishing a number of cables for the Philippines and for Alaska.

He constructed and placed in position for the New York Central railroad for their block signal system the longest aerial cable ever made in this country, extending from Albany to Buffalo, a distance of three hundred miles. He also furnished the underground cable for the Havana Street Railway Co., this contract alone amounting to $200,000.

RESIDENCE OF W. R. BRIXEY.

The residence of Mr. Brixey is pleasantly located in the valley a little west of the Kerite works and is surrounded by shade trees and tastefully laid out grounds, and the house is one of the finest homes in the Naugatuck valley.

THE SEYMOUR MANUFACTURING COMPANY'S WORKS

The Seymour Manufacturing Company was organized in 1878 and incorporated in 1880. The capital is now $500,000. The officers are: president, Chas H. Pine; secretary and treasurer, W. H. H. Wooster; superintendent, L. T. Wooster; assistant treasurer, G. E. Matthies. The company manufactures sheet brass, wires, rods and tubing for various uses, and copper wire for telephone and telegraph purposes, electric roads, etc. A specialty is made of German silver for table ware and many other purposes. The company employs about 250 men and does a large business.

THE SEYMOUR ELECTRIC LIGHT CO

The Seymour Electric Light Company, incorporated in 1879, has a capital of $28,000. The company has the contract for the town lighting and furnishes arc or incandescent lights to factories, stores, public buildings and residences. The premises occupied by the plant comprise a substantial brick building, 30x80 feet in area, fully equipped with the latest improved electric appliances, including an arc dynamo of thirty lights and two incandescent dynamos of 1,650 lights.

The officers of the company are James Swan, President; O. L. Dibble, Secretary; and F. H. Beecher, Treasurer and Manager.

THE S. Y. BEACH PAPER CO.'S WORKS

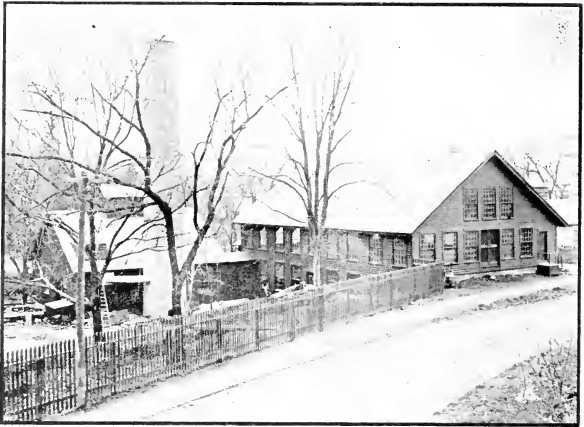

This business is a continuation of that established at the Falls in 1805, S. Y. Beach having been identified with it from 1843 until his death in 1899. The S. Y. Beach Paper Company was organized in 1880 with a capital of $10,000, the stockholders being George W. Beach of Waterbury, and Andrew Y. Beach, Sharon D. Beach and Theodore B. Beach, of Seymour, all sons of the late S. Y. Beach. G. W. Beach is the President, T. B. Beach Secretary, and S. D. Beach Treasurer and manager.

THE FALLS IN TIME OF FLOOD.

H. P. AND E. DAY.

This firm manufactures vulcanized hard rubber goods, including fountain pens and propelling pencils and penholders. The rubber business has been carried on in the present location for fiftyfive years during which time have been made most of the inventions by the aid of which the goods and processes of manufacture now in use have been perfected. A large force of skilled workmen is employed in producing the great variety of hard rubber goods manufactured which in beauty of finish, in plain, chased and colored fountain pen holders and pencils cannot be excelled.

THE RIMMON MANUFACTURING CO'S WORKS.

The Rimmon Manufacturing Company was organized January 10th, 1900, with a capital of $30,000, paid in. The plant of the company covers over an acre of ground and is situated on Main and Day streets. It has a good location, being but a short distance from the depot, and has a good water power. The main building is 48x72 feet, with an addition 22x44 feet. The muffle building is 36x36 feet and the Japan building 20x32 feet. This company manufactures brass and other metal goods, eyelets for shoes, corsets and many other purposes, in large quantities, for domestic and foreign trade. Some of the eyelets are exported to Australia. G. E. Matthies is the president of the company, C. W. Michaels, formerly in business at Yalesville, Ct., is secretary and treasurer, and Thomas A. Perrins is the superintendent. The company is well organized and well equipped to do business and is well managed.

THE HORN BUTTON WORKS.

The manufacture of horn buttons was established here in 1900, by Geo. C. Lees, in the Humphreys mill. Very ingenious machinery has been fitted up for the work and a large business is done. The proprietor is assisted in the management of the business by his brother, John H. Lees.

THE SEYMOUR IRON FOUNDRY

The Seymour Iron Foundry was established by Edward A. Klatt in 1898. The main building is 50 by 100 feet, with an ell 20 by 45 feet, an office building 20 by 30 feet, two stories, and several smaller buildings for storage and other purposes incidental to the business. All the water used in the foundry, for steam, etc., is supplied by a large spring on the premises. About thirty men are employed. Mr. Klatt superintends the work, participating in the finer mechanical part of the molding and casting, and to his ability and versatility the success of the foundry is due. He is a native of Maine, but since May 1st, 1898, has been a resident of Seymour.

JAMES M. SMITH'S MACHINE WORKS.

James M. Smith, manufacturer of lathes and tools for turning hard rubber, ivory and brass; patent drill chucks and patent boring tool holders, and special machinery, has carried on the business here for thirty years, in the Humphreys mill. Mr. Smith is the inventor of an improved drill chuck and patent boring tool holder.

which, with the turning lathes manufactured by him, have had a large sale in the cities and manufacturing towns throughout the United States. His son, Frank T. Smith, is now associated with him in the business.

THE ARETHUSA SPRING WATER CO.'S WORKS.

The Arethusa Spring Water Company of Seymour was organized in 1892 by Hon. Carlos French, after having the water from the spring thoroughly tested and ascertaining that it is of exceptional purity. The water contains but one and three fourths grains of mineral matter to the gallon, and in respect to chlorine it is shown to be almost of perfect purity. Large buildings were erected for bottling, storage, etc., the storage building alone being 30 by 100 feet. The laboratories are provided with every needed facility that science or mechanical ingenuity could devise, and the water, both plain and sparkling, is shipped to great distances. The Arethusa Ginger Ale which is made and bottled at the spring, rivals the famous Belfast product. The office of the Company is in the Humphreys Building.

THE SEYMOUR WATER COMPANY

The Seymour Water Company was organized May 9, 1898, and work was begun as soon as the necessary surveys and purchases of land could be made, and the works were completed in the spring of 1899. The reservoir is about a half a mile northwest of Pinesbridge, in a secluded valley, removed from residences, and in an ideal location for absence of contamination. The reservoir is fed by a stream which winds among the hillsides of a rocky section of country, with cool springs which assure a good quality of water for household use.

BANK STREET—LOOKING TOWARD THE COVERED BRIDGE

There is a fall of about 230 feet to the level of the central part of Seymour, in the vicinity of the railway station, giving a pressure of 110 pounds to the inch and therefore ample force for most effective use in case of fires, for which nearly fifty hydrants have been placed where most likely to be needed.

The capital is $60,000. The officers of the company are : W. H. Wooster President, and D. A. Blakesley Secretary and Treasurer. The directors are Hon. Carlos French, W. H. H. Wooster, James Swan, C. W. Blakeslee, D. A. Blakeslee, D. W. Blakeslee, and Clarence Blakeslee.

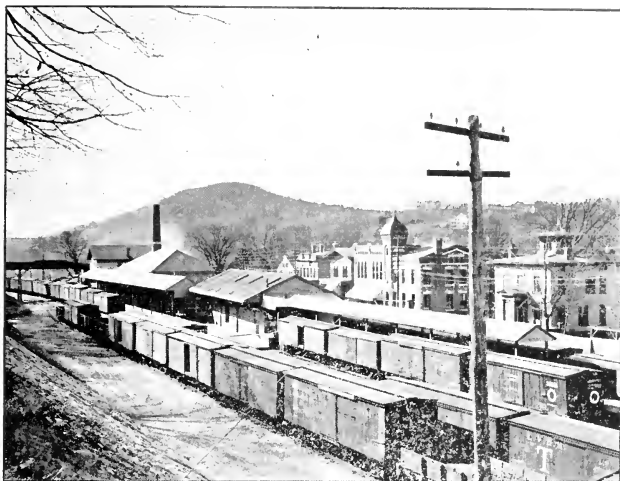

THE NEW DEPOT

An account of the industries of Seymour would not be complete without mention of the facilities for transportation upon which they all depend. The Naugatuck railroad, built a little more than half a century ago, now known as the Naugatuck Division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R., is one of the most important and best paying branches of that system and affords every possible facility to local enterprises. This railroad has contributed largely to building up the industries of the valley, while they in turn have repaid by adding to the profits of the road both in freight and passenger traffic.

The first locomotive over the road reached Seymour May 10th, 1849, and the first passenger train May 14th. Sixteen passenger trains now arrive and depart daily and bring the town within easy reach of the chief cities of this state and of the metropolis.

The present handsome passenger station was built in 1898 and is a worthy addition to the many fine edifices in the town.

THE SEYMOUR RECORD.

The RECORD was established by W. C. Sharpe in 1871, previous to which time there was no paper published in any of the towns between Derby and Waterbury. It was at first a small eight page sheet, changing in September, 1886, to a six column quarto.

The RECORD has been conducted as a local family newspaper, giving the greater prominence to matters of interest to the people of Seymour and adjoining towns, and has from time to time contained engravings of public buildings, factories and prominent people of the place, with occasional historical sketches, both by the editor and by people of Seymour and neighboring towns who have contributed valuable articles on the early history of their several communities, so that the files of the RECORD are a mine of information both in regard to current events and early history.

The above view is an interesting one not only from the present objects of interest shown, but from the scene of a large share of the activities of the early years of the settlement. The hill upon the left, showing a broad area of meadow land, with the Church of St. Augustine on the extreme left, and clusters of houses above and below, was known in the early times as Indian Hill, but in later years was called the Promised Land. The hill at the right was known 130 years ago as Success Hill.

The road seen leading up the hill to the right is a section of the old "Water berry road," leading from Derby to Waterbury, mentioned as a boundary a century and a half ago. At the foot of the hill, along the riverside, is a row of buildings which then made up a thriving settlement and an important point; the road branching westward across the ford of the Naugatuck, below the Falls, toward Oxford and Woodbury. Half way up the hill was a tannery, and on the brow of the hill the famous Whittemore and Dayton taverns, club rooms and resting places for man and beast.

CHAPTER III.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

BY REV. H. A. CAMPBELL.

CONTENTS : The High School—Second Street—Bell School—Cedar Ridge
Bungay—Great Hill.

THE HIGH SCHOOL. The first opportunity for higher education was given by the opening of what is known as the "Humphreysville Academy," in 1849, the same year that the railroad entered the village. The first principal was George B. Glendenning, who taught the English studies, Greek and Latin also French and Music. The first year there were 47 scholars. This academy was located on Broad street opposite Pine, and occupied the building that was formerly used as the Congregational church on South Main street. In 1851 the Humphreysville High School Association was incorporated, and the shares were to be $25 each, and the management was invested in a board of five trustees, and the teachers were Prof. Gay and Frederick Durand. In accordance with the new state law, in October, 1864, the town authorized a new Union High School to be established by the following committee, who were also to superintend the same, independent of the school society: Burton W. Smith, Harvey Hotchkiss, and George W. Divine. The old Glendenning building on Broad street was leased for the school, and the first teacher was Miss Hermance. Besides the high school, there were two intermediate grades.

The consolidated district was established by the town in October, 1868, including all the schools in town, and the following school committee was elected, Eli Gillett, C. W. Storrs, J. W. Bassett, Joshua Kendall, C. W. James, Harpin Riggs, Joel R. Chatfield, Peter Worth and Henry Davis.

Feb, 1, 1869, the town voted to purchase a lot on Pine street, known as the "Pines," on which to build a schoolhouse to accommodate 160 scholars. This lot was secured for $700, but objections began to be raised which delayed building. In 1889 the "Pines" lot was converted into a public park. Many were not pleased with the location, because of the nearness to the river, the freshets, the mist from the Falls, not being central, and numerous other objections. The other location preferred was where the schoolhouse now stands, the west side of the river, on the corner of Bank and Martha streets. This was a lot containing about two acres, belonging to Mrs. M. G. Divine, and was purchased for $3,000. The work for the new High School house began in June, 1884. The architect was L. W. Robinson of New Haven.

Taking all things into consideration, the town was wise in its final decision as to the location, and much credit is due to Mr. James Swan and Thomas James, in bringing this about. The sum of $40,000 was appropriated for the land and buildings. The building is of brick, with white stone trimmings, and a handsome tower adds grace and beauty to the building, which is 65x72 on the ground, and has nine commodious rooms with ample dressing rooms and seating accommodations, up to the present year, there being 63 scholars in one room. The heating and ventilating apparatus are of the most improved patterns. The general appearance of the High School is of the first order, having a fine terrace wall in front, concrete walks, a handsome lawn, an ample play ground, and ornamented by a number of trees. In the summer the front lawn is beautified by a handsome bed of flowers.

The building committee was composed of James Swan, W. H. H. Wooster, Edmund Day, Carlos French, Thomas James, and Frank H. Beecher, who served as secretary and treasurer, and was very efficient in the prosecution of the work.

The work on the building was of the first class, both on the exterior and interior. The interior is equally pleasant and attractive, there being much pride taken in keeping the rooms neat and fresh as new. On each floor there is drinking water, coming from a spring on the hill near by. This water supply was furnished by James Swan, and given to the school. The building was occupied in the fall of 1886. There are 456 scholars in the nine rooms, there being 62 in the High School room, No. 9. The school library contains 250 volumes, all of which are select works adapted for the use of the schools. In addition to this, the town provides all the school books. The apparatus used in connection with the scientific studies is ample to illustrate the branches that are taught in the course, such as Natural Philosophy, Electricity, besides microscopes, botanical specimens, and aids in the study of Physiology. The apparatus is valued at about $300. The valuable collection of maps makes the apparatus complete for all departments.

Besides the English and College Preparatory courses which are somewhat elective, aiming at practical education, there are the departments of Music and Drawing. That of music has proven of much benefit to the scholars, and that of drawing develops a long neglected talent. The principals since 1886 were W. H. Angleton, 1886-1890, E. C. Stiles, 1890-1898, E. C. Broome, 1898-1900, and A. H. Kirtland, 1900. The Seymour High School is well known in educational circles as being one of the best equipped and most efficient schools of its size in the state.

The members of the school board are, James Swan, Chairman; L. A. Camp, Secretary and Visitor; F. A. Rugg, Treasurer; W. Schaeffer, Visitor; T. L. James, Visitor; Albert E. Clark, H. S. Halligan, W. H. H. Wooster and John Earley, the three last constitute the Finance Committee. T. L. James is always a welcome visitor in all the schools. His tact and good cheer have made smooth the way for many teachers.

In all the public schools there are 667 scholars.

THE SECOND STREET SCHOOL grew out of a select school which was held in 1847, in a building a little south of the pin shop, on the bank of the river and on the old road extending from the Broad street bridge to a point a little west of the engine house. This building was taken for the district school, and was moved to a lot about west of the engine house. At the time of the building of the car shops, the schoolhouse suffered other movings, until finally it was moved to its present location at the upper end of Second street.

BELL SCHOOL. As early as 1769, Joseph Johnson deeded a piece of land on the east side of Pearl street near the Smith Tyrrell place, or nearly opposite Grand street, for a school-house. This building was occupied for forty years, and was known as the sixth district. In 1799 this district was known as the Chusetown district. This same year, the teacher received $11.00 a month for six months school. This school seemed to be under the management of the "First School Society." In 1810-1811, or about this time the school was divided and one was held in a room belonging to Silas Baldwin. A Silas Baldwin lived in the first old house below the Congregational cemetery on the east side of the road. In 1812 the town voted that there should be two schools held in this district, "One Man School and one Woman School, & the free money be equally divided according to the time the school is kept."

About 1814-16 a school building was erected on the site of the present Bell schoolhouse, a building of two stories, also having a tower and bell. A joint stock company owned this school house, the shares being $25.00 each. The deed was given, June 1, 1816. These shares were held by Newell Johnson, John Wheeler, Elias Gilbert, Bradford Steele, John Humphreys, Jr., Gen. David Humphreys, Chester Jones, Seba Moulthrop, Stiles Johnson, Jesse Johnson, Edmund Steele, John Riggs, Silas Baldwin, Samuel B. Hine, Joseph Johnson, Josiah Swift and David Thompson.

In 1820 the first stove was purchased for this school to take the place of a fireplace. In 1830 the School Society purchased the house.

The district was divided in 1837, the north part being called the seventh district, which is known in recent years as Cedar Ridge. Between 1840-43 the town made arrangements to cut down the Bell school-house to one story, making a neat attractive building, located on the rocks on High street near Pearl. During these changes the bell was sold.

THE CEDAR RIDGE SCHOOL HOUSE

CEDAR RIDGE. Cedar Ridge School became a district in 1837, then the seventh district. The location was selected by Joel White, Isaac White and Joel R. Chatfield, being located on Pearl street south of Bladen's Brook. The first house was built of stone, 18x25 x7¹/₂feet, with six windows. The building was plastered inside and out, the whole being completed for $175.00. Solomon Tyrrell was the builder. In 1868 the town voted to build a new school house, and Smith Botsford, Ashbel Storrs and Joel R. Chatfield were appointed as the building committee. The house was to be 34x27 and one half feet, and to be completed and furnished for $1,700.00.

BUNGAY SCHOOL. There was a district formed on the west side of the river as early as Dec. 27th, 1779, called the Shrub Oak district. This school is referred to in the Old Landmarks. The school-house was located on West street by the path leading to Swan's upper shops, where Mrs. Ann Stephens spent the first of her school days. Later the building was moved to the lot in the fork of the roads opposite Trinity cemetery; and still later a new building was erected on Cedar street, on the rocks west of the Congregational church. This district included a portion of Great Hill region at first, but in the course of time there was a demand for a school on the crown of the hill on the Bungay road, which was called the Bungay school, the center of a new district.

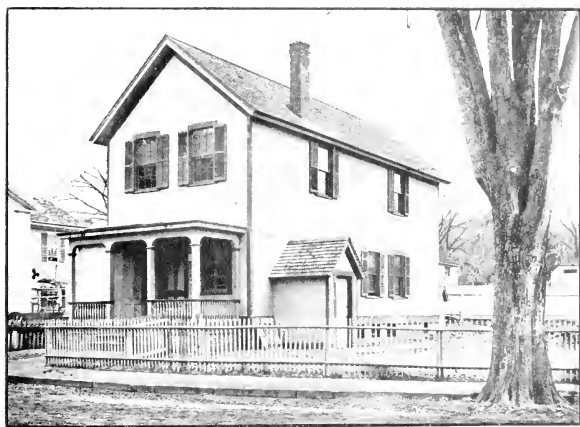

GREAT HILL SCHOOL. This school was the eighth district of the town of Derby, and the first district of the town of Seymour. The earliest records extend back only to 1765, but doubtless there were school privileges before this date. In 1767 Henry Tomlinson was the district committeeman and Samuel Bassett was the collector of the school rates. The name of Henry Wooster was the first name of any teacher found in the records, 1770, and the following families were in this district as patrons of the school; Benjamin Tomlinson, Micah Poole, Jonathan Miles, Samuel Russell, Joseph Canfield, George Beard, Capt. John Lum, James Manville, Zachariah Fairchild and John Hawley.

The devotion of the people to the Revolutionary war was so great that the school doubtless was suspended between 1781-1784, there being no records for those years.

In 1784 measures were taken to build a house on the highway near the home of John Hawley. In 1801 summer school was held in the Great Hill meeting house until cold weather, when it was continued in the school-house. In 1810 it was "voted that wood per load should be 84 cents, and boarding the teacher 7 cents per meal, or 87½ cents per week." A new house was erected in 1832, and the present schoolhouse was built on a new location, and was finished at the beginning of the year 1878. The school on Great Hill has been one of the prosperous schools of the town, as the history in the Old Landmarks has already indicated.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

THE SEYMOUR FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY was established in 1892. Since its organization, it has become one of Seymour's popular institutions, occupying the second floor of the town building on Second street. The reports of the librarian, Miss Minnie B. Cotter, show that there are more than 2,911 volumes on its shelves, and that during the year 1900, the number of books given out was 9,495, there being 560 names in the registration book.

COURT HOUSE AND PUBLIC LIBRARY

The library has received $300 from the town annually for current expenses and new books, and this year the appropriation has been increased to $400.

There is also a reading room attached, supplied with the best American magazines and illustrated weeklies, also a number of daily and weekly papers, altogether making an attractive place in which to spend an evening with the best in literature, the books upon the shelves of the library being available to transient readers, as well as the periodicals upon the tables.

The present officials are: President, James Swan; Vice-President, Mrs. L. A. Camp, Treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Radford; Secretary, Rev. H. A. Campbell. The other directors are: Hon. Carlos French, Mrs. T. L. James, W. C. Sharpe, Miss Orilla E. Hurlburt and A. H. Kirtland. Miss Minnie Cotter is the librarian.

VALLEY NATIONAL BANK.

Valley National Bank, Seymour, Capital $50,000. President, W. L. Ward; Vice President, F. A. Rugg; Directors, W. L. Ward, T. B. Beach, F. A. Rugg, C. E. Fairchild, C. H. Lounsbury, Clayton S. Boies, D. T. Dunham, O. C. Osborn of Oxford, and J. H. Whittemore of Naugatuck.

VALLEY NATIONAL BANK.

The charter was granted July 16, 1900, and the bank was opened for the transaction of business Aug. 14, 1900. The bank is located on the corner of Main and Bank streets, in the building erected for banking purposes nearly a half century ago.

CHAPTER IV.

THE SEYMOUR FIRE DEPARTMENT.

(BY W. C. S.)

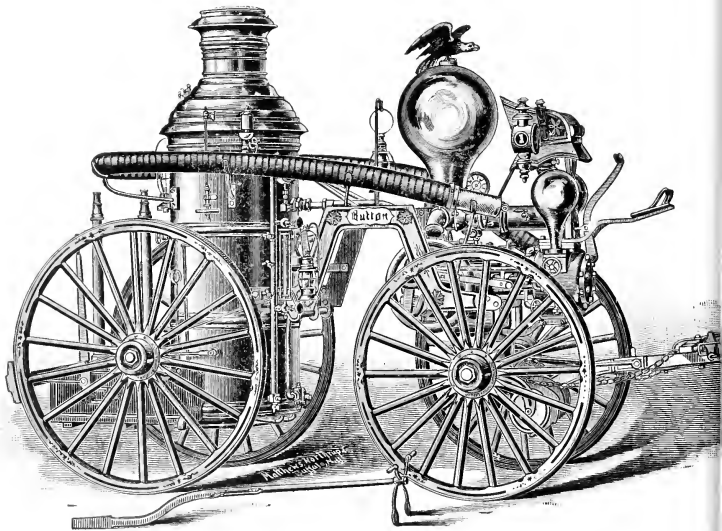

On the 18th of April, 1882, E. F. Bassett's large three story furniture store on Bank street was destroyed by fire, together with two smaller stores owned by S. Y. Beach and a house owned by L. A. and S. P. Camp. The impossibility of extinguishing the fire until four buildings had been burned, made the necessity of efficient fire apparatus quite too evident and a meeting of business men was at once called at the office of Hon. Carlos French to devise ways and means for protection against fire. It was decided to call a town meeting and accordingly one was held in Wooster hall May 4th. A committee was appointed to procure a fire engine, hose cart and hose, and a hook and ladder truck and other apparatus, and to provide a suitable building therefor. The first to enter earnestly into the work of organizing a fire department and securing apparatus for extinguishing fires was the late Horace B. Wooster, and to his efforts in this direction is due a large share of the credit for the success of the original undertaking.

The committee soon after purchased a secondhand engine, supposed to be first class in its line, paying $600 for it. An engine house was built on leased ground at the corner of Factory and Raymond streets, and the engine, hose cart, hose, etc., were placed in it ready for use. On the night of Oct. 4th, 1882, a fire broke out in the store occupied by H. W. Randall. The firemen placed the engine south of the office of the Humphreysville Mfg. Co., about two hundred feet from the fire, and manned the engine. It was an advance on the pail brigade and paid for itself many times over in the property saved. It was however such an extremely hard working machine, requiring all the strength of all the men who could find room at the lever rails, that it was promptly decided that something more effective must be secured.

On Saturday evening, Oct. 21st, 1882, a meeting was held at the engine house for the purpose of forming a fire company. The name agreed upon was Ocean Fire Company and the following officers were elected: F. H. Beecher, Foreman, E. E. Adams, 1st Assistant, G. A. James, 2nd Assistant, Thomas Wilson, Secretary, Morris Atwood, Treasurer, and H. A. Hurd, Steward. At a meeting held Nov. 30th, the name was changed to Humphrey Engine & Hose Co., No. 1.

On the night of July 4th, 1883, fire was discovered on the lower floor of Davis Block and with the use of the fire engine the fire was extinguished and the building saved. At the same time the insufficiency of the hand engine became so evident that public opinion was unanimous that a steam fire engine was needed and efforts were made to raise the money by subscription. James Swan and Thomas James gave each $100, Hon. Carlos French $150, F.

THE STEAM FIRE ENGINE.

H. Beecher, Thomas Sharpe, I. B. Davis and Frank Farrell each $100, scores of others also giving liberally, and a powerful steam fire engine was ordered and was built especially for Citizen Engine Company, at a cost of $3,100, James Swan and F. H. Beecher, the purchasing committee, personally inspecting the work during its progress, and seeing that it was done with the best material and workmanship.

The fire company was reorganized Aug. 12, 1884, and the name was changed to Citizen Engine Company, No. 2. The need of a good fire bell soon became evident and a subscription paper was started by Wm. B. Swan, E. E. Adams and others for the purpose of raising funds to procure a bell. Something over two hundred dollars was quickly raised and an appropriation was voted by the town to build a bell tower.

On Thursday, Oct. 22d, 1885, Citizen Engine Co's first annual parade was given, having as guests the Crescent Hose Co. of Thomaston, Hotchkiss Hose of Birmingham and Fountain Hose of Ansonia. The Tingue Band, the Ansonia Band, the Waterville Drum Corps and the R. M. Bassett Drum Corps of Birmingham also participated in the parade. After the parade a grand banquet was served by the ladies in the opera house.

On the night of Feb. 4th, 1886, at about ten o'clock, with the thermometer 8 degrees below zero and the wind blowing a blizzard, the new fire bell rang out loud and clear an alarm of fire. The firemen hastened to the engine house to find that the Tingue Opera house was on fire and the flames well under way. People met in the street were heard to say, "It is the Tingue Opera house, the whole flat will go, they cannot stop it." The Button Steamer was soon at work and the fire was checked, but the contest of the water and the flames was a most singular one.

Owing to the intense cold the water froze upon the building, forming a sheet of ice as it fell, completely covering the roof and sides, so that the flames could only be reached through the windows and doors. The fire, though quickly checked, worked its way up under the roof and into the attic, and at one time a complete sheet of ice formed over a dormer window, the flame showing through the thin ice. The freezing wind congealed the spray and it fell alongside the building until the accumulation of frozen drops formed like a snowbank, several feet in depth, the accompanying photo print telling the story better than words.

The firemen suffered greatly from the intense cold but on account of the occasional outbreaks of the flames and the difficulty of reaching them within the ice bound building, it was found necessary to keep the engine running and the water playing upon the building until morning. The firemen, working by relays, became incased in ice and suffered much from the cold. In the morning it was found that for some distance from the building ice had formed over the hose to the depth of several feet and it had to be chopped away before the hose could be removed.

The fire company was incorporated March 17th, 1886, by act of the Legislature, as Citizen Engine and Hook and Ladder Co., No. 2. When the hook and ladder truck was purchased in 1886, Thomas James, Charles Coupland, The Seymour Manufacturing Co., Hon. C. French and James Swan each gave $100; and others brought the total up to $600.

On Christmas eve in 1889 fire was discovered in F. Edelstein's clothing store in S. Y. Beach's new building at the corner of Bank and First streets. When the fire was discovered the flames were under so much headway that it was impossible to save the building, but the firemen worked energetically to save the adjoining building, owned by E. F. Bassett and occupied by W. L. Ward and others, and succeeded, even after the flames had found their way in on the third floor.

Oct. 16, 1889, was a red letter day in the history of Citizen Engine Company. A grand parade was given and Citizen Engine Co. had as guests seven visiting companies, the Mutual Fire Co. of Torrington, Hotchkiss Hose Co. of Middletown, the R. M. Bassett Hook & Ladder Co. of Derby, the Eagle Hose Co. of Ansonia, Fountain Hose Co. of West Ansonia, Hotchkiss Hose Co. of Derby, and the Glove Hose Co. of Naugatuck. Upson Post, G. A. R., led the procession, followed by the Wheeler & Wilson's Band of Bridgeport, then came Citizen Engine Co. Each visiting Company had its band and altogether it made the finest parade ever seen in Seymour. After the parade all were invited to a sumptuous banquet in large tents on the Engine house grounds, provided by the ladies of Seymour. It was a notable event in the history of the town and one in which the committee of arrangements and all participants acquitted themselves admirably.

Such a parade is not merely a brilliant and passing spectacle. It serves another and more lasting purpose. It keeps alive interest in a volunteer fire department, not only among the members thereof but enlists the interest of the people generally and enables them to show in a substantial manner their appreciation of the men who are enlisted to protect property at all times and to risk their lives if need be. There may have been larger firemen's parades in the state, but none better conducted or of greater brilliancy and impressiveness. In this parade and in parades elsewhere where the firemen of Seymour have taken part, they have been most highly commended for their fine appearance and marching, and general behavior.

THE ENGINE HOUSE.

At the annual town meeting held Oct. 4, 1891, it was voted that the town purchase the lot at the corner of Factory and Raymond streets and erect a suitable engine house, substantially fire proof. The sum of $5,000 was appropriated for the purchase of the lot and $8,000 for the building. James Swan, F. H. Beecher and T. L. James were appointed a building committee. This vote and the decision to move the old building and build a new and commodious structure was largely due to the efforts of Mr. James Swan, Chief Engineer, in calling attention to the need of the fire department, and in previously looking over the various locations proposed with the selectmen, accompanied by Assistant Chief Engineer C. W. James. James Swan, F. H. Beecher and T. L. James were appointed a building committee, and the present handsome engine house was the result.

ENGINE HOUSE PARLOR.

The new engine house is a handsome brick building of two-stories with a roomy basement. It is 24 feet 6 inches wide and 50 feet 2 inches long. The entrance, facing on Factory street, has two broad doors opening into the engine room where the engine, hose cart and hook and ladder company stand ready for use. The parlors are on the second floor and are handsomely finished in the grain, frescoed and liberally furnished. The engine house is heated by steam and lighted by electricity, and is one of the most handsomely furnished in the State.

In March, 1893, the firemen thought the bare walls of the engine house should be made more attractive and a subscription paper was started for circulation among the active members only and it was placed in the hands of Geo. Smith, and when the book was closed the total receipts were $313. Of that amount W. R. Brixey, formerly a member of the company, gave $100. The remainder all came from the active members. This money was the first raised toward fitting up the new engine house parlors. The walls were handsomely frescoed by H. A. Hurd at a cost to the company of $165. The remainder went towards furniture.

A fair was held April 28 and 29, 1886, by which $600 was cleared. On May 9 and 10, 1889, a fair was held to raise funds for the parade and the net proceeds were $573.70. In October, 1888, Chief James Swan and Hon. C. French gave $100 each for the purchase of a billiard table for the engine house. Eight hundred dollars was subscribed for a hook and ladder truck and one was obtained which was noteworthy for its fine appearance as well as for excellence of workmanship and utility.

A third fair was held Oct. 23 and 24, 1894. This was held in the engine house by the ladies, Mrs. T. L. James being the chairman of the committee of arrangements, and $600 was cleared. On the 9th, 10th and 11th of February, 1899, a fourth fair was held, and $864.76 was cleared.

On the 16th of March, 1899, at 3:30 a. m., the firemen were warned by the ringing of the fire bell that the flames were again striving for the mastery. The boiler house of the H. A. Matthews Co.'s works and coal shed were completely wrapped in flames and being in the center of an almost complete rectangle of buildings it seemed impossible to save any of them. Soon several streams of water, from the fire engine and from the force pump in the chisel shop, were being thrown upon the burning building, and upon those adjacent to prevent the spread of the flames. F. H. Beecher, the superintendent of the works and an experienced fireman, greatly assisted Foreman Adams in directing the work, while Chief Engineer James Swan, being familiar with the premises and knowing the points of greatest danger, held one of the nozzles and directed the stream to the locality of greatest danger.

The fire caught in several places on the main buildings but by hard work the flames were extinguished and the damage was mostly confined to the building where the fire first broke out. Experienced firemen said that under such circumstances gaining the control of the flames and saving of the main buildings was one of the best pieces of work they had ever seen.

H. B. Wooster was chief of the fire department until his death in July, 1883. He was succeeded by James M. Smith as chief, with James Swan as assistant chief. In 1885 Mr. Swan was appointed chief and has since held that position. Dr. F. A. Benedict and

T. L. James are the Assistant Chiefs. The Fire Commissioners are Geo. A. Divine, C. W. Thrall and E. Pritchard. The foremen have been—1882-3, Frank H. Beecher; 1890, Thomas L. James; 1891, Frederick Harris; 1892, David J. Hill; 1893, William B. Swan; 1894-5, George Smith; 1895-7-8, Stillman F. Wright; 1899, Fowler W. Adams; 1900, Harold W. Pickett; 1901, Frank E. Chamberlin.

The Veterans Firemen's Association, consisting of those who had been active members for ten years, was formed July 1st, 1900, and numbers thirty members.

The company and the engine house and apparatus have all been kept up in first class shape, officers, firemen and citizens generally having taken interest in working to this end. All the large factories and mills have powerful rotary force pumps and an ample supply of hose for use in case of fire, and with the new water works there are now ample facilities for protection from fire.

The additional facilities of extinguishing fires which are afforded by the Seymour water works, with a large number of fire hydrants well scattered about the place, make property here as secure as it is possible to make it. It is also worthy of mention that the water works are also a success financially, the company having paid a dividend the first year, a very unusual thing with investments in water works. The company has no outstanding bonds, the works having been completed without exceeding in cost the capital stock of $60,000.

THE NEW PARK.

The tract of nearly fourteen acres on the west of Garden City, which was presented to the town of Seymour by Hon. C. French for a public park is an ideal place for the purpose. The larger part of the tract is either nearly level or gently rolling, and the easterly side has been known for some years as the "Athletic Grounds," the use of it having been given by Mr. French to the young people for ball games and other athletic sports. The westerly part is covered with a fine grove, which has been a popular picnic resort. This reaches to the brow of a cliff which affords a fine view of the river and the northerly part of the town, with Castle Rock in the distance, at the left, making one of the most picturesque landscapes in the valley, as shown by the engraving herewith.

LOOKING WEST FROM THE PARK.

CHAPTER V

BY REV. H. A. CAMPBELL.

OLD HOMES, FAMILIES AND LANDMARKS.

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

In seeking for further light relating to the old homes and landmarks, it is to be observed, that there are but few aged people living, who are able to relate the facts and traditions of the unwritten history of the early fathers of the community. The town records reveal but a part of their history. Therefore many facts and dates connected with the old homes have passed from the knowledge of men. While many facts have been handed down to the present generation, the dates have not been preserved to indicate the period, which the readers of these pages desire to know.

Since the writing of the first chapter on the "Old Homes, Families and Landmarks," the following facts and traditions have come from many sources, as records, deeds, and from members of the old families.

In presenting these statements, the localities will be considered in the same order as the previous article, beginning at the south part of the village, below the old Congregational cemetery.

Previous to 1800, there were two brothers living in this vicinity by the name of Swift, one of whom is said to have built the last house on the east side of South Main street below the cemetery, now belonging to Eben Wheeler, but for many years was known as the Cochran place.

The old house to the north, having a stone foundation, now known as the Fitzgibbons place, was occupied by Silas Baldwin near the beginning of the century, 1800. But previous to the coming of Silas Baldwin, Samuel Johnson lived there. And it is thought that he, or his father, Joseph Johnson, built the house.

This was Joseph Johnson, 1st, who purchased the estate, above the cemetery, of Abraham Pierson, and sold the same to Ebenezer Turil Whittemore, Dec. 4, 1778.

The old Dayton Tavern, or Hull place is also mentioned as being the home of Jeremiah Johnson as early as 1750, then a story and a half house.

The old Tucker homestead, located east of the Dayton-Hull place, is said also to have been a Johnson homestead, bearing the name of Nathaniel Johnson, whose daughter Sarah married Zephaniah Tucker.

The Sanford store referred to, occupied by "Pitchfork Sanford," is said to have been located on the southeast corner of Pearl and Maple streets.

As previously stated, soon after 1800, the Steeles moved to the southeast part of the town, now the Johns place, and for many years occupied large tracts of land, which in time were owned by the several members of the family. At the west end of Union street, where Henry Wyant now lives, there was the home of Edmund Steele, son of Deacon Bradford. This house is said to have been built by one of the Swift brothers, not far from the date 1800.

In the early part of this century, the name of Chester Jones frequently appears upon the school district records, etc., and his home was located the second house north of the J. Burton Steele farm, and sometime following Jones, William Keeney occupied the same house. It is stated that Chester Jones built this house.

John Burton Steele, son of Edmund, built a house in 1851, which has been since known as the Steele farm, located on the west side of Maple street, near the end of Walnut street. John Burton Steele did not live many years to enjoy his new home. He died Aug. 22, 1854.

William Steele son of Deacon Bradford Steele, built and occupied in 1824 the small red house located on the east side of the road near a quarter of a mile southeast of the old Steele farm. The deed shows that William bought this land of Deacon Bradford. From various sources it is learned that Deacon Bradford Steele was quite a land owner in this region. He owned and worked in an old mill on the brook at the southeast corner of the town, just below the new dam or near the second dam of the present Ansonia Water Co. This old mill is indicated on a map published in 1856, now in the State Library at Hartford, also on a map owned by the Misses Booth, Church street, from which a copy is taken for this book.

In a deed dated June 17, 1816, Stiles Nettleton of Derby sold a piece of land in Humphreysville to Bradford Steele. Bladens Brook ran through this land, which had on it a clothiers shop, with other buildings adjoining, with privilege of using water to carry a fulling mill, carding mill, etc. From the reading of the deed the locality would appear to be the old fulling mill property established on Bladens Brook in 1799, the site now occupied by the Beach papermill.

In the region east of the old New Haven turnpike, northward from the Steele-Davis-Johns corners, there is said to be one or more old cellar holes, once the places of thrifty homes. Doubtless one or more of these were on the old road from the corners northward to the Leman Chatfield place.

The name of Peck appears in many of the deeds, and a tract of land is still called by that name, near the Walnut street region.

In reading the history and traditions relating to the Johnson families the reader would gain the impression that there was a period when the Johnsons were the sole owners and occupants of this whole region, and it is to be regretted that the dates relating to these families and their homes are not more perfectly preserved.

The study of the genealogy of the Johnson family will aid in discovering the multitude of names, and reveal the difficulty of locating their habitations.

One Joseph Johnson, 1st, occupied the Turil Whittimore place, another Joseph Johnson, 2nd, occupied the Durand-Lum homestead. It is said that Joseph Johnson, 2nd, built the house for his own residence, which seems to have been occupied later by his son, Hezekiah Johnson, who appears to have sold it to Jeremiah Durand, the father of Mrs. E. A. Lum.

The Hezekiah Johnson referred to at one time lived on the crown of the hill, High street, now the Hitchcock place, which may be said to have been the first house on Promised Land.

The Rev. S. R. Hickey place on the east side of Pearl street is also said to have been built by Joseph Johnson, 2nd, for one of his sons.

Still another old Johnson homestead, already referred to in the Old Landmarks, the first place north of the Arctusa Spring Water Co., occupied by several generations, among whom were Gideon 1, Gideon 2, Ebenezer, and Gideon, father of Dr. S. C. Johnson.

In the previous chapter the name of Charles French was associated with the French place located on Pearl Street, the second house south of Grand street. Also the name of Alfred is associated with the place, and within the memory of many an aged lady "Aunt Nancy" French made her home here. One by the name of Charles French lived in the long house near the Humphreys woolen mill.

At the foot of Rock Rimmon there was a house of very early date, and during the time of the Revolutionary War it is said that Simeon Wheeler lived in this locality. The name M. Culver is also associated with this locality at a later date. It is also to be observed that a Simeon Wheeler is said to have settled on Rimmon Hill about 1760, the region a mile or more west and northwest of the Rock by the same name. It is possible that the Rock and Hill by the same name, Rimmon, have not always been clearly designated in the early writings.

Among the records and deeds the name of Lyman Wheeler is frequently mentioned in connection with Rimmon Hill. There are two deeds bearing the date 1819, given to Lyman Wheeler, wherein are stated that said Wheeler purchases two pieces of land, one from Moses Riggs, and the other from Sherman Clark, "with dwelling house and barn thereon standing," but Clark "reserved the right of drawing and carrying away water from the well on said land for the benefit of my dwelling house on the opposite side of the highway." If this dwelling on the opposite side of the highway refers to the old Pangman place, the deed would indicate the same place to have been at that time the home of Sherman Clark; or else some other locality is described in the deed.

None of the old landmarks have undergone greater changes on the west side of the river than that of the old Dr. S. C. Johnson place, on the corner of Church and West streets. This house was built in 1842 to take the place of the old house that stood on the same lot a little northeast beyond the well, it being the old house which was occupied by the first Dr. Stoddard in 1804.

During this summer, 1901, this estate was purchased by W. L. Ward, furniture dealer and undertaker, for his own future residence. So marked have been the changes, that the old landmarks have disappeared. The house was turned one quarter about, the north side facing the west, and made the front of the house. It was moved entirely from the old foundation northward, and fifty feet from both streets. On the exterior, wide verandas were built on the west and south sides, with circle on the corner. A large dormer window was added to the west roof, and on the northward side a two story bay window was added with a large chimney. The plan of the interior was completely changed, and the modern conveniences were added. The barn that stood on the Church street side near the road was moved to the north corner of the lot with additions on the east and south. The over-abundant trees were removed, including some evergreens, and the ground was graded, the old cellar filled, the west terrace wall removed, and the whole surroundings now present a gracefully sloping lawn with a beautiful residence in the background, while the foreground is surrounded by a row of large handsome elm and maple trees.

EARLY DEALINGS WITH THE INDIANS.

IN reviewing the colonial history of New England, it will be observed that the Indians presented many problems difficult to solve. In the majority of cases great wisdom was shown in regarding the so called rights of the Indians as a precaution against their natural hostility.

It is estimated that there were about a thousand Indians in the region covered by New Haven county when the first settlers landed at Quinnipiac, or New Haven. In December 11, 1638, the settlers drew up articles of agreement, which also included the purchase of a certain tract of land. This agreement was accepted by the 47 Indians who claimed that immediate territory:—"They do covenant not to receive or admit any other Indians among them without leave from the English, nor to harbor any that are enemies to the English, but to apprehend such and deliver them up; also to inform the English of any plots which they are aware are being formed against them by the Indians or others."

During this same year a larger tract of land several miles in extent was purchased of the Indians. From this time also the Indians began to move back into the country to their fortifications along the Housatonic river. For the purpose of hunting and fishing they were scattered, but it is not known that there were more than a hundred warriors belonging to a single tribe in this vicinity. On both sides of the river above Derby there were fortifications established by the Indians for their own protection, and it is thought to check the advance of the English. Without doubt there were little Indian settlements all along the Housatonic river, and after a company of white people left Milford to establish the town of New Milford, many miles up the river, they became acquainted with the well established Indian trail along the river.

To Coll Ebenezer Johnson at Derby

Sir after my Love presented to you hoping that these Lines may find you in health of through Gods goodnes we join at present— these Lines may Inform you that this morning the Indians Belonging to our town came to me by way of Complaint that they sought upon themselves wronged by Capt Stephen Noble taking up a Division of Land near the point between the Great River and the Still River: and where some of them had Improvement: By which means they say what shall we eat off we have not our Ground to plant corn upon: and Beside this they say it was not sold to the English but was Reserved for their own use as an Interest in common to all that did Inhabit there and to my certain Knowledge they have dwelt upon said point and improved for the time I have lived in the town: therefore my Request to you is if that you would assist the Indians in Endeavouring to Recover their Right: because that I have been Informed that you have formerly had acquaintance with the management of things in the first beginning here — and finding in the Deed given to Milford Gentlemen no more of Reserve but only these words: It is to be noted that the above named Indians do Reserve for their use their present planting falls: and a priviledge of fishing at the falls — and this set down after the taking of it now Sir my desire is that Right may be done in this case for I am well satisfied that if this neck of land be not restored to them there will remain a disgust which may prove prejudicial to some if not to all in generall — and now the generall Court being now it would be a Good thing to have the matter laid Before the Court that they may give their Judgment in the case: nomore at present but Rest your friend and servant Sam^l Brownson Justice

Dated in New Milford

When the people of Derby began to purchase land of the Indians they showed the same wise precaution and paid for some of the land several times, and on record there are 25 or more Indian deeds covering the tract now including ancient Derby and Oxford to the Woodbury line, and attached to these deeds are more than a hundred names of different Indians.

Among those who had dealings with the Indians, Col. Ebenezer Johnson was conspicuous. He bought many tracts of land in Derby and Seymour, and understood the ways of the Indians, knowing how to avoid and settle disputes. In the time of danger or disputes, there were Indian agents appointed to restrain the Indians from hostility and aid them in their rights. As an agent of early Derby, Henry Wooster served in that office, and we never hear of any difficulty with the Indians in this vicinity. However, about the time of King Philip's war, 1675-6, the Milford Indians entered complaint of unjust treatment and at the same time appealed to the court, but there was no hostility. Special care was taken not to awaken unkind feelings, yet the fear was so great that many homes were fortified against surprise and attack from the Indians, and special guards were appointed by the town. It was a time of great anxiety among the people of the frontier settlements, as Waterbury, Litchfield and New Milford and others.

Through the courtesy of Mr. George Leavenworth, who has in his possession a letter relating to troubles with the Indians, a copy is reproduced for these pages. It bears the date May 1st, 1725, New Milford, from the justice of peace to Col. Ebenezer Johnson at Derby.

A perusal of this letter will disclose threatening troubles of a serious nature to the people of New Milford, and to all on the frontier. It seems from the letter that Captain Stephen Noble, of New Milford, had appropriated the corn land of the Indians located on a point by the great river, and the Indians complained of the act, saying that they desired that land for their own use, and that they had not sold it to the English, but had reserved it for themselves. Referring to the deed of sale, there was nothing to indicate the reserve, nevertheless the Indians had occupied and improved that land. This matter was referred to Col. Ebenezer Johnson who had the management of the things in the beginning of New Milford, hoping that he would assist the Indians in recovering their rights and avoid "a disgust which may prove prejudicial to some if not to all in general." Col. Johnson was requested to ascertain the privileges granted the Indians in their reservation and fishing at the Falls in Seymour, and have the court give their judgment in the case.

A portion of the town of Oxford was annexed to the town of Seymour by act of the General Assembly in 1854, as follows:

Resolved by this Assembly, That all that part of the town of Oxford lying southerly of a line drawn from the town bounds standing between the towns of Seymour and Oxford in New Haven county, near the dwelling house of Mrs. Sabra Lindley; thence running in an easterly direction about one hundred and thirtyfour rods to a pile of stones on Diamond Rock, so called; thence running easterly about one hundred and twenty rods from the Naugatuck railroad; thence running easterly to a pile of stones with a stake standing therein, on the town line between said Seymour and Oxford, easterly of the dwelling house of Miles Culver, and southerly of the south end of Rock Rimmon, so called, be, and hereby is incorporated in and made part of the said town of Seymour, and that the aforesaid lines and boundaries be the boundaries between said towns.

CHAPTER VI

EARLY SETTLERS, INDIAN HILL, SUCCESS HILL, OLD MAPS.

THE hill bounded northerly by Bladens Brook, southerly by Pearl street, and westerly by Main street, was known two centuries ago as Indian Hill, and the next hill south, reaching from Pearl street nearly a mile southward, was known as Success Hill. Strange as it may seem these hills were included in the Quaker Farms Purchase, which extended from the Milford boundary line on the east, westward to the Housatonic river, and the grants of land on these hills were therefore made by the committee of the proprietors of the Quaker Farms Purchase. A list of proprietors was made out in 1717 but some additions were made until 1727, when the names and numbers were as follows:

Samll Bassitt,	12	Joseph Nikols,	5
George Black,	10	Abraham Peirson,	48
Samll Bowers,	32	Steaphen Peirson junr,	2
Samll Brinsmaid,	57	Stephen Peirson snr,	56
Abiram Canfield,	25	Abraham Pinto,	18
John Chattfield,	6	John Pringle,	33
John Davis,	34	John Pringle junr,	39
Micah Denman,	19 & 64	Ebin: Riggs,	8
Mr. John Durand,	59	Edward Riggs,	1
Francis French,	22	John Riggs,	42
Abel Gunn,	36	Ens Samll Riggs,	49
Capt. Samll Gunn,	28	Andrew Smith,	30
Ebenezer Harger,	38	Ephraim Smith,	9
Jabiz Harger,	47	John Smith junr,	27
Joseph Hawkins,	16	John Smith snr,	29
Jonathan Hill,	46	Joseph Smith,	53
Deacon Holbrook,	61	Benjamin Stiles,	23
John Hull,	26	John Tibbals,	7
Capt. Jos. Hull,	40	Abraham Tomlinson,	13
Jeans Humphris,	15	Isaac Tomlinson,	43
Colonal Johnson,	54	John Tomlinson,	31
Ebenezer Johnson,	21	Samll Tomlinson,	63
Jeremiah Johnson,	44	Wm. Tomlinson,	51
John Johnson,	60	John Towner,	17
Joseph Johnson,	37	John Twitchel,	24
Peter Johnson,	11	Samll Washbou,	3
Jonathan Lum,	41	Wm. Washbou,	45
Mr. Moss,	58	John Weede,	55
Samll Moss,	14	Selvester Wooster,	4
Wm. Moss,	50	Timothy Wooster, Snr,	62
John Munson,	52	Thos. Wooster,	20
Ens Nikols,	35

The numbers were drawn by lot and each proprietor made his choice of location in the order indicated by the numbers, but to equalize the matter it was voted that when a second allotment should be made the choice should be in the reverse order.

Following are some of the layouts covering this part of the town of Seymour.

To Abraham Pierson, on Indian Hill, bounded west on Naugatuck river 37 rods, south with common land and Waterbury road 55 rods, running northeast 9 rods, northward by highway 32 rods, westward 58 rods, to the river.

To John Tomlinson land bounded southward with Abraham Pierson's land 58 rods, by the Naugatuck river 38 rods, eastward 58 rods, southward by highway 38 rods to Pierson's corner.

To Joseph Johnson, on Indian Hill, bounded southward with land of John Tomlinson 58 rods, east by highway 25 rods, thence westward 58 rods to the river, and westerly 23 rods on the river.

To John Twitchell, on Indian Hill, bounded south on Joseph Johnson's land 58 rods, westward with the Indians' land 44 rods, north with highway 58 rods, east with highway 40 rods.

To Abraham Tomlinson on Indian Hill, bounded with the Indians' land westward 55 rods from "the highway that runneth down to the Indian Land, and southward by said highway 50 rods, then running southward by a highway 10 rods, eastward 75 rods to the brook, and bounded by said brook on Gideon Johnson's land to the mouth of said brook, this line being on the whole on both the said brooks 120 rods.

To Thomas Wooster, on Indian Hill, bounded northward on Abraham Tomlinson's land 25 rods to the brook, east with brook 69 rods, westward 51 rods to highway, northward by highway 51 rods.

To John Tibbals, on Indian Hill, "bounded northward by Thomas Wooster's land 51 rods to a hepe of stones by ye Swamps side, then running southwardly by Colonel Johnsons or Waterberry Roade 5 rods to a hepe of stones by a highway, then northwardly by said highway, 71 rods to Woosters' corner.

On Success Hill lands were laid out to Rev. Joseph Moss, Micah Denman, Benjamin Stiles, Abiram Canfield, Ensign Samuel Riggs and George Black.

In 1759 a new road was laid out on Indian Hill, recorded as follows :

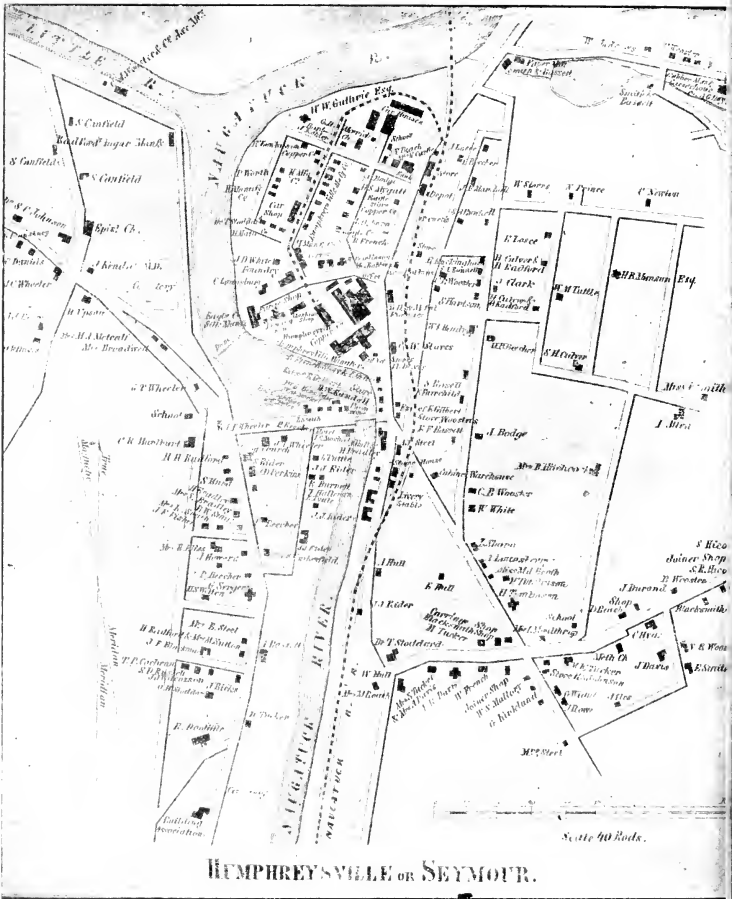

Whereas we the Subscribers being appointed as a Committee to exchange lands for highways and to lay out highways in the bounds of that tract of land in Darby, called Quakers Farm Purchase, pursuant to said appointment, we said Committee have laid out a highway on the land of Joseph Johnson, Jr., on ye eastward side of Naugatuck River, at a place called Indian Hill, on ye southwest side of said Johnson's land, beginning at a hepe of stones on the line of said Johnson's land northwestward of Geo. Indian's house, being ye east side of said highway and running northward, bounded with said Joseph Johnson's land sixteen rods to a hepe of stones, then twelve rods to a hepe of stones, then still the same course twelve rods to a hepe of stones, then still northward ten rods to a hepe of stones, then twentysix rods to a hepe of stones, westwardly in ye place designed for building a bridge over said Naugatuck River, at ye line of ye Indian Land, and said highway is bounded westwardly on said Naugatuck River. For recompense by way of exchange for the above said highway laid out on ye land of ye said Joseph Johnson, Committee have laid out to said Joseph Johnson one piece of land lying south of George Indian's Mountain House on ye westward side of ye Roade. Bounded beginning at ye southward corner at ye line of Mr. Samuel Plumb's land at a hepe of stones, running northward bounded east on ye roade twenty-eight rods to ye said Roade to a hepe of stones, then seventeen rods to a hepe of stones, then nine rods to a hepe of stones, then five rods to a hepe of stones, all ye above lines run northward, and bounded southerly by said Samuel Plumb's land to Naugatuck River and westward by said river until it comes to the highway yt was laid out in said Johnson's land. And also we said Committee do make over to said Johnson by way of exchange a highway of two rods wide that runs between the tears of lots from ye Cuntry Roade on ye Indian Hill bounded with said Joseph Johnson's land on each side excepting about forty rods eastward on land of Gideon Johnson, and all ye above exchanged highway is bounded by said Joseph Johnson's land until it comes to ye Indian Land. The whole of said highway we make over to the said Joseph Johnson and his heirs for ever. In witness and for confirmation of the above exchanges of land and highway, we said Committee and parte have interchangeably set hereunto our hands and seals this ninth day of April, A. D., 1759.

THE VILLAGE IN 1856.

WRITTEN BY S. R. SIBLEY OF STAMFORD, IN 1848.

This spring flowed from a crevice in the rock a few rods north of Davis' Block, where now is the well owned by the New Haven Copper Co., the surface of the ground being now eight or ten feet higher than it was in '48.

In a neat little village, my birth-place and home,
Is seen the "Rock-spring," well named I am sure,
For down from the rock in a torrent is thrown,
From a spout in its fissure, cold water most pure.

Old moss-covered rock, ah! oft in my childhood
I've viewed thee and tasted thy cold crystal stream:—
Far better to visit thee, e'en 'midst thy wild-wood,
Than the inn where the bowl or the wine cup is seen.

Though wild grow the shrubs and the bushes about thee,
Yet still thou art precious because of thy spring
Of cold water fine, that still gushes from out thee,
Far better than champagne, or brandy, or gin.

Old rock, with thy spout from thy fountain projected,
From which flows thy beverage, refreshing and prime,
When viewing thee thus, ah! how oft I reflected,
On the rock that was smitten in our forefathers' time.

I thought of old Horeb when Israel was thirsting,
And of Moses who smote it, when lo! from its side
At the stroke of his rod the waters came bursting,
And flowed to refresh them a plentiful tide.

And greater than thou was that famous mountain,
Old Horeb, that gushed forth its waters amain,
Yet still thou art precious, thou rock bordered fountain,
We'll taste of thy beverage again and again.

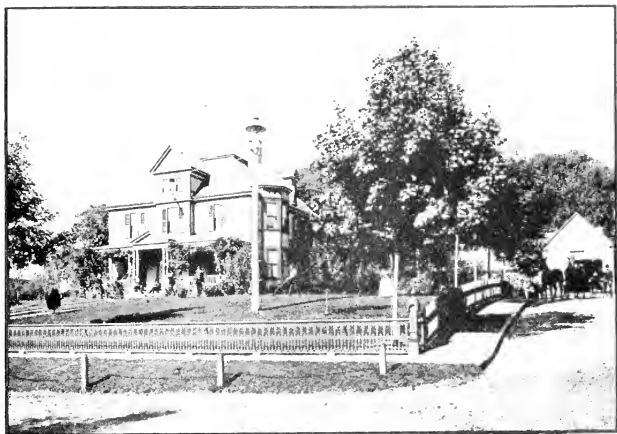

May I never forget thee, resort of my childhood,
Old "Rock-spring," delicious, sparkling and fine,
But visit thee oft, 'midst thy bushes and wild-wood,
And partake of a beverage far better than wine.

CHAPTER VIII.

BIOGRAPHIES AND LISTS OF TOWN OFFICERS, ETC.

BY W. C. SHARPE.

GEN. DAVID HUMPHREYS.

Born in Derby in July, 1752, he was educated at Yale college, and entered the army at the beginning of the Revolutionary War and was commissioned captain Jan. 1, 1777; was appointed brigadier major to Gen. Parsons in March, accompanied Col. Meigs in the Sag Harbor expedition in May, was with Gen. Putnam on the Hudson during the Burgoyne campaign, was with Washington's army at White Plains, was appointed aid-de-camp to Gen. Putnam Dec. 18, 1778; joined Gen. Greene's staff in May, 1780; was in the battle of Springfield, N. J., June 23, 1780, and the same day was appointed aid-de-camp to Washington, continuing with him to the end of the war.

He was present at the siege of Yorktown, and was assigned by Washington to bear the captured standards to Congress, and on the 12th Nov., 1782, he received from Congress the staff rank of Lieutenant Colonel, to date from June 23, 1780. He was present at the evacuation of New York city, Nov. 25, 1783, and accompanied Washington to Annapolis.

He resided more than a year with Washington after his retirement to Virginia, and again in 1778. He accompanied Jefferson to Europe as secretary of legation in 1784, and was elected to the legislature of Connecticut in 1786. He was soon after associated with Lemuel Hopkins, John Trumbull and Joel Barlow in the composition of the "Anarchiad," a series of poems which appeared in the "New Haven Gazette" and the "Connecticut Magazine."

Gen. Humphreys was minister to Lisbon from 1791 to 1797 and afterwards minister to Spain till 1802, and on his return imported from Spain 100 merino sheep, and engaged in the manufacture of woollens in what is now Seymour, but was for nearly half a century called Humphreysville in honor of the poet, warrior, statesman and manufacturer. In establishing the manufacture of woollen cloth he was eminently successful, making fine broadcloth of such quality that he had the reputation of making the best in America, and in November, 1808, President Jefferson sent for some of the cloth from which to make a suit for his New Year's Day appearance at the White House.

He held command of two Connecticut regiments in the war of 1812, and was appointed Brigadier General of the State Militia, June 1, 1813, and he is therefore best known as Gen. Humphreys, instead of Colonel, as before that date.

His principal poems are an "Address to the Armies of the United States" (1782); a "Poem on the Happiness of America;" a tragedy, entitled "The Widow of Malabar," translated from the French of LeMierre; and a poem on agriculture. His "Miscellaneous Works" (New York, 1790 and 1804) contain besides his poems a biography of Gen. Putnam and several orations and other prose compositions. Mrs. Ann S. Stephens writes of him near the close of his life as follows: "I remember him in a blue coat with large gold buttons, a buff vest, and laced ruffles around his wrists and in his bosom. His complexion was soft and blooming like a child, and his gray hair, swept back from his forehead, was gathered in a cue behind and tied with a black or red ribbon." He died in New Haven, Feb. 21, 1818.

JOHN H. DEFOREST.

John H. DeForest, one of the early manufacturers of the Naugatuck Valley, came of a Huguenot refugee family which left Europe December 23, 1623, for Guiana, in South America, and settled on New York island thirteen years later. Born in Hudington, Conn., April 10, 1876, he married in Watertown, December 5th, 1811, Datha Woodward of that place, and died in Seymour February 12th, 1839.

At the age of about 21, in company with his elder brother David, he began a mercantile business in Bridgeport, which soon ended disastrously in consequence of a fire and burglary. A little later he became chief clerk in a shipping house in New Haven, and within six years accumulated capital of $2,700 — no contemptible sum in those days. Now followed a mercantile partnership with his junior brother Benjamin, in Watertown, Conn. This interior town, twenty-eight miles from salt water, became a sort of seaport. The pork and beef and cider of the neighboring farmers were shipped to New York by way of Derby, the Housatonic river and Long Island sound. There were ventures across the ocean in which John H. DeForest acted as supercargo, Various New England productions were transported to the West Indies, Guiana, France, Spain, Portugal and Morocco. One trip was to Tarragona for merino sheep, with an interlude of barilla bark to England.

Eventually a voyage to Bordeaux was interrupted by an English cruiser acting under some newly issued "orders in council," which forbade neutrals to trade with the enemies of Great Britain. The American was fired upon, the helmsman killed, the vessel and cargo confiscated, and the people confined in Dartmoor prison. Mr. DeForest spent his abundant leisure in studying French under the instructions of a French officer. A correspondence which he held with the Admiralty ultimately resulted in the liberation of the personnel, but without payment for the vessel and cargo. This misadventure, and the war of 1812-14 between England and the United States, put an end to his seafaring enterprises.

In June, 1818 (acting under the advice of his brother David, John H. DeForest settled in New York city as a broker and commission merchant. One of his chief correspondents was the house of Lynch, Zimmerman & Co., of Buenos Ayres, which had been founded several years earlier by David DeForest, and still counted him as partner. South American productions, such as cattle hides, horse hides, "horse oil" and "Patagonian ostrich feathers" were disposed of in New York or shipped to Europe or to the West Indies. Money was loaned also, and sometimes more than was repaid: At that time a disastrous depression of business affected Europe and all the civilized region of the American continent. In May, 1821, weary of struggling against the widespread bankruptcy, Mr. DeForest gave up his New York experiment, glad to escape with a loss of one-tenth of his capital.

But now came a still bolder adventure. Although he knew nothing of manufacturing, he decided to become a manufacturer of cotton. In company with Wain and Leaming of Philadelphia he bought the water privilege and mills at "The Falls" in Derby, afterwards called Humphreysville, and now Seymour. The paper-mill, gristmill and sawmill were promptly set agoing, and the woolen mill was refurnished with a view to producing cotton sheetings. Here Mr. DeForest labored eighteen years, one of the minor founders of cotton manufacturing in the United States, and not without profit therein, although he suffered during the great "crisis" of 1837, and seldom had the encouragement of a protective tariff. Though he cared little for politics, he was repeatedly elected to the state legislature, and he was for years the principal trying justice of the district.

His greatest pleasure was reading, especially in the English classics. His library contained many notable authors, including Shakespeare, Milton's Paradise Lost, Cowper, Young's Night Thoughts, Bunyan, Hume's England, Gibbons' Rome, Franklin's works, Hamilton's works, and Trumbull's Mr. Fingal, with translations of Botta's "American War," Rollin, Plutarch, Xenophon, Pope's Iliad, Dryden's Virgil, Don Quixote, "Scott's Bible" and Sale's Koran. Such were the guests who most frequently entertained him when the day's work was over and he might seat himself by the fireside, a lighted candle in one hand and a choice volume in the other. The eyes were gray, the spectacles silver, the nose aquiline, the complexion swarthy. The coat was swallow-tailed and dark blue in color, with gilt buttons. The silk vest opened to show a ruffled shirt bosom. The cane, when he walked out, was never missing. The gig, when he drove, was weighty, durable, and of a canary yellow. A gentleman of other days! The squire!

His wife was the youngest daughter of Elijah Woodward of Watertown, who marched with one of the earliest Connecticut companies to respond to the "Lexington Alarm." His children were George Frederick, Yale graduate, manufacturer in Seymour and banker in Freeport, Illinois; Henry Alfred, Yale graduate, physician, missionary to Syria, deceased at forty; Andrew W., lumber merchant, vice president of the Tradesmen's Bank, and president of the New Haven Gas Light Company; John W., captain and brevet major of volunteers during the civil war, and author of various volumes in prose and verse.

CAPT. EBENEZER DAYTON.

Capt. Ebenezer Dayton was one of the brave privateersmen of the Sound, who annoyed the transports and boats of the Tories and the British admiral offered a large bounty for his head and that of Caleb Brewster, his cousin. Fearing to leave his family at their home in Brookhaven, L. I., he brought them across the Sound to Milford. After remaining there a while, as a further precaution, he removed them to Bethany. The robbery of the house occupied by Mrs. Dayton at that place by a British company and a band of Tories is well described at length by Rev. Israel Warren in the book entitled "Chauncey Judd."

Soon after the Revolution, Capt. Dayton removed to Chuse town, now Seymour, and lived in the house at the southeast angle of the western terminus of Pearl street, where he kept an inn which was for a time the home of Gen. Humphreys. Capt. Dayton was as energetic in peace as in war, and it was largely due to his efforts that a road was opened direct to New Haven, and another to Waterbury by way of the "Dug Road." Some years later he removed to Louisiana.

WALTER FRENCH.

Walter French, born Jan. 5, 1781, came to this place in 1806 and was the pioneer in the manufacture of screw auger bits. He was an artisan of great ingenuity and skill and by his own enterprise as well as by instructing others, was largely instrumental in establishing what has for nearly a century been one of the leading industries of the place. He was a zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal church and in 1815 was licensed as a local preacher, officiating on Sundays and applying himself to business on weekdays. He had a good memory and a ready utterance and often spoke with great power and success. He died May 26, 1865, aged eightyfour years.

CAPT. BRADFORD STEELE.

Capt. Bradford Steele was a soldier of the Revolution, serving then as Lieut. with those who marched for the relief of Boston in the Lexington alarm in April, 1775; was Lieut. in the 3rd Company, 1st Regt., May 17, 1775 and was afterward Lieut. in the Second Regiment. He was several times appointed to various duties in aid of the war, securing enlistments and supplies. After the close of the war he was prominent in local industrial enterprises for many years. He died April 17, 1861.

RAYMOND FRENCH.

One of the pioneers of manufacturing industries in Seaboard was Raymond French, who for nearly half a century was widely known as one of the most active and energetic manufacturers of the Naugatuck valley. He was descended from William French of Essex, England, who came to America in the ship Defence in 1633 and settled at Billerica, Mass., one of whose sons named Mulford and was the ancestor of the Connecticut branch of the family.

Mr. French in his youth acquired a thorough knowledge of blacksmith and machine work and after a few years went to the island of Trinidad where he spent six years and was a part of that time in the employ of the English government. Returning to this place, he became interested in the manufacture of engines in 1785.

chisels, and other tools, and went to England to study the processes of manufacture there. On his return he built a mill where the Kerite Cable works now are and gave his personal attention largely to the manufacture of mechanics' tools, though from time to time becoming largely interested in other manufacturing industries, and was long the leader in the majority of the local industrial enterprises as well as in organizing a bank, a high school association, and a library association.

The Rimmon and Kinneytown dams were built, and the center dam rebuilt, under his direction, the power from the Kinneytown dam being the nucleus from which the city of Ansonia has grown. He was also the superintendent and the principal stockholder of the Humphreysville Manufacturing Company. He was never ambitious for public office, but was ever ready to lend a helping hand to meritorious enterprises. He died Feb. 19, 1886, aged 81 years.

ABIEL CANFIELD,

A soldier of the Revolution, was born April 6th, 1753. He enlisted Dec. 13th, 1776, for three years, in Capt. Wright's company, 5th Regiment. He married Mary Barlow, of Stratford, Dec. 23d, 1779, and lived on West street. He had a shop in the rear, where he manufactured brass and pewter buttons, buckles, sleigh bells, metal tags, etc. He employed an English engraver to cut the dies used in making the figures upon the buttons for military and other uses. He afterward purchased of Bradford Steele the house east of the Episcopal church and built a shop near by. He died Dec. 6th, 1812, aged 59 years and 7 months.

LIEUT. JABEZ PRITCHARD.

Jabez Pritchard, whose home was on what is now called the Mountain Road, enlisted under the first call to arms in April, 1775, at the time of the Lexington Alarm, and from May 7th until Dec. 10th he served as sergeant in the 3d company of the 1st Regiment. On Jan. 2d, 1777, he is recorded as Ensign, and on June 18th, 1777, as 2d Lieutenant. He was in command of the guard at Horseneck, and afterward under the command of Major Humphreys near Fort Independence. In the conflict which occurred there Lieut. Pritchard, with others, was taken prisoner and confined, first at King's Bridge, then in New York, and afterward on a prison ship in the North river. His commission was taken from him, and in consequence he was not allowed the consideration accorded to other officers, and was so ill treated that, like most of the other prisoners on that infamous ship, he survived but a short time.

His generous character may be inferred from the fact that he might have escaped being taken prisoner but that he would not abandon a wounded comrade, and that he afterward divided his funds with a fellow prisoner, to which act of liberality Bradford Steel ascribed his own survival by means of the provisions which he was thus enabled to purchase.

DEA. BRADFORD STEELE.

Bradford Steele, son of Capt. Bradford Steele, enlisted about July 10, 1777, in the regiment commanded by Col. Enos, being then not quite sixteen years of age. He was taken prisoner at the battle near Fort Independence, Aug. 22, 1777, and confined at first in the "Sugar House" and later on a prison ship in New York harbor. He was exchanged Aug. 16th, 1778, and soon after reached home and after some months recovered his health. He was in later years largely engaged in local manufacturing industries. On the reorganization of the Congregational church in 1817 he was chosen a deacon and so continued until about a year before his death, which occurred in 1841.

SAMUEL WIRE

Was born at Greenfield Hills, Fairfield, Feb. 8th, 1789. He came to Humphreysville when thirteen years of age to learn the clothing business under General Humphreys. At the age of twenty-three he married the sister of the late General Clark Wooster, who died a few years later. Mr. Wire soon afterwards commenced the manufacture of satinets warps in a factory which he built on Little River, about two miles from its mouth, above the Oxford line. He represented that town at several sessions of the General Assembly and held other important offices of trust. He died May 3rd, 1874, aged 85 years.

THOMAS GILYARD

Was born in Leeds, England, Mar. 20, 1786, and came to America in 1807 to assist in the establishment of the woolen industry here, was a man of great skill and industry in his chosen avocation, independent in his opinions, and a zealous member of the Methodist church. He was one of the eight trustees of the M. E. church in 1817, and continued to fill that office about thirty years. He died Nov. 12, 1853. In his will he gave three acres of land near his home on Skokorat for the benefit of the M. E. church.

HIRAM UPSON,

A descendant of Thomas Upson, who was a resident of Hartford in 1638, was in 1852 associated with Horace A. Radford and Lucius Tuttle in the manufacture of augers and bits, under the firm name of the Upson Manufacturing Company, whose works were at the mouth of Little River. He enlisted April 23, 1861, in Co. H, 2d C. V., for three months. At the end of his term he re-enlisted in Co. F, 7th C. V., as sergeant. He was wounded at James Island June 16, 1862, and died June 18. Upson Post, G. A. R., is named in honor of Sergt. Hiram Upson.

MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS,

The gifted writer, was the daughter of John Winterbottom, junior partner of T. Vose & Co., successors to Gen. Humphreys in the manufacture of broadcloth, in Humphreysville, now Seymour, where her childhood years were spent. She wrote her first composition—an epigram upon a boy in her father's employ—at the age of seven. In 1832 she married Mr. Edward Stephens of Plymouth, Mass., and in 1834 published the "Polish Boy." Two years later she started a literary magazine in Portland, Maine, and in it wrote her first story and published "The Tradesman's Daughter." In 1838 she became editress of the Ladies' Companion, in New York, and published "Mary Derwent," "The Deluded" and other serials. Later she was with George R. Graham and Edgar A. Poe on Graham's Magazine in Philadelphia, at the same time acting as co-editress with Charles J. Peterson of Peterson's Magazine. Mrs. Stephens and Mr. Peterson were associated in literary work for over thirty years. About 1859 Mrs. Stephens published the original of "Fashion and Famine" in Peterson's Magazine, which was afterwards printed in book form, being the first book she ever published. Her published works now include about thirty novels, a "History of the War," in two volumes, and two humorous works. The opening scenes of "Bertha's Engagement" and the story of "Malvina Gray" are laid in Seymour. Another volume of local interest is "The Gold Brick," in which localities in Seymour are described and some characters of the book were chosen from among the people who had sometime lived within the borders of Humphreysville. Mrs. Stephens died Aug. 20, 1886, in Newport, R. I., aged 76.

JOHN TODD WHEELER

Was the son of John Wheeler of Nyumphs. When twenty years of age he located in Humphreysville and followed the vocation of merchant until within a few years of his death.

His only child, a son, John C. Wheeler, at an early age entered into business with him; was a merchant and manufacturer of augers and paper for many years, until he removed to the city of New York, where his youngest son, John Wheeler, born in Humphreysville in 1823, removed to New York in 1843, and was in 1852 elected to Congress and took an active part in the exciting times upon the question of the Repeal of the "Missouri Compromise," otherwise called the "Kansas and Nebraska bill," in the 33d Congress. Upon its being made a party question, admitting slavery north of Missouri, he, with a few other Democrats, took bold and open ground against it, and was the only member from the city of New York (of six Democrats) who voted against the bill. He was re-elected to the 34th Congress—was renominated by the Democracy in 1856 for the 35th Congress, but declined; was a War Democrat when it required nerve so to be; was a strong opponent of the Tweed Ring, going out of Tammany Hall and joining with the honest portion of the Democracy and other citizens for their overthrow. He was one of the most active of the famous Committee of Seventy which overthrew that infamous ring, was one of the leaders in the movement which elected William H. Havemeyer Mayor, and one of the men who obtained from the Legislature at Albany the charter of 1873. On the passage of that charter Mayor Havemeyer appointed him president of the department of taxes and assessments, one of the board of estimate and apportionment, and a commissioner of accounts, which positions he has held from May, 1873, for over six years, doing his utmost for a reduction of the expenses and taxes of the city. He was prominently named among the candidates by the regular Democracy and independent citizens in 1878 for Mayor, but declined to enter the contest.

CAPT. HENRY WOOSTER

Was born in what is now Seymour in 1802. His father, grandfather and great-grandfather were all named Henry and were all residents of this vicinity. Captain Wooster followed the sea, sailing between New Haven and the West Indies. He married Harriet, daughter of Joseph Riggs, of Oxford. Their children were: Harriet, Henry, Olive, Cecilia and Leslie B. Henry was lost at sea and Leslie B. met his death at the hands of the Indians in Arizona. Captain Wooster died in 1842.

THOMAS JAMES.

Thomas James was born in Swansea, Wales, Aug. 2, 1817. He was instructed in all branches of copper smelting, his father and grandfather having been skilled in that business, the latter having been one of the first smelters at the "White Rock" smelting works, which were completed in 1744. He came to this country in 1838, and entered the employ of Phelps, Dodge & Co., and commenced work in their mill at Derby, where he remained until 1847, when he removed to Ansonia, where the company had built a new mill.

After the Humphreysville Copper Co. was organized Raymond French persuaded Mr. James to come to Seymour in 1848 and take charge of the mill. He remained in charge through all the changes and when in 1874 the New Haven Copper Company was reorganized he was one of the principal stockholders and was elected president of the company, and this position he continued to hold until he resigned it in favor of his son, Thomas L. James, and was elected treasurer, which office he held until his death. He was a man of energy and ability, and of sterling integrity.

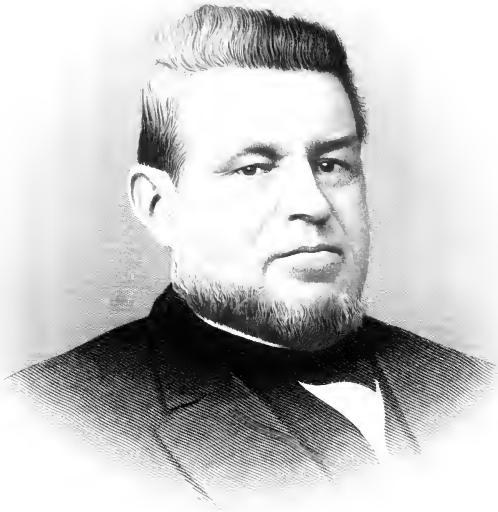

Mr. James was always earnest in advocating better schools and providing better opportunities for the children of the town to obtain a more advanced education, and indeed he was at the front in every enterprise that tended to improve the town.

He was one of the organizers of Christ Episcopal church of Ansonia, and after removing to Seymour he united with Trinity Episcopal church, of which he was a vestryman for a number of years and gave liberally to its support. He died July 4, 1887, aged 70 years.

HORACE B. WOOSTER,

H. B. Wooster, the original architect of the Seymour Manufacturing Company's works, was born in Naugatuck in 1827 and resided there until 1860, when he removed to Waterbury, where he was connected with the Waterbury Brass Company for eighteen years. While there he was one of the trustees of the M. E. church and a member of the city council.

In the fall of 1879 he came to Seymour as one of the stockholders of the Seymour Manufacturing Company and superintended the construction of the works which he had planned.

As a public man his influence was on the side of temperance and good order. He was elected a justice of the peace in 1882, a position for which he was eminently qualified, by his knowledge of law and general information, and by his sense of justice and the integrity of his character. He was a trustee of the Methodist Episcopal church in Seymour for several years and was also highly esteemed as a class leader. He died July 26, 1883.

AUSTIN GOODYEAR DAY,

The inventor of Kerite and other useful combinations of India rubber, was born in West Springfield, Mass., Nov. 24, 1834. Descended from the primitive stock of the early New England settlers, his education was carefully looked after, and early showing a peculiar fondness for study and investigation, he was prepared in the district school for his academic studies, with the view to enter college. But in 1840 his cousin, Charles Goodyear—who afterwards acquired fame and fortune in the India rubber business—made a visit to young Day's father and took him to Northampton, where he first saw the process of manufacturing rubber goods.

This incident determined his pursuit for life. Through his love of study he returned to Westfield Academy purposing to acquire a classical education, but in 1851 his cousin, Mr. Goodyear, prevailed upon him to come to his factory at Woburn, Mass., as correspondent and bookkeeper, but spent much of his time in the study of India rubber—its physical and chemical qualities, and the processes of its manufacture. Soon afterwards he went into a new factory at Springfield for the special purpose of perfecting the vulcanizing process. From this point dates the commercial success of the India rubber business.

Mr. Day continued in the employment of Mr. Goodyear for several years, instructing the workmen in the various factories set up, and conducting a vast number of experiments in the process of vulcanizing rubber.

While at the Roxbury factory he made the acquaintance of Prof. Hayes, afterward state assayer for Massachusetts, which proved of great value to him. It was under the general directions, and often the close inspection of the Professor, that Mr. Day now prosecuted many of his experiments, with new ardor and this long and varied course of experiments were of the highest importance in their bearing upon his later discoveries. Visiting all the India rubber factories, he not only rendered most important service in improving the processes of manufacture, but he acquired a more thorough knowledge of the business than perhaps any other man.

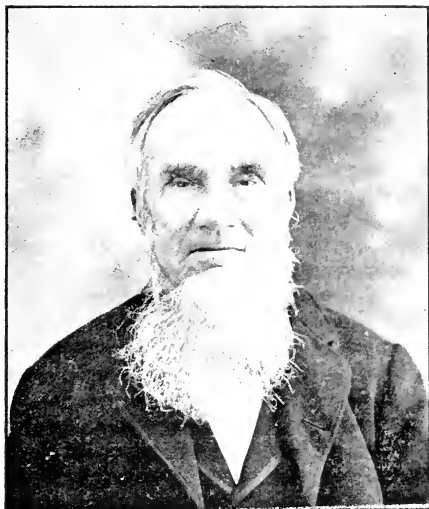

In 1854 Mr. Day bought a factory in Seymour, from Bassett & Hodge, removing his business he had begun in New Haven, and having invented a new compound, called Kerite, for the insulation of electric wires, he built up a plant for the manufacture of electric cables for telegraph and other purposes. This building was burned in March, 1864. The pencil work was moved to the brick shop southwest of the pin factory, now owned by the New Haven Copper Co., until the factory could be rebuilt. This was completed in March, 1865, and the lower floors used for the submarine telegraph works, while the upper part was retained for the manufacture of the hard rubber pencils and pen holders, which has been carried on by his brothers, H. P. and E. Day. Mr. A. G. Day continued in this business here until his death, Dec. 28, 1889.

JOHN H. TINGUE,

To whose enterprise Seymour owes the establishment of the extensive works of the Tingue Manufacturing Company, was born at Fort Plain, N. Y., in 1834. His early life was spent in New York City, in mercantile business. In 1880 he came to Seymour and established here the manufacture of plush, which had previously been made only in Europe. Here he gathered about him skillful mechanics and developed various processes of manufacture which produced the elegant pushes in new and ever-varying designs at greatly reduced cost, and a highly prosperous business was the result.

Mr. Tingue was widely known for his generosity and especially for his collection of buttons, at a cost of about $4,000, which he presented to the state and which may be seen at the capitol at Hartford. He died April 11, 1885.

SHARON Y. BEACH.

Sharon Y Beach was born in North Haven, May 21, 1809, a son of Giles Beach and Mary, daughter of Captain Jonathan Dayton, an officer of the Revolutionary war. Four uncles of Sharon Beach, sons of Captain Dayton, served in the company of their father. Benjamin Beach, grandfather of the subject of these lines, was the first settled minister in Seymour, then called Chusetown. Sharon Y. Beach came to Seymour in 1830 and in 1843 went into the paper business. In 1850 he became the sole owner and so continued until a few years before his death, when he gave it up to his sons.

He was elected justice of the peace while Seymour was a part of the town of Derby and after the incorporation of this town he was repeatedly elected to that office. He was at different times selectman, member of the board of relief and president of the board of education. He was for two years superintendent of the Congregational Sundayschool of Seymour and when the Baptist church was built in Ansonia he became the superintendent of the Sundayschool there, holding that position for six years. He was the first deacon of that church and a constant contributor to its funds.

SYLVESTER SMITH

Was for many years a paper manufacturer, his mill being located at the corner of Main and Day streets. He was one of the leading official members of the M. E. Church and was widely known as a local preacher. At the opening of the war of 1861-5 he was zealous for the prosecution of the war and was elected president of the Union League. In his later years he was appointed to the pastorate of churches in the New York East Conference, at Roxbury '81 and '88 to '91, at Lake Grove, L. I., '82 to '84, and at Bakerville '85 to '87. He died in Seymour March 31, 1893.

SAMUEL REYNOLDS HICKOX

Long known as Father Hickox, was born in Torrington Jan. 12, 1790, and married there in 1808. He was a miller by trade and ran a gristmill in Wolcottville and afterward in Waterbury, where he was one of the first and most efficient members of the First Methodist church. In 1821 he was licensed as a local preacher and is said to have preached to a large audience, in a ballroom, the first Methodist sermon ever heard in Waterbury. After this he frequently conducted services there. In 1825 he moved to Southbury, and in 1826 was ordained a local deacon by Bishop Hedding, in the old John street church in New York, and was the first pastor of the Union Chapel at Southford.

In 1828 he moved to Humphreysville, where he had charge of the gristmill near the Falls, where the plush mill now stands. He afterward engaged in clock making, bought a place on the south side of Pearl street, the third house east of the Methodist parsonage, and built a shop for his clock work. He frequently went to Waterbury and preached there.

He was greatly interested in the building of the Methodist church of 1847 and had a "town clock" put up in the tower. He was the Sundayschool superintendent in 1841-2 and for many years was one of the trustees of the church. He was as a father to the young converts, and his counsels to them and influence over them was of the most beneficial character. He died Mar. 14, 1861.

CAPT. BRADFORD STEELE.

In addition to mention on pages 238-9 it may be said of Capt. Steele, (b. Sept. 22, 1734; d. Apr. 10, 1804,) that after the closing of the port in Boston a town meeting was held November 29th, 1774, to consider the Continental Congress which had been held in Philadelphia. They resolved to abide by the Congress and appointed Lieutenant Bradford Steele one of the committee to carry it into execution.

He enlisted in the First regiment, the second company from Derby. He was made first Lieutenant and was probably in the battle of Bunker Hill. He served on various committees: of inspection for Derby, Dec. 11th, 1775; to enlist Continental soldiers and pay them their bounty; to procure soldiers clothing, to inspect provisions, etc. He took the oath of fidelity Sept. 16th, 1775. Dec. 25th, 1780, he was appointed to collect the rate and assessment to raise recruits for the army. He marched as Lieutenant in the Lexington alarm. He was commissioned 1st Lieutenant in May, 1775, in General Wooster's first regiment and served at the siege of Boston, was discharged in Dec., 1775.

As Captain he marched his company against Gen. Tryon at the New Haven alarm on July 5th, 1779. He served as Captain in the second militia regiment and was an officer of a volunteer company that joined Washington at Boston, and afterwards was captain of minute men. He was appointed Captain of the 18th company or trainband in the Eight Connecticut regiment in October, 1779. (Conn. Records, Vol. 2, p. 420.) He was in several conflicts defending New Haven and the coast along the Sound as far as New York. He commenced business in what is now Seymour in 1757, afterwards removed to Hartford and from thence back to Little River, where he purchased lands and built shops and houses. He was noted for his shrewdness, enterprise and strength of mind. He was prominent in the business transactions of the town.

CAPT. JOHN WOOSTER,

Was a descendant of Edward Wooster, who was born in England in 1622, was among the settlers of Milford in 1642, and came to Derby in 1644. Capt. John was one of the three who purchased Rimmon Falls and the land adjacent from the Indians, Joseph Chuse and John Houde in 1760. He kept an inn at the angle of the Oxford road and the Park road and inclosed several hundred acres on the hills west of his house for a deer park.

That he was the owner of slaves, as was common in these times, is evident from the record of a town meeting held in November, 1780, when it was "voted that the authority and selectmen be impowered and directed to give certificates to Capt. Daniel Holbrook and Capt. John Wooster to free and emancipate their servants, Negro men, on the condition that the said Negro men inlist into the State Regt. to be raised for the defence of this state, for the town, one year."

HARPIN RIGGS,

Born in what is now Seymour Dec. 9, 1813 was a son of John H., and grandson of Capt. John Riggs, a captain in the Revolutionary war. John H. Riggs married Mary Beecher and settled on Bungay, his son Harpin following in the occupation of the old homestead. He held at various times the offices of selectmen, justice of the peace and member of the board of education. He was a man of strong convictions and consistent beliefs, and was for nearly half a century a member of Trinity church. In 1840 he married Harriet Upson. They had seven children: John H., of Seymour; Royal, of Derby; Louise B., married Norman Sperry; Sarah, married George A. James; Hattie I., married Joseph G. Redshaw; and Mary, married Gilbert E. Osborne. He died Jan 26, 1900, aged eightysix years.

JOHN W. STORRS.

A native of Woodbridge but a resident of Humphreysville from early youth, he learned the trade of shoemaker under his father's instruction. He was appointed postmaster in the spring of 1850, on the death of George Lum, who had first been appointed by President Taylor. He held that position until the appointment of Mr. Betts under President Pierce in 1853. Soon after he started the Seymour Independent, which continued about two years. In 1857 he removed to Birmingham and in 1858 he took editorial charge of the Derby Journal and was afterward connected with other papers. He was the author of a history of the Twentieth Connecticut Volunteers, which was said to be the best regimental history ever published in the state. He was well known as a poet of much ability. The following verses written by him show his belief:

“What shall you say of me? This if you can—
 That he loved like a child and lived like a man;
 That with head that was bended he reverent stood
 In the presence of all that he knew to be good;
 That he strove as he might with pen and with tongue
 To cherish the right and to banish the wrong;
 That the world was to him, as he went on his way,
 As the bud to the flower: as the dawn to the day
 That he knew was to come. E'en say, if you can,
 That he labored and prayed for the crowning of man
 As king of himself, that the God that he knew
 Was the God of the many as well as the few—
 The Father of all. Write, then, if you must,
 Of the errors that came with the clay and the dust:
 But add—as you may, perhaps—to the verse,
 For his having lived in it the world was no worse.”

HENRY B. BEECHER

Was the son of Lewis and Martha B. Beecher of Southbury, and was a descendant of Isaac Beecher, one of the early settlers of New Haven, among whose descendants were numbered Rev. Henry Ward Beecher of Brooklyn.

He was one of the “Six Partners” who in 1847 organized under the name of French, Swift and Co., all being skilled in the manufacture of augers and bits. He became the sole owner in 1866 and was the last survivor of the firm.

He was for years one of the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal church and was a liberal contributor to the various departments of church work. As a trustee he was prudent and kindly in counsel, seeking only the best interests of the church, with the same good judgment which had characterized him as a successful business man. He died Sept. 24, 1880.

DR. JOSHUA KENDALL

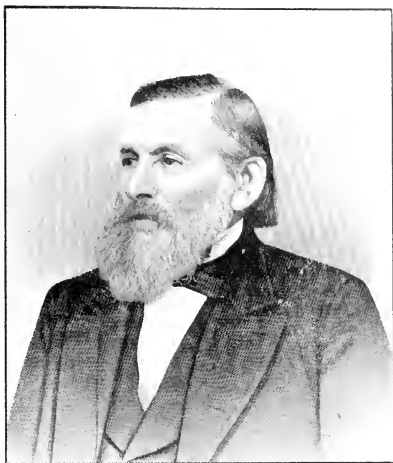

Came to Seymour in 1832, as a young physician. He was born in Tioga county, Pa., in 1806. He was a practicing physician here for more than half a century. He was appointed postmaster in 1841 and in 1849 he was a member of the General Assembly as representative of the town of Derby, which then included what is now Seymour. He was also county commissioner for one year, in the 'forties. For about fifty years he was officially connected with the schools as acting school visitor, and after the consolidation of the districts in 1868 as a member of the board of education.

WARREN FRENCH,

Son of Walter French, who first introduced the manufacture of augers into this place, and was for many years a leader in this line of manufacture, was born in Ashford, Nov. 10, 1804. He, with his brother Wales, carried on the business for a time in a shop opposite the upper works of the James Swan Company, and was afterward for many years one of the "Six Partners" in the same business.

His parents were members of the Episcopal church, and his first recollections of attending Sundayschool were in the Union Episcopal (now Trinity) church, where many of the children came barefoot and sat on slab benches. He was early confirmed a member of that church, but in 1837 he joined the Methodist church, of which he remained ever after a consistent and zealous member. For nearly forty years he was one of the trustees of the church, was president of the board in 1873-4, and was one of the building committee appointed by the trustees to secure the erection of the present parsonage. His ability as exhorter induced the quarterly conference to license him as local preacher, an office which he filled with honor, and without compensation, as long as his health permitted, preaching at Great Hill, Beacon Falls and other places where the churches were not sufficiently strong to support regular pastors. He was superintendent of the Sundayschool in 1849, was a class leader, and was one of the most liberal contributors for church work. He died June 16, 1881.

A. G. DE WOLFE.

Alva Goodrich DeWolfe was born in the town of Morris, in Litchfield county, Aug. 25th, 1810. He was the youngest of the five children of Levi and Hulda (Stanley) De Wolfe. The father of Hulda Stanley served in the Revolution, and being taken a prisoner, died while confined in one of the New York prison ships.

The boyhood of A. G. De Wolfe was spent in Morris, where in his father's shop, he gave the first evidence of his strong perceptive faculties and great mechanical skill. When but fourteen years of age he built a lathe without having one to pattern after, and soon became very skillful in work on guns, watches and machinery, in the employ of A. Hart, clock manufacturer. He next went to Plymouth Hollow, where he was engaged by Eli and Henry Terry, at that time making wooden clocks, and for five years was their toolmaker and general machinist.

When twentyone years of age, in the fall of 1831, he started to go to Havana, Cuba, to build and set up Jennings' camphene street lamps. He sailed on a brig from New York, which experienced heavy seas off Cape Hatteras, which damaged the vessel, but it finally reached Charleston harbor in safety. Here his plans were changed, and went to Georgetown, S. C., where he worked in a gun shop. In the summer of 1832 he came to New York, where he was employed in the manufacture of philosophical, mathematica and nautical instruments.

In 1837 he was again at Thomaston, where he arranged the machinery in the Terry shops for the manufacture of woolen goods. He afterward built machinery for Seth Thomas, of the same place for making brass clocks and remained there several years. In 1846 he moved to Springfield, Mass., where he was associated with others in the Wasson Car Works. In 1850 he went to Harlem, where he established a machine shop, and began his work as a builder of machinery for working rubber, which led him into his later avocation, in which he attained distinguished success. In 1853 he devised a method of pressing hard rubber goods into shape, which was successfully applied by the Novelty Rubber Company to the manufacture of rubber buttons, etc. This industry was established at Beacon Falls in 1855, with machinery arranged by Mr. DeWolfe. This company soon moved to New Brunswick, N. J., where he also went for a short time.

In this work he had been associated with Mr. Goodyear and other inventors and experimenters on rubber and as an expert in this work he went to Beacon Falls in 1856, but was soon after engaged by Mr. A. G. Day to take charge of his works in Seymour. He was very successful in the difficult process of cleaning the rubber, as well as in other departments of the business.

About 1860 he began experimenting upon the insulation of wire, to cover it by machine process. This work was well under way when the mill was burned in 1864. It was soon rebuilt and supplied with better machinery, much of it constructed by Mr. DeWolfe. Several patents were awarded him and his inventions have been of great benefit in rendering more safe and efficient the transmission of electric currents. He died Aug. 10, 1896.

Mr. DeWolfe was married in 1839, to Lucy Ann Hotchkiss, of Watertown, Conn., who died Sept. 4th, 1857. His family consists of five daughters, all living, Hulda, married W. Lea Roberts; Elizabeth, married Charles Sears, of New York; Maria, married James Barber, deceased; Helen, married Joseph Ineson, deceased, and for her second husband, John Jackson, of Ansonia; and Frances, who married W. R. Brixey.

DR. ABIRAM STODDARD

Was born in Watertown, Jan. 27, 1777, graduated at Yale in 1800. He afterward attended medical lectures at the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, where he received the degree of M. D., riding from his home in Watertown to Philadelphia and back on horseback. He settled in Seymour in 1804 and had a large practice. He was a man of great energy, though very eccentric. He was active in politics and was twice elected to the General Assembly, from Oxford in 1814, his home being then north of the Oxford line, and from Derby in 1826. He was a Democrat, the other party being then known as Federal.

He was always ready to go when his services were needed and whether there was a prospect of getting his pay or not he would attend in the darkest night and the most inclement weather. He died Nov. 26, 1855. His son Jonathan graduated at Yale in 1831.

was a lawyer, living in New Haven, was appointed U. S. District Attorney for Connecticut by President Polk in 1846, and was appointed attorney for New Haven county in 1853. Thomas Stoddard, son of Abiram, graduated at Yale in 1836. William Stoddard, son of Abiram, studied law in New Haven and made his home there. He had the reputation of a thorough scholar and an able advocate.

SMITH BOTSFORD.

One who contributed largely and in a very practical way to the success of some of the industries of Humphreysville and Seymour, was Smith Botsford, who had charge of the fitting up of most of the mills in town during a long series of years, including the rebuilding of Smith's papermill at least three times after it had been destroyed by fire; the mill of DeForest & Hodge, built more than half a century ago, Beach's paper mill, etc. He also built many mills in various towns throughout this state and in New York and Pennsylvania. He was not particularly active in public affairs, but when called on to serve the public he did so efficiently and to the satisfaction of his constituents. In 1844-5 he was the school committee of the Cedar Ridge district, in 1862 was elected a Justice of the Peace, and in 1870 was elected to represent the town in the General Assembly. In 1843 he built the house on North street which he occupied until his death, making fiftysix years that it had been his home. He was a noted fox hunter, and even after passing four score years was successful in the hunt for those wary creatures. He was married on Christmas eve, 1829, to Miss Mary Ann Sanford, a sister of the late Elihn Sanford of New Haven. They had six children, five of whom are living. John E. and Edward N. Botsford and Mrs. Mary A. Carroll, wife of Rev. James H. Carroll, live in New Haven, Charles N. Botsford in Yalesville and Howard S. Botsford in Nebraska. The other daughter, Ellen E., who married Henry S. Johnson, died in 1861.

He was for half a century a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and was repeatedly elected trustee and steward. He was spoken of "as a quiet, unpretending Christian man, a man of sound judgment, much originality and strong convictions, but one who never burdened others with his opinions, with charity for his fellow men, and in the decline of life waiting patiently for the muffled oar of the conqueror of all to bear him to the other shore." He died Aug. 4, 1899, aged 93 years and 6 mo.

GEORGE W. DIVINE.

Born in Newburg, N. Y., in 1822, was the grandson of Samuel Divine who served in the Revolutionary War, and of Gen. Joseph Chilton, who was on the staff of General Washington. He enlisted in the 2nd U. S. Infantry in 1840, as musician, for five years. He was in the army school at Fort Wood, on Bedloe's Island, for a year, and was then assigned to Co. D, U. S. Infantry, under Capt. Samuel Heintzelman, afterward Gen. Heintzelman, and served two years in Florida, in the Seminole war. The regiment in which he served afterward furnished eighteen Union generals, among whom were Generals Casey, Heintzelman, Candee, (killed by the Modocs) Steele, McKinsty, Lyon, Davidson and Scammon. The regiment was ordered to Buffalo, N. Y., in 1845, and while there he was one of the band that played Bonaparte's March at the reception of Marshal Bertrand, who was with Napoleon at St. Helena when he died.

Mr. Divine came to Seymour (then Humphreysville) soon after he completed his term of service in the army and was for a number of years the Captain of the Humphreysville Greys, who had their armory in the second story of what is now the south wing of Mrs. M. M. Randall's store building. He was elected to various offices, including those of selectman and justice of the peace, filling the latter office for twelve years, and in 1879 was elected to represent the town in the legislature. He became a member of Morning Star Lodge in 1852 and was Master of the Lodge in 1862. He died April 18, 1889, aged 65 years.

CHARLES COUPLAND.

This enterprising and successful manufacturer was born in Huddersfield, in Yorkshire, England, April 11th, 1840. His parents were Robert and Mary Coupland, and he was the second of a family of nine children. His father was a woolen manufacturer on a small scale, but thoroughly skilled in his occupation, and was considered an ingenious man. Charles Coupland learned the business with his father, getting in an apprenticeship of twelve years a thorough knowledge of it which was of immense value to him in later years.

He came to America in 1860 and was in charge of departments of the Baltic mills, Philadelphia, and afterward owned and operated mills at Burrville, Ct., and later was in charge at Templeton, Mass., and Woodville, R. I. In 1871 he became manager and part owner of a mill at Thomaston and in 1874 he became superintendent of A. T. Stewart's thirteen woolen mills in four states.

In 1880 while still in the employ of A. T. Stewart, Mr. Coupland invented a new and very speedy way to weave mohair pile goods, which he determined to utilize in a factory for himself, with the aid of interested capital. At this time he was introduced to John H. Tingle, a wealthy dry goods merchant, of New York, who consented to embark with him in this new enterprise, Mr. Coupland agreeing to devise, construct and place in operation all the necessary machinery, Mr. Tingle to see that there was no lack of capital. Looking about for a suitable site for the factory they came to Seymour in 1880, and bought the Kalmia mills, and the work of building the machinery was begun by Mr. Coupland, and from that time until his death in April, 1901, he continued in charge of the works.

Mr. Coupland was a public spirited citizen and responded generously to appeals for contributions for the advancement of local enterprises, especially for the public library.

ASHBEL BENEDICT STORRS,

Son of Edmund B. and Eunice L. Storrs, was born in Humphreysville in 1822. He was a builder, making a specialty of bridge work. He rebuilt the Smith papermill twice after it had been burned, and built two papermills in Westville. He went later to Cuba to superintend the erection of sugar mills for the Farrel Foundry & Machine Co.

He was a justice of the peace for many years and until he reached the age limit of seventy years. He became a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., in 1852, and in 1857 was Master of the Lodge. He was also a member of Solomon Chapter, R. A. M., of Union Council, R. & S. M., of New Haven Commandery, Knights Templar, and of Nonnawauk Tribe, I. O. R. M. He died Dec. 29, 1894, aged 73 years.

SAMUEL R. DEAN

Was born in Caroline, Tompkins county, N. Y., Feb. 13th, 1832. He spent a few years in Ithaca, N. Y., and from there he went to Owego, where for five years he was in a large dry goods store and became thoroughly familiar with the business, laying the foundation for his future success, but his health not being good he removed in 1858 to Minnesota, where he remained for a year and a half, during which time his health was restored and he returned to Owego and his former occupation.

In 1862 he was married to Miss Anna Curtis Fairchild, the wedding taking place at the Congregational church in Oxford. They returned to Owego where they remained until 1868, when they came to Seymour and Mr. Dean became associated in business with V. H. McEwen, under the firm name of Dean & McEwen, in a store which stood where the Beach building now stands, at the corner of Bank and Second streets.

In 1868 this partnership was dissolved, Mr. McEwen remaining at the old stand and Mr. Dean entering into a partnership with C. B. Wooster and Virgil Buckingham, under the firm name of Wooster, Dean & Buckingham, in the brick store opposite the depot, in which he continued in business for thirtyone years. In 1882 he became the sole proprietor. He was a member of the board of relief for a number of years, and was twice elected to represent the town in the General Assembly, in 1885 and 1886.

He was a member of Morning Star Lodge and of New Haven Commandery, Knights Templar, and intermediate orders. He was a Baptist but since his residence in Seymour was a regular attendant of the Congregational church and for thirty years was treasurer of the Sundayschool. He died March 25, 1900, aged 68 years.

REV. SHELDON DAVIS,

Son of Anson and Sally (Prudden) Davis, graduated at Washington College, now Trinity, in 1837, and received the degree of M. A. in 1840. His first pastorate was at Patterson, Putnam co., N. Y., afterward at Pleasant Valley and Hobart. For many years he labored as a missionary among the Indians of New York state, and was the author of a historical volume on the Indians and the work of the Moravians among them.

From '63 to '66 he was warden of the Episcopal church charities foundation, living in Brooklyn, N. Y., and from '66 to '72 was rector of St. Andrew's church of Northford. After that date he made his home in Seymour, officiating in different parishes. He was very liberal in aiding parishes of limited means and in West Ansonia built the Immanuel church entirely at his own expense and gave it to the parish which was then organized.

He was a member of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, of the Moravian Historical Society of Nazareth, Pa., of the New Haven County Historical Society, and was a corresponding member of the New York Historical Society. He died April 7, 1891, aged 78 years.

HENRY KERSHAW

Was born in Halifax, Yorkshire county, England, June 28th, 1819. His father was an officer in the British army and was in India seventeen years, being at the taking of Seringapatam May 4th, 1799. He was then a lieutenant. He was also in active service in France two years, and was at the battle of Waterloo, being then Sergeant Major. Mr. Kershaw had two cousins in the service at the siege of Sebastopol and two brothers and a cousin served in the War of the Rebellion. He came to this country in 1849 and to Seymour in 1851, and was for about forty years engineer at the works of the New Haven Copper Co. He was one of the vestrymen of Trinity church, and was for thirtyeight years a member of Morning Star Lodge. He died suddenly in church March 23, 1894, aged 74 years.

S. H. CANFIELD,

Son of Samuel and Mary Canfield, and grandson of Abiel Canfield, a soldier of the Revolution, was postmaster for twentytwo years, from June 1, 1861, to Sept. 1, 1867, and from June 1, 1869, to April 1, 1887. He was town clerk from 1868 and town treasurer from 1869, holding both offices until sickness in 1889 and '90 prevented him from longer service. He was elected a member of the school board in 1875 and held that position until 1890, being also school treasurer. He was a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., and was a charter member of Nonnawauk Tribe, I. O. R. M. He was also one of the original members of Humphrey Lodge, K. of P. He died March 2, 1898, aged sixtyone years.

HORACE A. RADFORD,

Son of Beers and Harriet A. Radford, of Middlebury born in 1811, came to Humphreysville in 1832. He was an auger and bit maker and in 1847 became a member of the firm of French, Swift & Co., and was for several years the traveling salesman for the firm. In 1852 he became a member of the Upton Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of augers, bits, etc., and in 1878 he was elected first selectman. He was a member of the Methodist church and a charter member of Mechanics Lodge, I. O. O. F., and at his death, May 3, 1895, he left legacies to both of these organizations.

SHELDON SANFORD

Was a descendant of Zadoc Sanford, 1st, who settled nearly two hundred years ago at Lopus, in the west part of what is now the town of Beacon Falls. His house stood where Andrew Culver's house now stands. His son Zadoc, 2nd, served in the Revolutionary War. The third son of Zadoc, 2nd, was Philo Sanford, who married Charity Wheeler, daughter of Moses Wheeler. Their eldest son was Sheldon Sanford, born April 7, 1879. He was the oldest member of the Congregational church, of which he became a member Jan. 8, 1854. He lived for many years on Rimmon Hill where he had a large farm which he sold some thirty years ago to A. D. Carrington, since when he had lived in Seymour.

LUGRAND SHARPE.

Son of Thomas and Mary Sharpe, was born in Ridgefield, June 1st, 1797. He was a great-grandson of Thomas Sharpe of Newtown, who was one of the original thirtysix proprietors and a surveyor of the town of Newtown. His father served in the Revolutionary War, in the regiment commanded by Col. Philip Burr Bradley, of Ridgefield, and at the close of the war he settled in Ridgefield, purchasing a gristmill and house, which later he sold and purchased a farm in Oxford, but died soon after. Lugrand Sharpe lived in Southford until 1842 and was an earnest and efficient laborer in the Methodist society formed there, of which Rev. Samuel Hickox of Seymour was the first pastor. It was to a great extent due to his efforts that a union meeting house was built there. In 1823 he married Olive M., daughter of Ebenezer Booth, cabinet maker, who built a house, dam and factory half a mile west of Southford. In 1842 he removed to Humphreysville and became one of the most efficient members of the M. E. church. He was superintendent of the Sunday school from 1843 to 1850, and later for many years held various offices in the church. He contributed liberally to such religious and benevolent causes as received his approval, giving over $1,500 to the missionary cause during the last nine years of his life. He died May 1st, 1876, aged 78 years.

ELI GILLETTE,

Of Great Hill, carried on business for many years as a tanner in a building at the corner north of the church. He was active in maintaining a good school at Great Hill, and after the districts were consolidated he was elected a member of the town board of education. He was a member of the Great Hill Methodist church and for more than forty years was one of the trustees of the church. He died Aug. 22, 1899, aged eighty-nine years.

EDWARD F. BASSETT

Was born Sept. 17, 1824, in Woodbury, where his father, Zerah Bassett, was in the carriage business. While he was yet a boy his father sold out his business and moved down to the south part of Oxford, near the Wire mill. In 1847 Mr. Bassett, in company with David Johnson, bought out the furniture business then carried on by Albert J. Steele in the building in the south angle of Maple and Main streets, Mr. Johnson selling out to Mr. Bassett about a year later. Mr. Bassett soon after purchased a tract of land in the angle between Maple street and Washington avenue and built a house on the north end of it, on the avenue front, and a workshop and salesroom on the Maple street front. Some twenty years later he purchased a lot on Bank street and built a large store which he occupied until he sold the business to Mr. Ward in 1889.

Mr. Bassett avoided politics and office seeking, but in 1851 he was one of those who were named in the act of incorporation of the High School Association for the purpose of helping in the establishment of a school of a higher grade, and in 1866 he was elected town clerk, but it was only by nominating him without his knowledge or consent, and he only learned of his name being on the ticket when he went to the polls to cast his vote. He consented to fill the office that year but positively declined a renomination. In this election as town clerk he is said to have been the first Republican elected to any office in Seymour. He died June 26, 1900.

STEPHEN HOPKINS CULVER, son of Stephen Culver of Nangatuck, was for about fifty years a resident of this place. He was named from Stephen Hopkins, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, from whom his mother was descended. Mr. Culver was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1868 he was elected first selectman, and again in 1869. He had two sons and two daughters, B. F. Culver, who died in Derby, S. Hart Culver of Seymour, Mrs. Chas. N. Hinman of Ansonia, and Mrs. L. Whitlock of Springfield, Mass. He died Oct. 7, 1887, aged nearly seventynine years.

BENNETT WOOSTER was a son of Nathaniel Wooster of Quaker Farms, who lived to the age of 94 years. He was a descendant of Edward Wooster of Derby, who was born in England in 1622, came to Milford in 1661, and to Derby in 1664, and was the grandfather of Gen. David Wooster who won fame in the French War and in the War of the Revolution. Bennett Wooster carried on the business of blacksmithing for many years where the copper mill now stands, and afterward carried on brick making near his residence on Pearl street. He was prominent in town and school affairs fifty to sixty years ago, and in 1851 was elected the first representative from the town of Seymour to the General Assembly. He died Oct. 1, 1883, aged eightysix years, leaving one son, Charles B. Wooster, who was town clerk of the town of Seymour from 1850 to 1863, and represented the town in the Legislature in 1851. He afterward removed to New Haven, where for many years he was engaged in the manufacture of carriages.

NATHAN R. WOOSTER, son of Nathaniel Wooster of Quaker Farms, was born Nov. 18, 1809. In his earlier years he worked at his trade, that of mason, in the southern states during the winter time. In the winter of 1832-33 and, 33-4 he worked on the fort at Mobile Point, Ala., and in the city of Mobile, and the two following winters in Georgia. Ransom Lum, brother of Dea. E. A. Lum, worked on the fort at the same time as Mr. Wooster, who returned in the spring of 1834 by a vessel which went to Havana for a part of her cargo, thence to Charleston, Mass. The vessel was blown out of her route by adverse winds to such a distance that thirteen days was lost by the divergence and return, so that it was not until thirty days after leaving Havana that the vessel reached Charleston. The ship's crew were not sufficient to handle the boat all through the storm and at the same time keep the pumps manned, and the passengers took their turns at the work, and in return had their passage money refunded. On arrival at Charleston, Mass., Mr. Wooster came home by stage by way of Providence, Putnam, Pomfret and Hartford, his home being then at Quaker Farms.

He moved to Seymour in 1852, and since then has filled the offices of justice of the peace, grand juror, assessor, member of the board of relief, town treasurer and first selectman and town agent.

He was known as one of Seymour's most reliable and trustworthy citizens. He died Oct. 5, 1898, aged eighty-nine years.

JASON BASSETT, son of Abel Bassett, was a builder in Humphreysville from 1829 to 1833, but while his home was here he took large contracts elsewhere. He built Episcopal churches in Huntington, Naugatuck, Waterbury and Hartford. In 1833 he removed to New York City and four years later to Rochester, where he built the courthouse and other large buildings. About 1850 he removed to Buffalo, where he was also a very successful builder and where he died.

EZEKIEL GILBERT was one of the leading business men of Humphreysville and Seymour for a period of over thirty years. He at first kept a store a little below Squantuck, then the principal travelled road from a large section of country up the river, to the Derby Landing, long a shipping point of considerable importance. In 1824 he came to the Ville and leased the hotel on Broad street where he remained until 1830 when he bought the house on Main street, at the foot of Maple street, now owned by his daughter, Mrs. M. M. Randall, and built the store on the opposite side of the road, which was burned some years ago, and carried on business there for several years, finally selling out to Humphrey & Wooster.

Mr. Gilbert was in company with Bennett Wooster in the manufacture of augers and bits, the forging being done in Mr. Wooster's blacksmith shop on the lower flat, and the finishing under the sawmill near the Falls. In 1845 Mr. Gilbert was associated with S. Y. Beach and Samuel Roselle in the purchase of the papermill at the Falls, the firm name being Gilbert, Beach & Co., and was actively engaged in that business when, in the midst of a busy life, he was called away, July 4, 1848, aged 55 years, leaving a son, Lucius Gilbert, who died in 1852, and six daughters, who afterward became Mrs. Thomas Stoddard, Mrs. John J. Osborn, Mrs. Capt. Leslie Bryson, Mrs. Minot Osborn, Mrs. H. W. Randall and Mrs. H. P. Day.

CHARLES SWIFT was born in Mansfield, Ct., April 29, 1810. He was left an orphan at an early age, and learned his trade, auger and bit making, of his uncle, Alfred Lilly, of Mansfield. Mr. Lilly boarded his young men and required them to be called early in the morning, except Charles Swift, whom he would not allow to be called, for he said Charles was so energetic that when he did get up he did more work than any of the rest. He came to Humphreysville in 1835, and in 1847 was one of the "six partners" who purchased the property on Little River and established an auger and bit factory there. He was a man of great executive ability, unimpeachable integrity, resolute in business, kind and sympathetic to the poor, especially so to his employees and their families, and interested in education and the suppression of intemperance, and aided by his membership and influence the two temperance societies in the place, the Total Abstinence Society and the Sons of Temperance. He was a public spirited man, taking a deep interest in any movement that tended towards the improvement of the town.

He married Frances Utley, daughter of Nathan Utley, of Ashford, May 1, 1836, and died Sept. 28, 1855, aged fortyfive years, leaving two sons and three daughters; Theodore M. Swift, who served in the war of 1861-5, in the 27th Regt., N. Y. V.; Charles W. Swift, of Ansonia, who served in Co. H, 20th C. V.; Mrs. Frances M. Eaton, of South Orange, N. J.; Mrs. Sarah S. Merrick, of Chicago, Ill.; and Miss Hortense V. Swift, of Seymour.

JEL CHATFIELD, son of Elnathan and Hannah Chatfield, built a house on a plateau south of Bladens Brook, about a mile east of the Naugatuck river, and a few hundred feet west of his father's house. He was one of the first society's committee of the Episcopal church, now Trinity church, in 1797. There was in his time a gristmill a few rods northeast of the house, with two run of stone.

One pair were French burr stones for which he sent to France, nothing of the kind having at that time been found in this country. He ground wheat extensively, large quantities of it being then grown in this vicinity, and for years he supplied Yale college with all the wheat flour used there. He died June 14, 1836, aged 79 years.

LEMAN CHATFIELD, son of Joel and Ruth Chatfield, lived in the house built by his father. He was a selectman of the town of Derby in 1838 and 1840, and in 1841 he represented the town of Derby in the legislature. He was one of the most active in the movement for the incorporation of the town of Seymour in 1850, his name was the first on the petition presented to the legislature, and in the act of incorporation he is named as the moderator of the first town meeting. At this meeting he was elected first selectman and he was re-elected to that office in 1853. In 1852 he was elected justice of the peace and in 1854 he was re-elected for two years. He is mentioned in the History of King Hiram Lodge as one of its members and as one who had the courage to affix his name to the memorable Masonic declaration of principles in 1832. He died Nov. 14, 1873, aged 84 years.

JARED BASSETT, son of Abram and Deborah Bassett, was a mason. The stone work of the Second Methodist church was laid by him and was remarkably fine work, and when it was torn down in 1892 it was remarked that the tenacity of the mortar was more like that of the ancient Roman walls than of ordinary modern work. He was a zealous and efficient member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He died May 16, 1869, aged 77 years. His oldest son, Julius Bassett, enlisted at the first call for volunteers in April, 1861, in Co. B, 3d Regt., for three months, and at the close of his enlistment he re-enlisted as Captain of Co. A, 15th, C. V., and was killed in action at Kinston, N. C., March 8, 1865.

SAMUEL ROSELLE, son of Samuel and Sarah Roselle, of Cortland, N. Y., came to Humphreysville in 1817 and was for many years identified with the paper industry. In 1843 he was in company with George L. Hodge and Sharon Y. Beach in the manufacture of paper in the papermill at the Falls, and in 1845 he was associated with Ezekiel Gilbert and Mr. Beach in the purchase of the mill. They continued in business there until 1850, when Mr. Gilbert withdrew and Mr. Roselle with Mr. Beach pulled down the mill and rebuilt at Blueville, on Bladens Brook. Mr. Roselle sold out his share to Mr. Beach a few years later. Mr. Roselle never took much interest in political affairs but was justice of the peace for some years and was also a member of the board of relief. He died April 4, 1887, aged nearly eighty years, leaving a son, Charles Roselle, and a daughter, Mrs. Samuel A. Beach, both of Seymour.

HARRIS B. MUNSON was born in Middlebury in 1821, came to Humphreysville about 1835 and worked at his trade of carpenter, teaching the Cedar Ridge school in the winters of 1843-4 and '44-5. He studied law and was admitted to practice in 1846 and in the spring of 1852 he was elected justice of the peace, which office he held for eighteen years. From 1852 to 1854 he was a judge of the county court. In 1853 he was elected representative, was re-elected in 1854, and in 1863-4-5-6-7, representing the town in the General Assembly for seven years. He managed successfully many important legal cases and was widely known throughout the state. He died in Seymour Feb. 2, 1885.

FREDERICK M. CLEMONS served in the War of 1861-5 in Co. D, 23d C. V., and after the war was for years the superintendent of the Birmingham Iron Foundry Co.'s works, but made his home in Seymour. In 1875 he was elected selectman and was re-elected in 1876. He also served several years as a member of the board of education of the town of Seymour. He was one of the trustees of the Great Hill M. E. church and was a liberal contributor to its funds. He was a man of untiring energy and was intrusted with great responsibilities in which he always acquitted himself well.

He was a member of Upson Post, G. A. R., of Seymour; of Ousatonic Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Derby; of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., of Seymour; Clark Commandery, Knights Templar, of Waterbury; and intermediate orders. He died July 25, 1885, aged fortyseven years.

CAPT. PHILO HOLBROOK was for nine years the master of a ship engaged in the West India trade. His home was in the south part of the town, in the section known as Kinneytown. He was one of the selectmen of the town in 1855 and 1865, and in 1869 represented the town in the General Assembly. He was for thirtynine years a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M. He died Nov. 18, 1878, aged seventyseven years.

DAVID BETTS, originally from Woodbury, was a resident of Seymour for nearly forty years. After a short residence in Derby he came to Seymour in February 1853, and kept a drug store in French's building, now Canfield's. From May 1853, to April 1861, he was postmaster. In 1861 he was elected town treasurer, and was re-elected in '62 and '63.

He afterward kept a store in Davis' block, and later took in Morris Atwood as a partner. Mr. Betts sold his interest to Charles French who was associated with Atwood under the firm name of Atwood & French. Mr. Betts sometime later repurchased Mr. French's interest and the grocery business was given up and a clothing business was opened and continued for some years, but for several years before his death he had been retired from business. He was highly esteemed by all who knew him and will be remembered as an upright and conscientious citizen.

CAPTAIN WILSON WYANT, SON of John and Charlotte Wyant of New Milford, was born Mar. 18, 1818. He came to Humphreysville in 1839 and worked in Smith's papermill and later in Dwight & French's auger works. On June 13th, 1846, he was commissioned a lieutenant of the Humphreysville Greys, 5th Light Infantry, 2nd regiment, of the militia of Connecticut, his commission being issued and signed by Gov. Isaac Toucey of New Haven. Upon the outbreak of the rebellion in 1861 he enlisted, April 22d, serving as a private in Company E, 5th Connecticut Volunteers, until June 21st, when he was commissioned 1st lieutenant of the company by William B. Buckingham, Connecticut's famous War Governor, and soon after was commissioned captain of Co. E, 5th C. V. I. He was in active service until Jan. 31st, 1863, when he resigned his command on account of ill health.

In 1840 he married Violet Northrop of Sherman, Conn. They had five children, Charlotte, Minnie, Jennie, Wilson D. and Charles, only two of whom survive him, Wilson D. Wyant and Mrs. John H. Morris. Capt. Wyant was a member of the M. E. church, and when the second church was built, in 1847-8, he was one of the trustees. He died March 29, 1890.

CORNELIUS W. JAMES, son of Thomas James, was educated in the common schools of Seymour and in the Glendenning Academy. He was engaged in the copper business, in which his ancestors had been skilled for generations, and was for five years secretary and treasurer of the New Haven Copper Co. He was elected Selectman of the town of Seymour in 1874 and again in 1875, and was for a number of years a member of the School Board and one of the Acting School Visitors. He was also for twelve years a member of the Board of Relief, and discharged the duties of the several offices to which he had been elected to the entire satisfaction of his constituents.

He was for a number of years Assistant Chief of the Fire Department, and was a member of Mechanics' Lodge, I. O. O. F.; of Humphrey Lodge, K. of P.; of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., New Haven Commandery, Knights Templar; Pyramid Temple, of Bridgeport, and intermediate orders. He died Sept. 21, 1892, aged 50 years.

NATHAN HOLBROOK of Great Hill was a man of strong temperance principles and unquestioned integrity and was greatly respected by all who knew him. He was twice elected selectman and four times for terms of three years each as member of the board of education, which office he held at the time of his death. He died May 9th, 1887, aged 57 years.

CHARLES A. WOOSTER, son of Clark and Grace Wooster, was at one time engaged in the manufacture of axes in a shop on Little River. He was afterward associated with S. R. Dean and Virgil Buckingham in mercantile business. He was for nearly forty years a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M. He died Nov. 10, 1891, aged seventy years.

JOHN N. POPP, son of Conrad and Catherina Popp, was born in Stambach, Germany, in 1842, and came to America in 1865, and established a merchant tailoring store in Seymour, employing from twelve to fifteen men in his custom work for this and neighboring cities and towns. He was a leading member of the famous Concordia Singing Society, and was also a member of several fraternal orders, including the Freemasons, the Odd Fellows, and the United Workmen. He died Oct. 2, 1897, aged fiftyfive years.

HORATIO N. EGGLESTON, from Berkshire, Mass., was for many years engaged in railroad building. He had charge of the work on the Naugatuck Railroad from Seymour to Winsted, and had contracts on railroads in Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Virginia. At the time the war broke out he was engaged on a railroad in Virginia and was living at Leesburg, from whence he came northward before the lines were so closely drawn as to prevent. He was in the employ of Hon. C. French for twentyseven years, during the first part of that time as travelling agent for the car spring works. He was for many years a member of the school board and a vestryman of Trinity church. In 1873 he represented the town in the General Assembly. He died April 1, 1893, aged 65 years.

OLIVER STODDARD CHATFIELD, son of Joel and Ruth, in his earlier years, tried life on the sea but after some experience in the shipping trade between New Haven and the West Indies was content to remain on the land. He was for some years captain of a military company in Bethany and ran his father's sawmill, furnishing the timber for the older Yale College buildings, for the first M. E. church that formerly stood on the corner of the New Haven Green, and for other prominent buildings of that period.

He married in 1822 Abigail Tuttle, daughter of Amasa and Sybil (Wooster) Tuttle, who lived near Quassapaug Lake, in Middlebury. She was born March 28, 1802; was for sixtyseven years a member of the Seymour M. E. church, and died April 14, 1887. They made their home in the fine old family mansion which stands on the New Haven road exactly on the Woodbridge town line, but after the incorporation of the town of Seymour Mr. Chatfield was accounted a resident thereof. This place is now owned by his daughter, Mrs. Mary J. Ford.

He was a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., of Seymour, and a Royal Arch Mason, and at his death was one of the oldest in the state. He was one of the most liberal contributors for the building of the second Methodist church in 1847. He owned five farms, in Seymour, Woodbridge and Bethany.

Of his children, Howard G. Chatfield lives in Seymour and Henry G. Chatfield in Woodbridge. Another son, Charles C. Chatfield, graduated at Yale in '66. In his senior year he began the publication of the Yale Courant, the first college paper in the country. He was the class poet and was a leading member of the West Chapel street church, now merged into Trinity, having with his brother George been in it since his college days, when they with others started the Sundayschool which was the nucleus of the church. He published Barker's Chemistry, Bogg's Four Years at Yale, Day's Logical Tracts, Half Hours with Modern Scientists, Sermons by President Woolsey, etc. He also kept the College Bookstore. He afterward became the editor of the New England School Journal, which position he filled ably until his death. He died Aug. 22, 1876, aged thirtyfive years.

DR. THOMAS STODDARD, son of Dr. Abiram Stoddard, graduated at Yale in 1836 and practiced medicine in his native town for some years, but later preferred not to practice except in occasional special cases. He married Esther Ann Gilbert, daughter of Ezekiel Gilbert, July 31, 1819. His home was in the fine old mansion at the foot of Pearl street, facing centrally on South Main street; the grand old elms and maples which line the wide street making in summer time a leafy arch over the avenue. Dr. Stoddard died Sept. 29, 1887, aged seventyfour years, leaving two daughters and one son—Frances E., wife of Judge Samuel L. Bronson of New Haven, Miss Sarah G. Stoddard, and Ezekiel Stoddard of New Haven, wholesale merchant, president of the New Haven County National Bank, and a director of the Union Trust Company.

ROBERT MCKAY was a native of Helensburgh, on the river Clyde, near Glasgow, Scotland. He served in the English navy as a marine, for many years, and in the Crimean War went ashore with the heavy artillery and took part in the battles of Alma, Sebastopol and Balaklava. He was an accomplished artilleryman and at the close of the war he was detailed in charge of certain work at the Woolwich Arsenal, where he remained several years. For his service in the Crimean War he received two medals, one of which bore the head of the Queen with the inscription "Victoria Regina, 1855," on the obverse; and on the reverse a figure of Victory placing a crown of laurels upon the head of a soldier, with the word Crimea. The medal is pendant from bars bearing the names "Sebastopol, Balaklava." The other medal was presented by the Sultan of Turkey. Mr. McKay came to America in 1860, coming direct to Seymour, where he made his home until his death, July 1, 1898. He was one of the official members of the M. E. church. He left two sons and three daughters, James G., Robert B., Rose and Jennie McKay, all of Seymour, and Mrs. Carrie Kelsey of Waverly, N. Y.

HARRISON TOMLINSON, son of Truman and Nancy (Perry) Tomlinson, was born Apr. 25, 1814, at Castleton, Vermont, where the family moved from Oxford and lived a few years, returning to the old Tomlinson homestead on Rockhouse Hill. He came to Humphreysville in 1839 and became prominent in business and was identified with the growing industries of the place. He was a merchant, doing a large business, at the southeast corner of Maple and Pearl streets, until 1852, when with Henry S. Mygatt, he opened the store opposite the railroad station, then called the Eagle store.

He was one of the directors of the Humphreysville Copper Company, of the Bank of North America, and of the Eagle Manufacturing Company, and one of the incorporators of the Humphreysville High School Association, and was for many years a vestryman of Trinity church. On Aug. 24, 1840, he was commissioned Ensign of the 7th Company, 2d Regiment, by General Rose. He bought the Moulthrop property on Maple street and in 1853 built the brick house which was occupied by his family until after the death of his widow, when it was purchased in 1882 by Frank H. Beecher. He married Emeret Davis, daughter of Capt. Truman Davis of Naugatuck. He died Nov. 28, 1855, leaving three daughters, Mary, Emma S., and Harriet, wife of Horace J. Chatfield of Waterbury.

CHARLES WASHBURN STORRS was a descendant of the sixth generation from Samuel Storrs, one of the Puritans, who came to Barnstable, Mass., in 1663. He was a great-grandson of Rev. Mr. Woodbridge, after whom the town of Woodbridge was named. The paternal line was—John Roger, Roger, Lemuel, Thomas, Samuel, Jr., and Samuel, Sr., the immigrant.

Mr. Storrs was for many years a successful merchant of Seymour. He was in 1847 Lieutenant of the Humphreysville Greys and was a member of the board of education from 1867 to 1871. He died Jan. 26, 1889, aged sixty years.

HENRY BRADLEY came from Oxford to Seymour in 1852 and was in the mercantile business in the place over forty years, first in the stove and tinware business and afterward in general merchandise in company with F. M. Lum. He was selectman for twelve years, and for several years was assessor, registrar of electors and registrar of vital statistics. He has been a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., since 1854, and is a member of New Haven Commandery, K. T., Lafayette Consistory, S. P. R. S., of Bridgeport, and intermediate orders; of Mechanics Lodge, I. O. O. F. and of Nonnawauk Tribe, I. O. R. M. Mr. Bradley has one daughter, Mrs. D. G. Webster, of Springfield, Mass. He removed to that city in 1899.

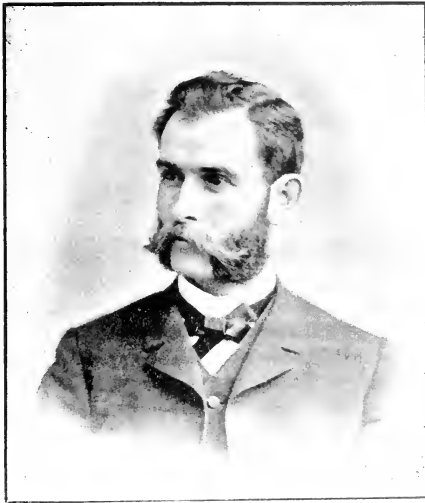

DR. SHELDON C. JOHNSON settled in Seymour in 1825 and practiced here about sixty years. He died in 1887, aged nearly ninety years. He left three sons, Henry C. and Harold St. Clair Johnson, merchants, of New Haven, and Oscar E. Johnson, of San Francisco; and three daughters, Mrs. G. R. Elliot and Mrs. J. T. Forsey of Seymour, and Mrs. Harry Leigh of New Haven.

Dr. SAMUEL SANFORD, from Bethany, who died in 1803, after practising here ten years or more, Dr. S. C. Johnson, and Dr. Kendall, covered a period of nearly a century, though others had in the meantime come and gone.

DR. J. D. A. YALE, a botanic physician, practised here in 1847-9 and was active in social and literary circles, especially in the Humphreysville Lyceum, which met in the basement of the Congregational church in the winter 1847-8, and later in what is now Grand Army hall. In 1849 he joined a large party going to California to search for gold, as physician for the party, and died there.

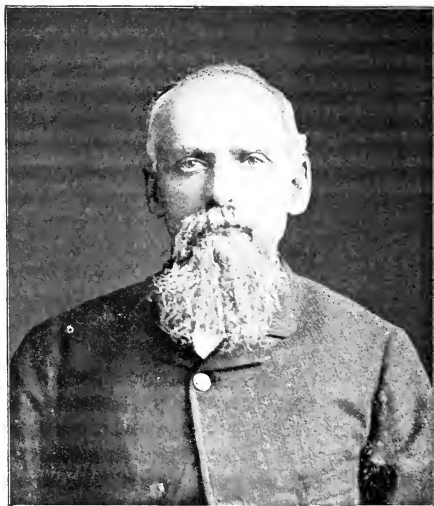

DR. AUGUSTUS R. VAIL, a homeopath physician, practised here for a few years, dying Feb. 24, 1872, aged thirtysix years. Dr. N. B. Bailey was here a few years in the seventies, removing to Bridgeport.

FREDERICK W. PULFORD, M. D., born in Leeds, Yorkshire, Eng., Aug. 21, 1820, came to America in 1838 and settled in Ridgeville, Ohio. He was educated at the Pulte Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio, receiving his diploma in 1865. He practised for a short time in Ohio, then located in Massachusetts, where he practiced for several years, coming to Seymour in 1876. He had a large practice in Seymour and adjoining towns. He died June 3, 1893, aged sixtysix years, leaving four children, Charles H. Pulford, M. D., and Mrs. A. J. Miles, of Seymour; Wm. E. Pulford of Prospect, and Rufus A. Pulford of Waterbury.

EGBERT R. WARNER, M. D., son of Randall A. and Elizabeth S. Warner, was born in Thomaston Dec. 25, 1855. He studied at the Thomaston Academy and with Dr. Goodwin of that place, and afterward at Yale where he graduated in 1876. He located in Seymour as practicing physician the following October and soon had a large practice. He was highly esteemed, both as a skillful physician and for the highest qualities of mind and heart. He was married to Miss Delia E. Stour Jan. 24, 1883. He died Dec. 31, 1897, aged 36 years, leaving two children, Charles R. and Helen T. Warner.

WM. H. WILLIAMS was born in Bethany in 1850 and with but limited school advantages came in 1870 to study law with the late Judge Harris B. Munson. He was examined for admission to the bar in 1873 and was approved, and in January, 1874, at the opening of the Superior Court in New Haven, he was admitted to practice in any court in the state. Mr. Williams practiced law in Seymour until 1882, when he removed to Birmingham, where he has since made his home. Mr. Williams is now State's Attorney for New Haven County and is one of the ablest and most respected lawyers in the state. He was a charter member of Humphrey Lodge of Seymour, in which he still retains his membership, and has been Grand Chancellor of the order in the state.

HENRY A. RIDER.

Henry A. Rider, born in Danbury, Conn., in 1832, is a son of Ralph and Harriet (Chapman) Rider, and a descendant of Capt. Phineas Chapman, who served in the Revolutionary War. He came to Seymour in 1853 and in 1855 engaged in the livery business, which he carried on for many years, and was also extensively engaged in stockraising on his Castle Rock Stock Farm. He has also done a large real estate business. During the war of 1861-5 he was an enlisting officer and provost marshal. He was treasurer of the town of Seymour for many years, and has filled other town offices. He has been a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., of Seymour, since 1865, and of Solomon Chapter, R. A. M., of Derby.

He married Miss Sophia J. Carter, a great-granddaughter of Capt. Ichabod Tuttle, who served in the Revolutionary War, enlisting from Herkimer county, N. Y. They have three children, Geo. A. Rider of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mrs. C. H. Storrs and Miss Addie E. Rider of Ansonia. Mr. Rider removed to Ansonia in 1900.

CARLOS HOTCHKISS STORRS, son of Chas. W. and Mary L. Storrs of Seymour, graduated at the Derby high school and then went to the Wesleyan University at Middletown where he completed the classical course in 1887, and graduated with the degree of B. A. In 1890 that institution conferred upon him the degree of M. A. In the meantime he had entered Yale Law School where he graduated in 1889. He was later in the office of Wooster, Williams & Gager, and afterward practiced in Seymour and Ansonia. He has since removed to Ansonia.

PRESENT RESIDENTS.

Seymour is genuinely representative of the cosmopolitan character of the people of the United States, its population being largely composed of the descendants of the best communities of Europe. While Great Britain is most largely represented, by people from England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, and their descendants, there are also numerous representatives of the countries of the continent, Germany, Holland, and Sweden, descendants of the Huguenots and the Palatines, of the Normans and of the Saxons, of those who came over in the Mayflower and of those who have since crossed the seas to help build the great republic of the new world, people originally of many nationalities, but now all devoted citizens of the "best country in the world."

HON. CARLOS FRENCH.

Hon. Carlos French, son of Raymond and Olive French, was born in Humphreysville (now Seymour), August 6, 1835, and was educated in the schools of Seymour and at General Russell's school, New Haven. He was an energetic young man with an inventive mind. In riding upon the cars he noticed the excessive jolting and began studying for some means of improvement in this respect, his study resulting in the invention of a steel car spring which soon came into general use. The springs were for some years manufactured in Seymour under his personal supervision.

Mr. French represented the town of Seymour in the legislature in 1860 and 1868, and in 1888 he was elected to the Fiftieth Congress, receiving 18,730 votes against 17,402 votes for Lewis, Republican; 1,049 votes for Mansfield, Labor candidate, and 1,336 votes for Augur, Prohibitionist. He represented his district ably and effectively, and was a member of the Democratic national committee, but declined a re-nomination.

He is a director of the Second National Bank and of the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co., is the president and treasurer of the Fowler Nail Co., and was the organizer of the Arethusa Spring Water Co. of Seymour. The employees of the works under his supervision have always been well paid and in none of his manufacturing enterprises has there been such a thing as a strike among the workmen, and sometimes when business has been dull the works have been run without profit in order to continue to give the employees the benefit of their earnings. He has ever been guided by a spirit of fairness and liberality toward his employes and in his dealings with them this sense of fairness, justice and love of humanity has been invariably manifested. Respecting the right of every man to liberty and the pursuit of happiness, as set forth in the Declaration of Independence, his own acts and deeds have promoted those principles upon which our forefathers builded the republic. His record is without blemish and he is honored by all who know him. Mr. French has been a liberal contributor for the Seymour Public Library, and it is to him that the people of Seymour are indebted for the gift of the Seymour park, of fourteen acres, mentioned elsewhere.

JAMES SWAN.

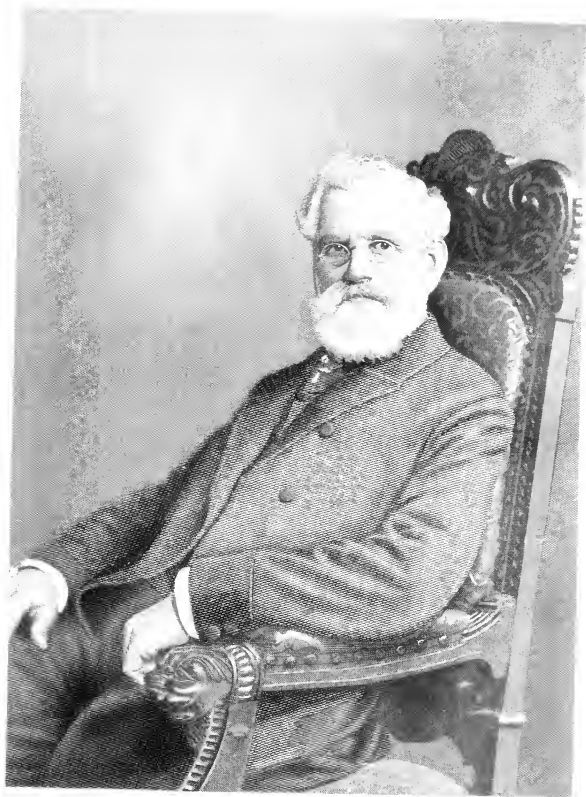

James Swan, son of William and Mary (Beck) Swan, was born in Dumfries, Scotland, Dec. 18, 1833. He is a first cousin of Hon. James B. Beck, of Kentucky, who was a Representative in the Fortieth, Forty-first, Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses, and was twice elected U. S. Senator for six years, and was the only member of Congress from the south who remained true to the Union during the War of the Rebellion. Mr. Swan's mother was sister to Mr. Beck's father, and in their boyhood the two youths were school-mates in Dumfriesshire. In them all were embodied the many excellent traits of the sturdy Scotch race, a race of brave, honest and noble men and women, who in the olden times were a bulwark against tyranny and persecution for conscience sake. They endured hardship manfully and braved every danger in maintaining the right to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. They were hunted in the mountains and in the valleys, and many died rather than prove recreant to their faith, leaving all with a firm reliance on a higher power, and their descendants may well point with pride to the heroic deeds of their ancestors. A single instance may be given:

In the town of Dalswinton, Scotland, there lived in the time of the persecution of the Covenanters a man by the name of William Swan, who was devoted to the cause of the Covenanters and always ready to give aid and shelter to those who were suffering for righteousness sake. His house was on a hill from which he could see for a long distance in every direction.

It happened one day that a party of the Covenanters were hidden in his barn, and a spy informed the soldiers of the fact, and they started for the place, but Mrs. Swan, who was ever on the alert, discovered their approach in time and Mr. Swan quickly devised and put in execution a plan which proved successful in accomplishing the deliverance of the Covenanters. When the dragoons approached William Swan was heard having a vehement controversy with his wife over some wool, at the barn. He drove his wife from the barn, and in an angry manner threw her a bundle of wool, telling her to make what use she pleased of it, at the same time notifying her that he would not allow her or any other person in his barn, and locking the door in the face of the soldiers, exclaimed, "Let me see the person who dares to enter this barn without my permission." The scheme was a success and the dragoons marched away believing that the information respecting Mr. Swan was false. For centuries the family has lived in the same valley, as the inscriptions in the ancient cemetery attest, keeping alive and active the spirit of liberty and religious freedom.

James Swan, reared in such an atmosphere of religion and of patriotism, was given a good common school education and was early apprenticed to learn the trade of millwrighting, his master being one of the most skillful workmen in the craft, his trade embracing work in both wood and iron. In 1853 he came to this country and for several years was in the employ of the Farrel Foundry & Machine Co. of Ansonia, the last five years as superintendent. In 1865 the Oliver Ames Company engaged him to come to Seymour as superintendent of their augur and bit works, which position he held until 1876, when he bought the company's business and real estate and enlarged the business to include an extensive line of edge tools, and now manufactures more than a hundred varieties of mechanics' tools. He has made careful and continuous study of the tools and the processes of manufacture, with the result that he has taken out more than seventy patents for various improvements which have not only improved the goods in many respects, but have decreased the cost of manufacture.

Mr. Swan has always been an earnest supporter of measures conducive to the welfare of the community and he was one of the most efficient advocates of the erection of the present handsome and commodious high school building and has for many years been an active member of the Seymour Board of Education.

He has been a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., since 1866, and is a charter member of Nonnawank Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men.

He has been one of the staunchest supporters of the Seymour Public Library, giving liberally to increase its efficiency, and in the matter of good roads, waterworks, electric lights and other public improvements, he has always been at the front. He aided largely in securing the erection of the present handsome and convenient engine house and in the organization and subsequent development of the fire department, of which for sixteen years he has been the Chief. He is a member of the Congregational church, and was for a number of years superintendent of its Sundayschool.

In 1872 he had the honor of being elected the first Republican representative from Seymour, his high personal qualities, integrity and public spirit helping him to overcome a previously large Democratic majority.

He was long a member of the board of directors of the Ansonia National Bank and is now a stockholder of the new Valley National Bank of Seymour. He is president of The James Swan Co., and of the H. A. Matthews Manufacturing Co.

Mr. Swan married Miss Agnes Bell in 1857 and has one daughter, Miss M. Jessie Swan, and three sons, William B. Swan, superintendent of the auger and bit works, John Swan, superintendent of the edge tool works, and Albert Swan, bookkeeper for the company.

NORMAN SPERRY, SON of Albert and Phebe A. (Tuttle) Sperry of Cheshire, and grandson of Job Sperry of Bethany, was born in Cheshire Feb. 12, 1842. He was educated in the common schools of Cheshire, in the Cheshire Episcopal Academy, and at the Lewis Academy at Southington. He came to Seymour in 1862 and worked for H. B. Beecher, the Douglass Manufacturing Co., and the Humphreysville Manufacturing Co., until March, 1875, when he became the president of the Humphreysville Manufacturing Company, and in 1895 he became the sole proprietor.

He is a member of Trinity Church and a vestryman, and has been identified with the best interests of the community. He is a prominent member of the Masonic order and is a Knight Templar. In 1884 he was elected first selectman and served the town most efficiently, especially in the matter of road improvements, and to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. He was twice called to represent the town in the General Assembly, in 1883 and in 1893, and in 1894 was unanimously nominated for state senator in the democratic convention for the seventh district.

RESIDENCE OF EDMUND DAY.

EDMUND DAY came to Seymour in 1855 from West Springfield, Mass., and engaged, with his brothers, Austin G. and Henry P. Day, in cleaning and preparing East Indian and Central American varieties of india rubber, by a patented process, for use by other manufacturers, also in the manufacture of hard rubber stationery goods and fountain pens.

Mr. Day was one of the most prominent in local endeavor on the side of the Union in the early years of the War of the Rebellion, and in the first year of the war, when local sympathizers with the South threatened to burn the property of Union men, he obtained a grant of arms from the state, and had them brought here so quietly that the first his opponents knew of the move was when the weapons were seen in the hands of men who were patrolling the streets at night. The leader of the pro-slavery party was notified that if any buildings were burned he would be held personally responsible. The result was as intended and there was no further talk of destroying the property of the upholders of the Union. Mr. Day was for six years a member of the school board, and in 1874 he was elected to represent the town in the legislature. In 1885 and 1886 he was state senator for the seventh district, and was the chairman of the joint committee on manufactures. He married in 1863 Annie E. Melcher, and has a son, William M. Day, of Seymour, and two daughters, Mrs. F. G. Hotchkiss of Ansonia, and Miss Edith Day, of Seymour.

THOMAS L. JAMES.

Thomas L. James was born in Birmingham, Conn., May 7, 1846. The family moved to Seymour in 1850. His education was mostly obtained in the public and private schools of his own village, including the Glendenning Academy, in which he was the youngest in attendance; then in Brown's school in West Haven, and afterwards in General Russell's Military Institute in New Haven.

He entered the New Haven Copper Co., his father being the head of the company for many years, and in 1879 he was elected president of the company, which position he has held ever since. In politics he has always been a Republican, and as such he was elected a member of the legislature of 1884, was several times elected one of the selectmen of the town, and was influential in securing various public improvements.

He has for many years been a member of the school board and acting school visitor, and has taken great interest in the schools, in which he is always a most welcome visitor to both teachers and pupils. He has also been repeatedly appointed assistant chief of the fire department.

He is a member of the Episcopal church, and has been a vestryman for many years. He is also a member of New Haven Commandery, Knights Templar, and of other fraternal orders. In 1890 he made an extensive tour over the European continent for the benefit of his health.

Mr. James' mother, Mrs. Minerva Rowe James, is a descendant of Elder Brewster of the Mayflower. Mr. James married in July, 1870, Miss Julia A. DuBois, at St. Mary's Hall, Burlington, N. J., where Miss DuBois was then a teacher. They had four children, Ida L., May D. B., Agnes and Julia, of whom only Ida L. and Agnes are now living.

THOMAS S. PERRINS was born in Philadelphia and was educated in the schools of that city, graduating in the high school. He learned the machinist trade in the Bush Hill iron works and in 1877 came to Ansonia. In 1878 he began a series of experiments in the manufacture of eyelets, with the Schneller, Osborn & Cheeseman Co., and later became a stockholder in the company and one of the directors. In 1897 he came to Seymour and established an eyelet factory in the Humphreys factory, where he carried on business for three years. He became a stockholder in and a director of the Rimmon Manufacturing Company and on the opening of the works in the spring of 1899 he removed his machinery to the new works, of which he is the superintendent. Mr. Perrins is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and one of the trustees.

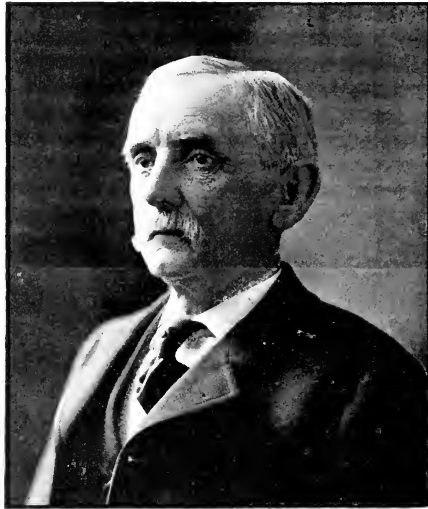

WILLIAM R. BRIXEY.

William R. Brixey, son of Richard and Elizabeth Brixey, was born in Southampton, England, in 1851; came to America in the year 1879, and located in Seymour, where he married Frances Nancy, daughter of Alva G. and Lucy Ann DeWolfe. He is the owner of the Kerite insulated wire and cable works at Seymour. He has three sons, Richard DeWolfe, Reginald Waldo and Austin Day Brixey, his only daughter, Daisy Rosina Brixey, having died in 1890, in her infancy.

He is a member of the following societies and clubs: Chancellor Walworth Lodge, No. 271, F. & A. M., New York city; Triune Chapter, No. 241, R. A. M., New York city; Columbian Commandery, No. 1, K. T., New York city; Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite 32^o, life member, New York city; Mecca Temple, A. A. O. M. S., New York city; New York Athletic Club, New York city; Brooklyn, N. Y.; Captain and Inspector Rifle Practice, Old Guard, New York city; New York Society Electrical Engineers, New York city.

ALBERT B. DUNHAM.

Albert B. Dunham, the present high sheriff of New Haven county, was born in Oxford Sept. 27th, 1839. His father, Henry Dunham, was a native of Southington, but made his home in Oxford, where he married Henrietta Tucker, daughter of Daniel and Laura Candee Tucker, of Oxford, and the granddaughter of Capt. Job Candee, of Oxford, who served in the War of the Revolution. Mr. Dunham, after attending the school at Oxford centre, continued his studies at the Waterbury Academy, which was conducted by the late Charles Fabrique. On his return to Oxford he entered the store of S. P. Sanford, and in 1861 was appointed postmaster by President Lincoln. A few years later he came to Seymour and engaged in the livery business. He was appointed deputy sheriff under Charles Scott, and in 1878 was chosen to represent Seymour in the state legislature. In 1883 he was chosen county commissioner, to which position he was re-elected for fourteen years, and in 1898 he was elected sheriff of New Haven county. Mr. Dunham has always been a consistent Republican, never having voted any other ticket. He has been a member of Humphrey Lodge, Knights of Pythias, nearly twentyfive years. His manner and dealings have been such that through forty years of the turmoil and strife of a political life he remains popular with the electors of New Haven county.

CHARLES HENRY LOUNSBURY.

Charles Henry Lounsbury, one of the leading merchants and business men of Seymour, was born in the western part of Bethany, now Beacon Falls, Sept. 18th, 1848, and is the only son of Ransom and Mary Joyce Lounsbury, of Beacon Falls. The other members of their family were two sisters; Eliza Jane, married Herbert Beers of New Haven, deceased in the spring of 1890, and Ella B., married to Fred Colvin, deceased. His father is a son of Josiah Lounsbury, who married Sally Lines, whose father held a commission from Governor Jonathan Trumbull in the Revolutionary War. Linus Lounsbury, the father of Josiah Lounsbury, and great-grandfather of Charles H. Lounsbury, one of the first settlers in the western part of Bethany, was also a soldier in the Revolution. The Lounsbury bury paternal home is still owned by the family, being one of the oldest improved places in the eastern part of the town of Beacon Falls. When the town of Beacon Falls was organized, in 1871, he was one of the first officers chosen, and in 1877 he was elected to represent the town in the legislature.

He removed to Seymour in 1877 and was at first employed in the store of H. R. Randall. In March, 1881, he began business for himself at the corner of Maple and Pearl streets, where he has since remained. He was first selectman and town agent from October, 1885, until October, 1890, and from 1892 to 1895, and a number of important public improvements in the town were made under his direction, and have reflected credit upon his judgment and executive ability. He has since served the town in the capacity of a member of the board of assessors, a position which he still holds.

He is a trustee of the M. E. church, past patron of Olive Chapter, O. E. S., a member of the Board of Trade, a member of the Masonic order, of the Odd Fellows, and of the A. O. U. W.

FRANK H. BEECHER, son of Henry B. Beecher, of Seymour succeeded his father as proprietor of the augur and bit works established by the "six partners" in 1847, which he greatly improved. Mr. Beecher was foreman of Citizen Engine Company for nine years and was active in raising money by subscription to pay for the new steam fire engine in 1884. He was secretary and treasurer of the building committee for the present engine house and for the high school building.

He is a member of Mechanics Lodge, I. O. O. F., a charter member of Nonnawauk Tribe, I. O. R. M., and a charter member and Past Chancellor of Humphrey Lodge, K. of P. He is now the superintendent and treasurer of the H. A. Matthews Manufacturing Co., is manager and treasurer of the Seymour Electric Light Company, and a director of the Valley National Bank.

He married, March 22, 1876, Nellie A. Thompson, daughter of John M. and Maria A. (Noble) Thompson, of Bridgeport. Mrs. Thompson is the granddaughter of an officer of the Revolution.

HENRY P. DAY, born in West Springfield, Mass., came to Seymour in 1855, from California, where he had spent three or four years. He has since then been associated in business with his brother, Edmund Day, in the manufacture of fountain pens and other vulcanized hard rubber goods. In 1876 he represented the town of Seymour in the legislature.

He married in 1865 Fannie Gilbert, daughter of Ezekiel and Sarah Gilbert. They have two sons, Julius G. Day, of Shelton, secretary and treasurer of the Whitlock Printing Press Manufacturing Co., and Harry G. Day, attorney, of the law firm of Watrous & Day, New Haven, and instructor in the Yale Law School.

LEWIS A. CAMP.

Lewis A. Camp, son of Phineas W. and Louisa McNeil Camp, was born in Morris, Conn., April 15, 1835, and came to Seymour in 1870, and has been in the mercantile business since that time, though at present only as a member of the Camp & Rugg Company.

He was first selectman of the town of Seymour for five years, from 1873 to 1878, represented the town in the legislature in 1875, and was for many years a justice of the peace and a member of the school board. He is secretary of the New Haven Copper Company, a vestryman of Trinity church, and a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., of New Haven Commandery, Knights Templar, and other Masonic orders. He married Elizabeth E. James, daughter of Thomas and Minerva James, Oct. 2, 1877. They have two daughters, Minerva J. and Elizabeth L. Camp, and one son Thomas James Camp.

EDWARD A. KLATT.

Edward A. Klatt, son of Frederick and Caroline (Birlum) Klatt, was born in Bangor, Maine, in 1860. He lived there until twenty-one years of age and after his school years learned the trade of moulder in the Hinkley & Egery Iron Works, of Bangor. He was for five years at the Knowles Steam Pump Works, at Warren, Mass., and from there came to Bridgeport, where for a year he had charge of the Springfield Manufacturing Co.'s foundry. He then became foundry superintendent of the R. E. Parsons Co. works and after six months became one of the stockholders. He remained with this company five years and only resigned his position there to come to Seymour and establish the Seymour Iron Foundry, of which he is sole proprietor.

Mr. Klatt is a member of Quaboag Lodge, F. & A. M., of Warren, Mass., of the Sam Harris Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Bridgeport, and of Kabosa Encampment, of Norwalk. He is also a member of the Seymour Methodist Episcopal church, and one of the trustees.

ANDREW Y. BEACH.

Andrew Y. Beach, son of S. Y. and Adaline Beach, was born in Humphreysville in 1836, and after attending the schools of his native town was for a few terms a student at the West Rock Seminary at New Haven. In 1856 he went to Springfield to take a clerkship in the Hartford and New Haven Railroad Company's freight office. In 1858 he resigned his position to become station agent at Naugatuck, on the Naugatuck railroad. He remained there but a short time, however, resigning to accept a place with his father in the papermill. He remained there three years and then accepted the position of station agent at Seymour, where he remained seven years, when he was made general ticket agent of the road, with headquarters at Bridgeport. He held this position five years, after which he resigned, in 1872, and went to Springfield, Mass., to become agent of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, having entire charge of the affairs of the company there, except the ticket selling, remaining in that position fourteen years. He was a member of the board of aldermen of Springfield in 1884, 1885 and 1886, and the third year was president of the board.

In 1886 he resigned his position in Springfield and returned to Seymour to go into business for himself. He has been a member of the board of education, is president of the Humphreysville Graveyard Association, and has for many years been a justice of the peace.

CHARLES W. MICHAELS was educated in New York City and spent two years in travelling in the west. He was afterward in mercantile business in Meriden two years and later in Yalesville twentyfive years. He came to Seymour in 1899 and is secretary and treasurer of the Rimmon Manufacturing Company.

He married in 1876 Miss Carrie L. Pickhardt, daughter of Henry and Matilda Pickhardt, formerly of Seymour. They have two daughters, Alice and Lillia Michaels.

Mr. Michaels is a member of Compass Lodge, F. & A. M., and St. Elmo Commandery, Knights Templar, of Meriden, and other Masonic orders.

GEORGE P. SHELTON was born in Southbury and was the son of Roswell and Mary (Hicock) Shelton. In 1844, when twentyfour years of age he was appointed major general by the legislature. He had served the state in nearly every military rank from sergeant major to brigadier general. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in Litchfield. In 1848 he represented his native town in the legislature, and was appointed adjutant general. He is the author of the present state military system, having drawn the bill and secured its passage in 1848. He was senator of the Fifth District in 1849.

General Shelton came to Seymour in 1850 and practiced law here for five years. He then commenced the manufacture of brocatelle, and held over $30,000 in the leading joint stock companies of Seymour. He built the embankment of the Rimmon Pond and the road on the east side of the pond, and owned one tenth of the stock of the Rimmon Water Company. He surveyed and laid out the road from Third street to the Hoadley bridge, and was its principal advocate. He was one of the incorporators of the Seymour Savings Bank in 1852 and in 1855 he was president of the Eagle Manufacturing Co of Seymour. He began the settlement of Clifton, where he has resided for many years.

In 1862 he married Mary Lambert Webster. They had five children, Georgiana, William L., Marietta, Isabel and George H. William L., Isabel and George H. are still living. George H. Shelton is a graduate of West Point and captain in the 25th Infantry, U. S. A.

W. W. SMITH.

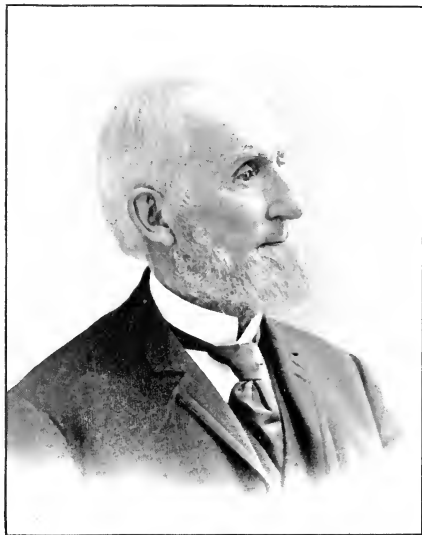

Capt. W. W. Smith, son of Rev. Sylvester Smith, was born in Westville, his parents moving here while he was in infancy. He went out with the first company raised in Seymour at the beginning of the Civil War, was mustered in as 1st Lieutenant of Co. H, 20th C. V., Aug. 15, 1862; was taken prisoner at the battle of Chancellorsville May 3, 1863, and taken to Libby prison, but was soon exchanged and returned to his regiment. He was promoted to Captain of Co. C, in the same regiment, Jan. 28, 1863, and served until the close of the war, being in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged except Bentonville, and was in Sherman's famous march to the sea.

At the close of the war he returned to Seymour and from 1870 to 1890 was in business as a paper manufacturer. In 1891 he was appointed postmaster under President Harrison and held that office for four years. In 1895 he was elected first selectman and was re-elected to that office in '96, '97 and '98, and in 1899 was reappointed postmaster.

EDWIN A. LUM.

Edwin A. Lum, son of Austin Lum, was born in Southbury, Conn., in 1818. In early life he was engaged in the carriage business in Bridgeport, and later was in business in Brookfield and Newtown, until failing health obliged him to have a change of occupation. He then taught for a few years in the schools of Newtown, Oxford, Humphreysville and Birmingham.

In 1847 he accepted the position of bookkeeper for Hotchkiss, Clark & Co. of Birmingham, marrying in the following year Elizabeth Durand, daughter of Jeremiah Durand of Humphreysville.

Having been offered the secretaryship of the Waterbury Lumber and Coal Co. he removed to that city in 1851 and held that position for six years. For many years he was secretary of the Waterbury Clock Co., and during his thirty years residence in that city was identified with many of the public enterprises there. When the Second Congregational church of Waterbury was organized he was one of the fifty original members and was actively interested in its growth, holding the office of Deacon there for fourteen years. In 1881 he removed his family to Seymour where they now reside in the Durand homestead where he was married in 1848.

FRANK G. BASSETT.

Frank G. Bassett was born Sept. 28th, 1847, and was educated in the public schools of this town and in the Glendenning Academy at Stamford. He was employed in a store at New Haven for three years, and in 1864 he went into the employ of C. Russell & Co. of Bridgeport, and remained with them until 1870 when he accepted a position with the American Oil Company of New York. In 1872, owing to illness of his mother, he returned to Seymour, where he has since resided.

He is a thirtysecond degree mason; Past Master of Mornin Star Lodge, F. & A. M.; Past M. E. H. P. of Mt. Vernon Chapter R. A. M. of Ansonia; Past T. I. M. of Union Council, R. & S. M. of Derby; Past M. P. G. M. of the Grand Council, R. & S. M., c Connecticut; Past. W. P. of Olive Chapter, O. E. S., Past G. P. of the Grand Chapter, O. E. S. of Connecticut; Past R. P. of Eliz. A. Macoy Court of the Amaranth, of Ansonia; Past S. R. P., of the Supreme Council of the Rite of Adoption; Past N. G. of Mechanics Lodge, I. O. O. F.; Past C. P. of Wildey Encampment, I. O. O. F., and Secretary and Historian of the Bassett Family Association and is writing the history of the family. He is also the author of the genealogical portion of this book. His is a work of most careful and thorough research and one which will increase in value as the years go by.

GEORGE C. LEES, son of John H. and Mary A. Lees, of New Haven, was educated in the Giles school, New Haven, was for five years superintendent and manager of the James E. Griffin Co.'s works in Shelton, and in 1900 established the horn button works in Seymour, of which his brother, John H. Lees, is superintendent and manager.

CHARLES E. FAIRCHILD, born in Oxford in 1831, is a son of Ebenezer, born July 30th, 1803, and grandson of Nathan Fairchild. The children of Nathan Fairchild were: Nathan, Ebenezer and Hanford. Ebenezer Fairchild was a carriage maker who came to Seymour about 1851 and carried on business there many years. He was married in 1827 to Sarah, daughter of Captain Job Candee, who was in the Revolutionary War, and a descendant of Zacheus Candee, born in New Haven in 1640. The family were French Huguenots, and fled from France to Scotland early in the sixteenth century. One of the family afterward emigrated to America and settled in Connecticut. The children of Ebenezer and Sarah Fairchild were: Charles E., Mary J., and Henry L. (deceased). Mary J. married Henry Beecher. Charles E. Fairchild has been twice married: in 1861 to Martha Davidson, and to Mrs. Ida Coffin in 1887. He has been bookkeeper for H. P. & E. Day since 1876. He has served as a director of the Seymour Public Library and in other offices in the gift of his townsmen.

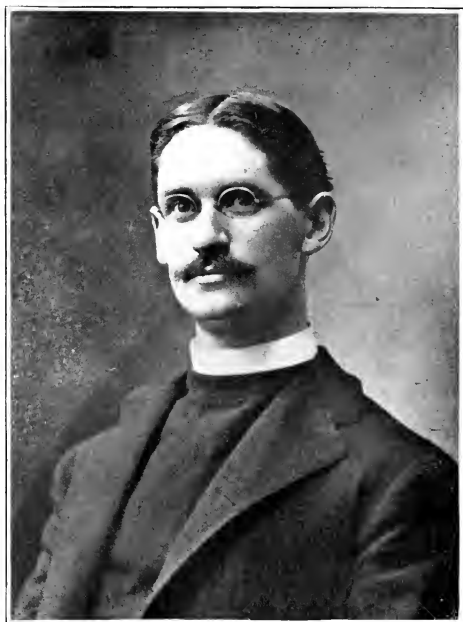

REV. EDGAR C. TULLAR.

Rev. Edgar C. Tullar was born in Bolton, Feb. 3, 1864. His father was a soldier in the war for the Union and received permanent injuries from the bursting of a shell at the battle of Antietam. Mr. Tullar prepared for college at the Centennial Collegiate Institute, Hackettstown, N. J., and the Vermont Methodist Seminary, at Montpelier. He was licensed to preach at East Glastonbury in August, 1887, and in 1890 joined the New York East Conference. He was pastor of St. Paul's church, Waterbury, in 1890, went from there to Durham, and after a successful ministry of two years in that place decided to enter college and complete his studies.

He studied four years at Albion College, Albion, Mich., and in his second year there began mission work in the city of Jackson.

Beginning with a few in a hall, the numbers increased and the work prospered, and a brick church was built with a seating capacity of two thousand and a membership of nearly three hundred. Mr Tullar was then engaged in evangelistic work until the following spring, in 1898, when he was appointed to the pastorate of the Seymour M. E. church. It was due to his energy and tact that the debt of $8,000 was paid off and the handsome edifice is clear of debt.

On April 21, 1891, Mr. Tullar married Elizabeth V., daughter of Dixon R. Cornell, of Waterbury. They have a son, Irving Meredith, and a daughter, May Varian.

REV. W. A. WOODFORD.

Rev. W. A. Woodford, rector of Trinity church, was born in New Haven, Oct. 22nd, 1868, and took the regular course of study in the grammar and high schools of the city, and then went into business with his father. A few years later he decided to enter the ministry, studied under Bishop Williams and took a four years' course at the Berkeley Divinity school at Middletown, was ordained to the Diaconate, in 1899, and was ordained to the priesthood May 17, 1900. During his course of study he had charge of the parish in Yalesville three years, and one year at Oxford. After ordination he was appointed by the bishop, minister in charge at Oxford and Quaker Farms, where he remained for a year, coming to Seymour in July, 1900, to take charge of Trinity parish.

REV. M. F. RIGNEY.

The present rector of the Church of St. Augustine, was born in South Norwalk, Conn., studied at St. Charles College, Elicott City, Md., and was ordained at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, in 1883. His first pastorate was at Cornwall Bridge and he was afterward in charge of the Church of St. Bernard in Sharon.

He succeeded to the pastorate of the Church of St. Augustine April 1, 1894, and his success attests the energy with which he works for the interest of the parish. During his pastorate the wooden steps in front of the north and south entrances have been removed and in their place, steps of granite have been built, the basement has been finished, making a commodious hall, a church bell has been secured, and the cemetery has been improved. The parish now numbers about 500. The church, which has cost $13,000, has a seating capacity of 600. Father Rigney attends also the Oxford and Beacon Falls stations.

REV. PAUL E. T. LEMPKE.

Rev. Mr. Lempke, pastor of the German Lutheran church, was born in Pommern, Germany, and studied theology in Berlin, came to the United States in 1896, and located in Hartford as pastor of the German Evangelical Lutheran congregation, was pastor of congregations in Derby and Shelton, and from there came to Seymour to take charge of the German Lutheran church, where he has been very successful in pastoral work.

REV. HENRY DAVENPORT NORTHROP.

Rev. Henry Davenport Northrop, whose summer home is in Seymour, was born in Poultney, Steuben Co., New York, March 10, 1836, graduated from Amherst College, Mass., in 1857 was pastor of the Congregational church in Seymour until the fall of 1858, then attended theological lectures at Yale College and preached in the Howe Street Congregational church of that city. He went to London in 1862 and founded the Victoria Park Congregational church. In 1864 he returned to this country and until 1874 was pastor of the West 23rd St. Presbyterian church, New York city. He was then pastor of the Fourth Congregational church in Hartford, until 1880, when he removed to Philadelphia, where he was pastor of the Tenth Street Presbyterian church until 1886.

He then connected himself as author and editor with the National Publishing Co. His best known works are "Earth, Sea and Sky," "Bible Stories for the Young," "History of America for Young People," "Crown Jewels," and "Peerless Reciter." He is also the author of the American story entitled "John Winslow."

Mr. Northrop's elder son, Dr. Herbert L. Northrop, is Professor of Anatomy in the Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, and senior surgeon in the hospital of the same name.

The younger son is Dr. Edward R. Northrop of Grand Forks, British Columbia, who is doctor and surgeon to a branch of the Northern Pacific railroad and the Granby Mining and Smelting Co.

REV. H. A. CAMPBELL.

Rev. H. A. Campbell, son of Charles L. and Eliza Kelsey Campbell, was born at Agawam, Mass., Dec. 17, 1858; pursued his preparatory studies at Connecticut Literary Institute at Suffield, Conn., graduated at Williams college in 1883, attended Hartford Theological seminary in 1886, was pastor of the Congregational church of Monowa, Iowa, and later of the Congregational church of Montague, Mass. In 1891 he became pastor of the Congregational church in Seymour, which position he has since filled. He was chosen a director of the Seymour Public Library in 1897, and secretary of the board in 1900. In 1901 he was chosen one of the examiners of Hartford Theological seminary. He is the author of Part I of this book, having devoted much time to investigating the history of the early residences of the town, and other historical topics. He married Delana L. Alden, April 11, 1887, and has a son, Colin Alden Campbell, born in Seymour, Sept. 14, 1898.

FRANK A. BENEDICT, M. D.

Dr. Frank A. Benedict was born in Bethel, Conn., August 12, 1861. He attended the public schools of his native town, and Danbury High School; afterward attended Williston Academy, East Hampton, Mass., where he graduated in the class of '81. He then took a course of study at Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University, graduating in the class of '84, following with a course at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, where he graduated in 1887. He spent two months at the Chambers Street Hospital, New York, and a year at the Jersey City Charity Hospital.

He practiced at Bethel a little more than three years and in 1892 came to Seymour. In that year he married Miss Jennie L. Bassett, daughter of the late Edward F. Bassett, who died Aug 23, 1900. Dr. Benedict is the health officer of the town and is a member of the 2d Company of the Governor's Horse Guards of Connecticut. He is also a member of Citizen Engine Co. and of the orders of Red Men, Foresters and N. E. O. P. He has won the confidence of the people of Seymour and vicinity by his unvarying courtesy and strict attention to his practice.

CHARLES H. PULFORD, M. D.

Charles Henry Pulford was born in Stafford Springs, Conn., Dec. 18th, 1859, the son of F. W. Pulford, M. D. Dr. Pulford was first educated in the public schools of Seymour and the Collegiate Institute of Hackettstown, N. J., and then received his medical education at the Homeopathic College of New York city, and at the Hahnemann College of Chicago, where he graduated in 1888.

He has practiced medicine in Seymour since graduation, first with his father, and since his death, in 1893, as his successor, and is a member of the State Homeopathic Society. He is also a member of Morning Star Lodge, No. 47, F. & A. M., of Seymour, is a fine singer, a careful and painstaking physician, and has a large practice.

EDWARD WYMAN DAVIS, M. D., was born in Paxton, Mass., in 1855. Dr. Davis was educated in the public schools of Paxton, and also at the Leicester Academy, Leicester, Mass., and at the Worcester Academy, Worcester, Mass. The following year he entered Yale University, and pursued a full four years' course, graduating in 1880, but on account of ill health was obliged to give up his studies for a number of years, although later he returned and pursued a course of study at the Yale Medical College, graduating in 1892. He came to Seymour the same year, and has practiced his profession here ever since. He is known as a thorough student of medical science and a careful practitioner. He married Miss Eliza Dodd of Paxton, Mass., and has had four children, of whom two are now living. He is a member of the local lodges of the Masons, Odd Fellows and Ancient Order of United Workmen.

P. F. STRAPP, M. D., was born in Collinsville, Conn., but came to Seymour with his parents at an early age. He attended the schools of Seymour, studied four years at the Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass., two years at Yale University, and three at Bellevue, New York city, where he graduated in 1892. He then located in Seymour, where he has had a large and successful practice, and his services are especially in demand in surgical cases. He was for five years a member of the Seymour School Board and is a member of Anrora Council, Knights of Columbus, and of Valley Lodge, S. E. O. P.

WILLIAM L. WARD, born in Naugatuck Oct. 31, 1858, is a son of James B. and Jane E. (Hotchkiss) Ward, grandson of Lewis, and great-grandson of Richard Ward, also a direct descendent of Culpepper Hoadley, a soldier in the Revolution. The children of James B. and Jane E. Ward are William L. and Elmer J. Ward.

Until 1889 William L. was a resident of Naugatuck, when he removed to Seymour and purchased the furniture and undertaking business which for forty-two years had been carried on by E. F. Bassett. During the twelve years of Mr. Ward's management the business has greatly increased, so that he has found it necessary to add to the floor space several times, until now he occupies the entire Bassett block. In 1899 the building was greatly improved by the addition of a new front, in which large plate glass windows were placed, making it one of the most attractive furniture stores in this section of the country.

To the persevering efforts of Mr. Ward is due the fact that Seymour is enjoying the benefits of a national bank. The town was without a bank from 1860 until the organization of the Valley National Bank, June 4, 1900, at which time W. L. Ward was elected president, and a call was issued for the first payment of fifty per cent of the capital stock payable July 1, 1900. The certificate to commence business was received from the comptroller of the currency July 16, 1900, and the bank opened its doors for business Aug. 14

1900. Mr. Ward was re-elected president at the annual meeting Jan. 8, 1901.

In politics Mr. Ward has always been a staunch Republican. He was elected town treasurer in 1900, which office he holds at the present time. He is a member of New Haven Commandery, Knights Templar, and other orders. He was married in 1889 to Lulu J., daughter of Isaac B. Tolles, of Naugatuck.

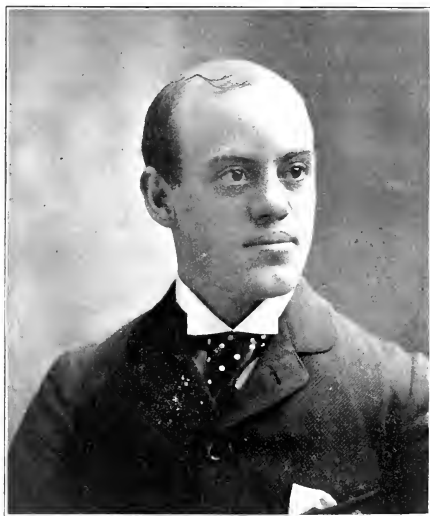

FREDERICK A. RUGG.

Frederick A. Rugg, son of Harvey and Jane M. Terrell Rugg, was born in Hamden, Sept. 10, 1854. When he was six years of age his parents moved to Ossining, N. Y., where his father was foreman of the auger and bit works. He attended the schools of Ossining, graduating at the High School there, and when his parents removed to Seymour in 1870 he became the bookkeeper for the F. L. Ames auger and bit works, remaining in that position during the ownership by the Douglass Manufacturing Co., and after the purchase of the works by James Swan. In 1879 he entered the employ of the New Haven Copper Co. and in 1895 he was elected treasurer of the company.

In 1892 he was elected a member of the school board, and school treasurer, which offices he has held since that date. He is treasurer of the Camp & Rugg Company, and in 1900 he was elected vice-president of the Valley National Bank. He was for several years a vestryman of Trinity church, is a veteran fireman, and is a Knight Templar, a 32^o Mason, and a member of other fraternal orders. He married Louisa E. Mr. Thrall came to Seymour in 1880 and in 1883 married Alice M. Hubbell of Oxford. He was elected selectman in 1899 and has twice since been re-elected to that office. He is a member of the orders of Freemasons, Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias.

WILLIAM L. SMITH was born in Norwalk, Ct., learned the jewelry business there, and was for three years in Taunton, Mass., coming to Seymour in 1889, and since that date has been in business here. He married in 1887 Myra Brown, daughter of Harvey R.

and Phebe A. (Hoyt) Brown, of Norwalk, and has four children Willie E., Walter H., Oscar R. and George Oliver. Mr. Smith is a member of Citizen Engine Co., of Morning Star and Valley lodges, Evening Star Chapter, Nonnawauk Tribe and Towcomi Council.

MARK LOUNSBURY, son of Crownage and Eliza S. (Hotchkiss) Lounsbury, was born in Humphreysville in 1835. His father lived near the foot of Rock Rimmon, and owned a large farm which included the whole of Rock Rimmon ridge, and he supplied great quantities of timber for the ship business which was then carried on at Derby Narrows. Mr. Lounsbury attended the Cedar Ridge school, the schoolhouse being then known as the stone schoolhouse it being the only stone building in town which was used for school purposes. He also studied two years at the Glendenning Academy.

He was of a mechanical turn of mind and early made effective use of his talent in this direction. In 1867 he leased the Globe Works, which were then west of Cedar street and south of Castle Rock. These shops had formerly been the scene of an auger and bit business. More than a half century ago several partners carried on business there and employed more than forty men in the manufacture of augers and bits. There were two dams and two shops, one of the shops being used as a forge shop and the other for finishing.

Mr. Lounsbury was then associated in business with Peter Gabriel. Soon after they had their machinery in place a peculiar job was sent them from New York City. A lot of button hooks had been imported from Germany, but were not finished to meet the demands of American purchasers. They were therefore sent to Lounsbury & Gabriel to be finished in better style. This was done and the goods returned, but the work led to the adoption of a different line of business. Machinery was soon fitted up for the manufacture of these goods and button hooks of their make, the first ever manufactured in the United States, were furnished to the wholesale dealers, and were so well received that in a short time the imported hooks were no longer in demand.

Their works were burned to the ground Oct. 1, '67, and H. P. & E. Day gave Mr. Lounsbury room and power in the rubber mill. He soon after fitted up with steam power and machinery on First street, and continued the manufacture of button hooks for two or three years, until others went into the business and the price was cut to such an extent that the work was no longer profitable.

Mr. Lounsbury afterward purchased a mill on Little River, near the house of D. C. Riggs, in Oxford, but later returned to Seymour to enter the employ of the United States Pin Co., where he remained thirtyone years, having for the last sixteen years been superintendent and manager of the factory.

He has been a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., since 1867, and in 1895-91 he served the town as selectman. He married, June 14, 1857, Ann Webster, daughter of Jonathan and Jemima Lambert Webster, of Thompsonville, and had three children, Annetta E., who died Feb. 14, 1865, Mrs. Wm. F. Dean, of Montreal, Canada, and Norman Lounsbury, of Seymour.

W. C. SHARPE.

W. C. Sharpe was educated in the Bell school and Glendenning's Academy, Seymour, and Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass. He taught school about ten years, in Wilbraham, Mass., in Connecticut, at Fredon Academy, N. J., and in Pennsylvania, closing his experience in this line with two years as principal of the graded school at East Derby. In 1869 he opened a printing office in Seymour and in 1871 began the publication of the RECORD, which he has since continued. He is the author of the History of Seymour, published in 1879, the Vital Statistics of Seymour, (284 pages,) the local histories of Oxford and South Britain, the Annals of the Seymour M. E. Church, and several genealogical works.

He married in 1865 Vinie A. Lewis, daughter of Harry and Amanda (Sherman) Lewis, of Monroe, Ct., and has one son, Ernest C. Sharpe, president of the E. C. Sharpe Building & Lumber Co., and one daughter, Mrs. John A. Parker, both of Seymour.

JOHN E. MORRIS, son of Frederick and Caroline Stevens Morris, of Danbury, came to Seymour in 1867 and was for eighteen years associated with his brother, William Morris, in the harness business. Since then he has carried on the business alone. He married Margaret Shields, of New Haven, who died July 20, 1891. He has three sons and one daughter, Amos W. Morris of Woodbridge, and Fred E. and John H. Morris and Mrs. Alice Snedecker of Seymour.

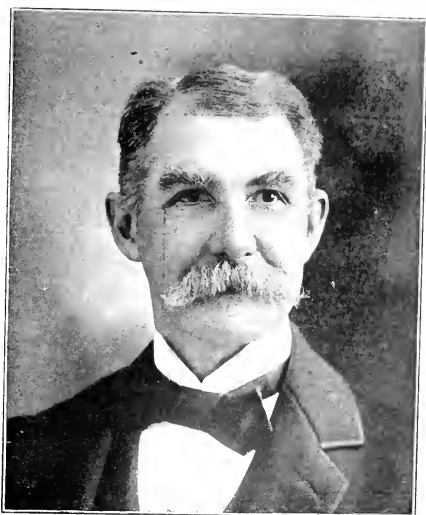

WILMOT D. INGERSOLL, son of James W. and Mary A. (Terrill) Ingersoll, of Watertown, N. Y., was in the clothing business in Essex, Conn., fifteen years, coming in 1888 to Seymour, where he has since carried on business. He married Elizabeth A. Hall, of Middletown, Conn., and has one son, Charles W. Ingersoll, educated in the schools of Seymour and at Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass. Mr. Ingersoll is a member of Ark Lodge, F. & A. M., of Geneva, N. Y., of Evening Star Chapter, R. A. M., of Seymour, of Castle Rock Lodge, A. O. U. W., and of Valley Lodge, N. E. O. P.

WILLIAM C. BRYANT of New York City is an artistic photographer and during his summer vacations has photographed a great number of views in Seymour and vicinity, and the writer is indebted to him for the photographs from which were made the plates on pages 26, 59, 141, 152, 166, 312, 329, 331 and 333.

Mr. Bryant is the son of William C. Bryant and Mary Ann Bryant, the latter having been the daughter of Stephen Botsford and granddaughter of Deacon Nehemiah Botsford of Seymour. He was born in New York City, where with the exception of two years' residence in Flushing, N. Y., he has always lived. He was educated at the Flushing Institute, and later took a four years' course at the old established Columbia Grammar School in New York. After graduating at Columbia he became an assistant general bookkeeper in the National Bank of the Commonwealth, New York City, where he remained four years. He then served four years in the Grand Central Bank. After the dissolution of the Grand Central Bank, he was assistant cashier in the Murray Hill Bank until its close, sixteen years later.

For upward of fourteen years his chief pleasure has been photography and music. Provided with the highest grade camera that money could procure, he has taken upward of three thousand views, over five hundred being photographed in the charming valley of the augatuck, many of which he has utilized in making slides for illustration in his stereopticon. In October, 1888, he married Ella J., daughter of Alexander Brandon of New York. His latchstring is always on the outside of his door to his friends, who always promptly respond when invited to his regular "Saturday Evening Lantern burnings," which prove a pleasure to all participating. Motto, "As the journey through life, let us live by the way."

He is also assistant treasurer of the Seymour Manufacturing Company, and secretary of the H. A. Matthews Manufacturing Company. He married Annie Wooster, daughter of W. H. H. Wooster, who is the secretary and treasurer of the Seymour Manufacturing Company, and represents the town of Seymour in the Connecticut Constitutional Convention.

THE BENHAM BROTHERS.

Julius H. and Junius N. Benham, sons of Truman and Annie Scoville Benham, were born in Middlebury, Ct., July 8, 1817. Their parents came to what is now Seymour in 1824 and lived in the building in which is now the office of the Seymour RECORD. The boys went to the Bell School, then a two story building. Their teachers were Isaac Sperry, Aaron Pearson, and Harlow Sage. The two brothers went to Bridgeport, learned the masons trade, were for many years leading builders of the city, built four of the city churches and many other large buildings, invested well in real estate, and became wealthy. Their summer residence is in Seymour, in the house in which their sister, Mrs.

Thomas Clark Holbrook, lived from her marriage in Humphreysville, in 1825 until her death in 1885.

That those who had sacrificed so much for freedom were prompt in more peaceful times to frame aright the new government may be seen from the following resolution. adopted Oct. 8th, 1787:

"Resolved that this Town will instruct, and that it does hereby instruct its representatives in the General Assembly to use their influence to have a Convention called as speedily as possible for the purpose of taking into consideration the Constitution proposed by the Federal Convention, agreeable to the recommendation of Congress; in hopes that the business may be entered upon at an early period by the Legislature. Voted and passed unanimously."

Capt. Daniel Holbrook and Capt. John Holbrook, who were appointed the delegates to the state convention, were both from what is now Seymour.

The following were Revolutionary pensioners in 1818: Jeremiah Gillette of Great Hill, Phineas Johnson of Pinesbridge, Moses Riggs of Pinesbridge, Jesse Smith, who kept a store on West street, Benjamin Tomlinson of Great Hill, Nathaniel Holbrook of Squantuck, Truman Loveland, who lived northeast of Rimmou Pond, William Steele and Abner Tibbals of Bungay.

Pensioners in 1832: James Bassett, Abraham Bassett, Wilson Hurd, Capt. Nathaniel Johnson, Linus Lounsbury, Bradford Steele, Samuel Botsford, Abel Holbrook, Gideon Johnson, William Keeney, Nathan Mansfield.

Of those drawing pensions in 1840 as soldiers of the Revolution the following lived in this vicinity: Lieut. Bradford Steele aged 84, Capt. Nathaniel Johnson 82, William Keeney 83, Abel Holbrook 77, James Bassett 83, Wilson Hurd 77.

CHAPTER X.

FRATERNAL ORDERS.

MORNING STAR LODGE, No. 47, F. & A. M., the oldest fraternal organization in town, was instituted in Oxford Oct. 18, 1804, and under the direction of the worthy brethren named in the charter and their successors in office, the lodge prospered and steadily increased in numbers. In 1832 fifty members of Morning Star Lodge manifested their courage and their love of the Masonic order by signing the famous "Declaration" of Masonic principles and purposes, which was widely published, and helped greatly to allay the prejudice and opposition of the anti-Masonic tide then at its height.

In the forties the manufacturing industry which had made Oxford center a busy place for many years, began to wane and many of the members of the lodge removed from the place, so that in 1848 the charter was revoked by the Grand Lodge, but on the 14th of May, 1851, the charter was restored, the lodge to be removed to Seymour. For a short time the lodge met in the hall over the store at the west end of the lower bridge, but in 1853 it was removed to the hall in Davis' Block, where it remained for fiftyeight years, the hall having been especially fitted up for the use of the lodge by its owner, Isaac B. Davis, who was an enthusiastic member of the order.

On March 1, 1901, the lodge was removed to the new Masonic hall in the Yale-Beach building, which had been handsomely fitted up and furnished for the purpose. The lodge now numbers 178 and is in a flourishing condition. The Past Masters of the lodge are Abel Wheeler, Levi Candee, William Morris, David McEwen, Chauncey M. Hatch, Merritt Bradley, Samuel Wire, David M. Clark, Cyrus Humphreys, Jesse Joy, John M. Hart, Henry C. Atwood, William Hinman, Garry Riggs, Charles Ransom, George B. Glendenning, David J. McEwen, Harris B. Munson, Joseph Chipman, Stephen D. Russell, Elisha D. Foote, Israel French, Philo B. Buckingham, George W. Divine, Ashbel Storrs, Samuel P. Davis, Stephen R. Rider, Henry A. Rider, William S. Cooper, William K. Holmes, William Halligan, Frederick Harris, Frank G. Bassett, Albert E. Clark, Theodore S. Ladd, Gabriel Stewart, Harvey S. Halligan, Clifford J. Atwater, Olin L. Dibble, Abbott C. Peck, Emery E. Adams, Jay C. Holden, John Early, James Maybury, Norman W. Lounsbury, Harry C. Carpenter, Charles H. Guild.

OLIVE CHAPTER, No. 26, Order of the Eastern Star, was organized Nov. 19th, 1886, and met in Masonic hall, in Davis' Block, until 1901, when with Morning Star Lodge it removed to the new Masonic hall in the Yale-Beach building.

The chapter numbers 105 members and is in a prosperous condition. Its membership comprises several who have been elected to office in the Grand Chapter of the state, including F. G. Bassett and J. C. Holden, who have served as Grand Patron; Julia A. Thayer, Grand Warder; Iva E. Parker, Grand Marshall, and Sharon D. Beach, now Grand Patron. The resident Past Worthy Matrons and Past Worthy Patrons of Olive Chapter are: Julia A. Thayer, Allida L. Booth, Eliza L. Castle, Hattie L. Bassett, Annie E. Pickett, Julia M. Smith, Bessie A. T. Emery, Iva S. Parker, M. Elizabeth Beach, Nellie A. Buckley, Addie L. Wooster, Julia A. Mitchell, Frank G. Bassett, W. S. Cooper, J. C. Holden, James E. Buckley, Robert Healey, W. C. Sharpe, C. J. Atwater, Sharon D. Beach, John Early, C. H. Lounsbury, Henry L. Edwards.

EVENING STAR CHAPTER, No. 47, Royal Arch Masons, was instituted June 28, 1901, with the following officers: H. P., F. G. Bassett; K., T. B. Beach; S., Norman Sperry; R. A. C., A. C. Peck; P. C., H. W. Pickett; Treasurer, W. L. Ward; Secretary, Thomas Vilson; Chaplain, Rev. E. C. Tullar; M. 3d V., Miles Birkbeck; E. 2nd V., S. D. Beach; M. 1st V. J., C. Holden; Tyler, James P. ohnstone; Trustees, W. C. Sharpe, W. D. Ingersoll, F. A. Rugg.

MECHANICS LODGE, No. 73, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, was instituted May 21, 1851, with thirteen charter members, the meetings being held in a hall on the second floor of the building at the west end of the lower bridge. There the lodge met until 1857, when the hall in Davis' Block was fitted up, and was occupied until 1892, when the lodge room in the Humphreys building was leased, furnished and dedicated as Odd Fellows hall.

The lodge library was established in 1877 and has steadily increased until now it numbers about 700 volumes. The lodge has recently purchased a building and land on Main street and will build and fit up handsomely for an Odd Fellows hall and other purposes.

The good done by the lodge in caring for the sick and in benefits for the widows and the fatherless cannot be estimated. For many years it was the only order in town which made such help a prominent feature of its work. The Past Noble Grands are: Julius Bassett, Daniel J. Putnam, Martin Kelly, W. J. Merrick, John A. Hartson, Harpin Davis, W. W. White, Wm. A. Hughes, George E. Lester, Henry Bradley, John Davis, 2nd, R. W. Scott, A. G. White, David Tucker, H. T. Buckley, Charles Edwards, Wm. H. Williams, Charles P. White.

WILDEY ENCAMPMENT, No. 73, I. O. O. F., was instituted Nov. 6, 1882, and has been a popular and successful organization, numbering at present 89 members.

SYLVAN LODGE, No. 5, Degree of Rebekah, was instituted Dec. 1, 1890, the membership consisting principally of the wives, daughters, mothers and sisters of Odd Fellows, though not limited strictly to them.

The three Odd Fellow organizations, Mechanics Lodge, Wildey Encampment, and Sylvan Lodge, have a total membership of over six hundred.

HUMPHREY LODGE, No. 26, Knights of Pythias, was instituted Feb. 8, 1871. Of those who were admitted as charter members and are yet members of the lodge there remain M. R. Castle, F. H. Beecher, George Smith and W. C. Sharpe. The lodge has been a great success as a beneficial order, in caring for the sick and in aiding the bereaved families of deceased members. There are now about 125 members. A fund of about $3,000 has been accumulated. The Past Chancellors of the lodge who yet maintain their membership are Wm. H. Williams, (Past Grand Chancellor,) F. H. Beecher, Virgil H. McEwen, H. S. Chamberlin, Anthony Otto, Martin R. Castle, Thomas Thomas, W. C. Sharpe, Wm. B. Nichols, John H. Benham, Valentine Buechele, Fred C. Peck, R. H. Smith, J. F. Otto, John W. DeForest, David J. Hill, Fred O'Meara, F. B. Chamberlin, F. S. Zwick, George H. Simmonds, Thomas Chadwick, Edward E. Holbrook, John Myers, Charles Maybury, George E. O'Meara, Fred Beck, James Stevens.

EVERGREEN TEMPLE No. 10, Rathbone Sisters, auxiliary to Humphrey Lodge, and consisting of Knights of Pythias and members of their families, was instituted June 14, 1899. Its object is to promote the great principles of Purity, Love, Equality and Fidelity, to afford social entertainment, to be to sisters in trial a guide and hope, a refuge, shelter and defense.

FRIENDLY SONS OF ST. PATRICK.—This society was organized Nov. 2, 1872, in Strapp's Hall. The following persons petitioned the General Assembly of Connecticut at the May Session in 1873 for an act of incorporation: William Hayes, Dennis O'Callaghan, Matthias Bunyan, Francis McMorro, Charles McCarthy, Michael Regan, Patrick Mahoney, Daniel Mahoney, William Mahoney, Jeremiah Driscoll, John Coleman, John Bradley, Timothy O'Brien, Peter Sullivan, Edward Strapp, William Colbert. They were duly incorporated as an association known as the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick of Seymour, with such other persons as should afterward become members of said corporation. The act was approved June 25, 1873.

This association is composed of members of Irish birth and their descendants, of good moral character, admission being limited to those not less than eighteen nor over fortyfive years of age. The object of the association is to promote the principles of Unity and Charity, so that in unity the members may gain strength to bestow charity on each other. The sick are allowed five dollars benefits per week, thirteen weeks in succession, in one year, and night watchers are furnished during sickness if needed. A death benefit of fifty dollars is paid for funeral expenses. The society in the past has endeavored by its prompt and efficient solicitude to alleviate and to promote the principles of its formation, "With malice toward none, and charity to all."

AUGUSTA LODGE, No. 37, D. O. H., was instituted in January, 1892. The officers are—O. B., Kathe Yucker; N. B., Bertha Demsky; Secretary, Lizzie Kiehl; S. of F., Augusta Mengedick; treasurer, Kathe Stapf.

Mc Nerney, grand knight; Thomas Wrell, deputy grand knight; Thomas Malloy, financial secretary; William Ryan, recording secretary; William O'Donnell, treasurer; Patrick Mahoney, chan.; Rev. R. C. Gragan, chaplain. This is a benefit and insurance lodge, its purpose being to help its members in time of sickness, and to provide for their families in the event of death. The council now numbers fiftyfive members, having lost only four members from the time it was instituted until the present time.

CASTLE ROCK LODGE, No. 6, Ancient Order of United Workmen, instituted August 6, 1881. This order issues certificates to its members for $1,000 or $2,000, as they may elect, payable in case of death to the families of deceased members. The officers are M. A. Bishop, P. M. W.; Eugene B. Hull, M. W.; W. I. Warren, F.; John J. O'Donnell, O.; Gabriel Stewart, recorder; W. D. Ingersoll, financier; Charles P. White, G.; Albert A. Lockwood, J. W.; J. Henry Bishop, O. W.

CHUSE LODGE, No. 300, N. E. O. P., was instituted Nov. 27, 1897, and has a membership of 38. Its manner of organization and its purposes are the same as those of Valley Lodge.

CONCORDIA SINGING SOCIETY was organized Nov. 7, 1880, is composed of German citizens and is devoted to the culture of vocal music by continuous practice under the direction of an eminent instructor and by competitive concerts with other singing societies of the state. The officers are John Bach, president; David Hummel, vice president; Jacob Yucker, secretary; F. Hummel, F. S.; Wolfgang Schaeffer, treasurer; Fred Hageman, archivar.

COURT RIMMON ROCK, No. 41, Foresters of America, was instituted February 28, 1888. M. Mc Nerney, Chief Ranger.

GRANITE TEMPLE, No. 10, was instituted April 2, 1890. The first officers of the Temple were—W. C. Sharpe, W. C. T.; W. T. Johns, W. V. T., M. E. Williams, W. R.; T. J. Thomas, W. A. R. James Maybury, treasurer; Thomas Sharpe, W. F. R.; James Barr W. U.; D. F. Tocher, D. U.; Adam Latham, W. G.; D. Johns W. S., John C. Barton, chaplain. The other charter members were E. T. Humphreys, Charles Maybury, F. E. Houghtaling, Thomas Owens, A. C. Butler, H. H. Parsons, C. D. Houghtaling, L. E. Cooper, George O'Meara, C. D. Rosha.

The Past Worthy Templars have been A. C. Butler, Edward T. Humphrey, Harry H. Parsons, Charles Maybury, David H. Tocher, Albert H. Maybury, Clyde Dickinson, Edward S. Butler, W. C. Sharpe, (Past Grand Templar and a member of the Supreme Council,) and Oliver M. Williams, (Grand Vice Templar.) The Temple has several arranged for series of gospel temperance meetings, in the churches and the opera house, for which good speakers have been secured, and large and appreciative audiences have attended. Since the Temple was instituted 120 members have been initiated, many of whom have since left town. The present membership consists principally of young men, but includes two prominent clergymen who have joined in order to help along a meritorious cause, to assist in practical temperance work, and to uplift humanity.

LESSING LODGE, No. 5, Order of Sons of Hermann, was organized in 1886. John Stapf is the president; Fred Stephanoski, E. P.; Henry Flach, vice president; Theodore Flach, C. S.; Henry Rumetch, F. S., Jacob Yucker, treasurer; Henry Mannweiler, Theodore Koehler, Frederick Stoll, trustees; David Hummel, W. John Grele, I. G.; Frederick Ehmann, O. G.; John Bach, deputy.

NONNAWAUK TRIBE, No. 9, of the Improved Order of Red Men, was instituted May 13, 1887. The Improved Order of Red Men is a social, secret, fraternal and benevolent association. Its origin is purely American, and was originated in its present form in 1835. The order is founded upon the customs, usages, traditions and history of the aborigines of this continent, and its primary objects are to promote among men the exercise and practice of the true principles of benevolence and charity and the cultivation of friendly relations among mankind. The motto, "Freedom, Friendship and Charity," indicates clearly the objects and aims of this great brotherhood. The forms, ceremonies and lectures used in the adoption of members and in conferring the degrees are interesting and instructive. The conditions of membership are that a candidate shall be twentyone years of age, white, of good moral character and sound bodily health, a believer in a Great Spirit in whom all power exists, and shall have some reputable means of support. Nonnawauk Tribe has accumulated a large fund to be used for the relief of members in time of sickness and now has a handsome hall in Davis' Block, which has recently been fitted up at a cost of about a thousand dollars.

RAYMOND FRENCH CONCLAVE, No. 732, Order of Heptasophs, was organized Jan. 24, 1900. This is a purely fraternal assessment insurance order, and meets in Concordia hall.

ROLAND LODGE, No. 536, Order of Harugari, was instituted in October, 1886. The officers are—O. B., Fred Hummel; U. B., August Schultz; secretary, John Stapf; S. of F., August Patskowsky; treasurer, Geo. Weislogel.

SARAH LUDLOW CHAPTER, Daughters of the American Revolution, was organized May 2, 1804, with twenty charter members, lineal descendants of those Revolutionary heroes who with unflinching loyalty rendered material aid to the cause of Independence. The first officers of the society were; Regent, Mrs Elizabeth James Camp; vice regent, Mrs. Julia H. French; secretary, Miss Allida L. Booth; treasurer, Mrs. H. Maria Barber; registrar, Mrs. Louise Riggs Sperry; historians, Miss Sara Winthrop Smith and Mrs. Julia DuBois James; board of management, Mrs. Martha M. Randall, Mrs. Fannie Day and Mrs. Cornelia McEwen.

The objects of the society are "to perpetuate the memory and the spirit of the men and women who achieved American Independence, by the acquisition and protection of historical localities, and the erection of monuments, by the encouragement of historical research in relation to the Revolution and the publication of its results, by the preservation of documents and relics and of the records of individual Revolutionary soldiers and patriots, and by the promotion of celebrations of all patriotic anniversaries, to cherish, maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom, to foster true patriotism and love of country, and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty." The Chapter on Memorial Day sends a committee to decorate the graves of Revolutionary soldiers in the different cemeteries of the town.

There have been two true daughters, members of the society, Mrs. Augusta Lum of Rock House Hill, and Mrs. Sarah Candee Fairchild, whose fathers served in the War of the Revolution. These members received the gold souvenir spoon given to all real daughters by the National Society.

Considerable money has been given by the Chapter to various patriotic causes, for the preservation of the Nathan Hale school house, for the Lafayette monument in Paris, and the Washington equestrian statue presented by American women to France. A goodly sum was contributed for the Connecticut war fund during the Spanish-American War, and money was also sent to the Cuban sufferers. The Chapter has also contributed towards the purchase of historical places and Revolutionary relics and the erection of monuments.

There are at present 51 members. The meetings are held the first Wednesday afternoon in the month from October to June, when the annual meeting is held. The present officers are regent, Mrs. H. Maria Barber; vice regent, Mrs. Julia Dabois James; recording secretary, Mrs. Lulu J. Ward; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Josephine E. Guild, treasurer, Mrs. Hattie S. Bassett; registrar, Mrs. Julia H. French; historians, Mrs. Catharine C. Radford and Miss Allida L. Booth; board of management, Mrs. Anna C. Dean, Mrs. Fannie G. Day and Mrs. Elizabeth J. Comp.

SEYMOUR CAMP, No. 8,278, Modern Woodmen of America, was organized Dec. 18th, 1907, with twelve charter members. The object of the order is to furnish pecuniary benefits in case of accident or permanent disability, or death.

THE SEYMOUR BOARD OF TRADE, was organized in May 1893, with Mr. James Swan as its first president, and having on its roll of membership most of the active business men of the town, all working with one object in view, the betterment of Seymour. Since its organization much has been accomplished in promoting the growth and welfare of the town. The present officers are W. L. Ward, President; M. C. Keir, Secretary, and F. A. Rugg, Treasurer.

STAR OF RIMMON ROX CIRCLE, No. 300, Companions of of the Forest, was organized June 12, 1895, with thirty charter members. The purpose of the order is to care for the sick and in case of the death of a member to pay a funeral benefit of fifty dollars. The present number of members is about fifty.

TOWCOMB COUNCIL, No. 10, was instituted April 25, 1873. It is composed of members of the I. O. R. M. and their families and is a purely social order. Present number of members 127.

VALLEY LODGE, No. 109, New England Order of Protection, was instituted June 20, 1870. This order was first organized in Massachusetts and received its charter under the laws of that commonwealth Nov. 2, 1887. The main object of this society is the insurance of its members. Its business is carried on by its agents in the New England States, none but residents of New England being admitted to membership. The motto is for its motto, "Justice, Benevolence and Charity," and the grand lodge is organized on a social basis. Each lodge has a right to elect a widow whose aim it is to look after the sick and distressed and to insure every of the order is the assessment insurance. The highest authority lodge has shown the utility of the order, thousands of dollars having been paid to the families of deceased members. The lodge has about 170 members.

VICTORIA LODGE, No. 8, O. O. F. H. S., was instituted June 18, 1890. The officers are Mrs. Kate Kemann, president; Mrs. M. Frolich, vice president; Mrs. Kate Yucker, E. P.; Mrs. Kate Bach, S.; Mrs. Anna Koerner, T. S.; Mrs. Valentine Buchele, treasurer; Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Anna K. Hatch and Mrs. Blossner, trustees; J. Yucker, deputy; Mrs. Knolsniek, I. G.; F. Beyersdorff, O. G.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB.—The initiative step towards the formation of a Woman's Club in Seymour was taken at a meeting held in the parlors of the Congregational Church on Tuesday evening, May 6th, 1892, as the result of a call issued by Miss Sara W. Smith, and it was decided to meet at Mrs. Luther Stoddard's on the next evening for organization. At this second meeting the association was organized, to be called the "Woman's Club of Seymour," to be a member of the Congregational League of Women's Clubs. The following officers were elected: President, Miss Sara W. Smith; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. J. M. W. Fisher, Mrs. Kate Peck, Miss Mary C. Hollbrook and Mrs. Mary S. Boyce; Treasurer, Mrs. Julia DuBois James; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth James Carter; Recording Secretary, Miss Sarah Gilbert Stoddard; Auditor, Mrs. Abigail Louise Booth.

The club has since that time steadily increased in membership and interest. Its object has been threefold:—1st, to secure a more general advancement of women in all directions; 2d, to secure a more general upon women a deep sense of the duties and responsibilities arising from a wider field of influence.

The Woman's Club has accomplished much which has been for the good of the community and the members feel that the organization of the club has been a benefit not only to themselves but also to the town. It has been an inspiration to increase their knowledge and an influence for good. The work of the Woman's Club has excited their interest and led the way toward decided reforms in local government. The club meets every Monday evening of each month from October until May, the annual meeting being held in May.

The club now numbers thirtyone members. The meetings are usually held in the reading room of the public library, but occasionally the club meets at the home of a member for a social evening. The officers for the year 1901-1902 are—President, Miss Allida I. Booth; First Vice President, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Camp; Second Vice President, Mrs. Julia H. French; Secretary, Mrs. Harriette I. Kirtland; Treasurer, Miss Minnie B. Cotter.

UPSON POST, No. 40, G. A. R., was named after Lieut. Hiram

LIEUT. HIRAM UPSON.

Upson of Co. F, 7th C. V. I., who was mortally wounded at the battle of James Island, S. C., and died the next day. The charter for the Post was granted Jan. 16th, 1870. There were twentythree charter members. Ninetyfive have joined the Post since its organization, of which number twentyseven have died and thirtythree have been dropped for cause, leaving a present membership of thirtyfive. The object of the Post is to uphold the Constitution and the Flag, and assist any deserving soldier or sailor, or their families and the families of those deceased. Of the purpose first specified it has been well said—

“There is but one perfect method that a grateful people can adopt who seek to do honor to the dead; it is to reincarnate in some living organization the spirit by which the dead man worked and the faith or achievement that made him great.”

This purpose is realized in the maintenance of Upson Post, of the Grand Army of the Republic. The members of the Post since its organization have been

A REMARKABLE GROUP.

The photograph from which the above engraving was made was taken June 15, 1898, at the residence of C. E. Fairchild, on the occasion of the 91st birthday anniversary of Mrs. Sarah C. Fairchild, widow of Ebenezer Fairchild, and daughter of Job Candee a soldier of the Revolution. Eight other elderly ladies were invited, the average age of the nine being 85 years, and all, with the hostess, Mrs. C. E. Fairchild, were photographed as above. Nearly all the ladies were representatives of families which for more than two centuries and a half had been landed proprietors in this immediate vicinity, families which had shared in the perils and privations of the War of the Revolution, and had borne well their part in shaping the destinies of the Republic.

PART III.
GENEALOGY.

BY FRANK G. BASSETT.

PREFACE.

In writing the genealogies of the families who live or have lived within the limits of the town of Seymour, it has been the intent and purpose of the writer to rescue from utter decay the names of those men and women who located in this beautiful valley and from whom many of us have descended.

I trust the public will appreciate my labors, for it has been the purpose of the writer to have this part of the work as nearly complete as possible; but for the want of time and space he has been obliged to omit many dates for some future writer to find and add. One object sought in writing the genealogy of the families of this town was to place the names of those early settlers on record, that they may be known to future generations, as the old records which have been handed down to us are fast decaying and soon will be lost; the names of those, from whom we descend, and in whom we should be interested.

The Rev. Samuel Orentt, the historian, speaks of those who have no interest in their ancestors, or the past, as follows: "The person who is indifferent to the past is too selfish to be of much benefit to the world in the present and too heedless of wisdom to accomplish much for human good in the future."

I would be very remiss in my duty if I did not at this time acknowledge the assistance rendered in this work by many of the citizens of the town, as well as those who have removed from here to other towns, and especially do I extend my thanks to Mrs. N. G. Pond, of Milford, and Miss Katherine A. Prichard and Emma S. Tomlinson, of Waterbury, for the very valuable information which they have given, and which has very much aided me in my work.

Very respectfully,

FRANK G. BASSETT,

Author of the Genealogical History of Seymour.

He removed from Cambridge, Mass., to Milford, Conn., where he was admitted a member of the first Parish church, Sept. 18, 1685, and was given a call as its pastor Oct. 25, 1685, and ordained Nov. 10, 1685. He united with Revs. Pierpoint and others in formulating a plan for the founding of Yale college and was a member of the first board of trustees, 1700, and served in that capacity during his life. After the death of Abraham Pierson, the first president, he was elected or appointed rector pro tempore, and was treated as standing rector. He filled the office as president from 1707 to 1719, moderated at commencement, instructed the senior class for several years. He continued to be a member of the corporation until his death.

In a discourse preached in Milford, Ct., on Thanksgiving day, Nov. 25, 1852, by the Rev. Jonathan Brace, the pastor of the First Congregational church, he used the following language, viz: "There is no doubt but that we are much indebted to the Rev. Samuel, the third pastor of this church, for the establishment of Yale college, which has been such a rich source of blessing to the church and the commonwealth."

He was fifty-two years in the pastoral office. He married Abigail, dau. of Governor Robert and Jane (Tapp) Treat, of Milford, Conn. Rev. Samuel died Jan. 24, 1738.

He came to Chusettown and built a grain mill on Little river, near where the H. A. Matthews factory now stands. The farm which Mrs. Martha G. Divine now owns was the property of Mr. Baldwin. He was a man devoted to the Christian religion and kept the Holy Bible constantly by his side that he might employ his leisure moments in reading its sacred pages. Mr. Baldwin was killed at his mill by the unexpected starting of the water wheel. The wheel had frozen during the night and, in order to start it, it was necessary to cut away the ice, which Mr. Baldwin was doing when the wheel started and killed him. It happened Jan. 4, 1799. Philine, his wife, died July, 1826.

It was at Mr. Baldwin's house that the first Methodist meeting was held within the limits of what is now the town of Seymour, and while these meetings were being held the boys would climb to the top of the house and place boards over the top of the chimney and smoke the occupants of the house out. And there is no record to show that the boys were ever punished for their conduct.

DAY FAMILY.

1. Robert Day came from England to New England in the bark Elizabeth. He came from Ipswich, in England, and landed in Boston, 1634. He was born, 1604; was, therefore, thirty years of age. He was accompanied by his wife Mary, who was twenty-eight years of age. He first located in Newton (now Cambridge.) His wife Mary probably died soon after their arrival. He was made a freeman May 6, 1635, which is an indication that he was a member of the established church of the colony. He was a resident of Hartford in 1639, and undoubtedly was one of the company who accompanied the Rev. Mr. Hooker, who walked from Cambridge to Hartford in 1636. His name is found upon the monument erected to their memory in that city. He married for his second wife Editha, sister of Edward Stebbins (or Stebbing,) of Hartford, and had four children, as follows:

41. John Hancock, son of Benjamin and Mehitable (Curtiss) DeForest, was a man of great energy and business ability. He was first employed in a shipping house in New Haven, Conn., in the early part of his life, where in six years he had accumulated twenty-seven hundred dollars. In 1803 he formed a partnership with his brother Benjamin and engaged in mercantile business in Watertown, Conn. In 1818, by advice of his brother David, he settled in New York city, and engaged in the brokerage and commission business, which was very successful. In 1821 he associated himself with a Philadelphia company of gentlemen and bought the water privilege and woolen mill at Humphreysville, Conn., which had been left unoccupied for three years through the death of Gen. David Humphreys. They at once set the paper mill, grist mill and saw mill at work. They then commenced the alteration of the woolen into a cotton mill, for the purpose of manufacturing cotton sheetings. Mr. John H. DeForest was the business head of the above company, and while he was at Humphreysville he was several times elected to represent the town in the legislature. He also held the office of justice of the peace. John H. married Dotha Woodward, of Waterbury, Ct., Dec. 5, 1811. She was a daughter of Elijah Woodward. HURLBURT FAMILY.

While none of the heads of the several families of this name were born in Seymour, they are all more or less identified with its interests, having located here in 1851, about the time the town was set apart from Derby. The following is compiled from the "Hurlburt Genealogy" and "History of Cornwall, Conn." The emigrant ancestor, Thomas Hurlburt, is supposed to have come across the Atlantic in 1635, for he was a soldier under Lion Gardiner, who built and had command of the fort at Saybrook, Conn. Mr. Hurlburt, while at Saybrook, in an encounter with the Pequot Indians, in 1637, was wounded by an arrow, as described by Capt. Gardiner in a letter written by him many years later, and stating that a certain written document was a great help to his memory. This document laid in manuscript until 1833 (173 years,) when it was printed in Vol. 3, 3rd series of Mass. Historical Society Collection. Mr. Hurlburt was a blacksmith by trade, and after the war with the Pequots located and established himself in business in Wethersfield, Conn. A single extract from the Colonial records would seem to indicate that he was a good workman and charged a good price for his wares. "March 2nd, 1642, Thomas Hurlburt (spelled Hallibut) was fined forty shillings for encouraging others in taking excessive rates for work and wares." He seems to have been a man in good standing in the place. He was clerk of the "Train Band" in 1640, deputy to the General court, grand juror, and also constable in 1644. For his services in the Indian wars the assembly voted him a grant of 120 acres of land, Oct. 12, 1671. It is supposed that he died soon after, and it was not until 1694 that it was set off on petition of John Hurlburt, Jr., of Middletown, a grandson of the settler and soldier.

2. Samuel Hurlburt born in Wethersfield, about 1644.

3. Jonathan Hurlburt, born in Wethersfield, March 2nd, 1677. The following is taken from the Records: "6 Dec., 1716, the Great Swamps (Kensington Society) voted to Jonathan Hurlburt 10 shillings for a journey to New Haven to "Court" and to Hartford and other expenses." "Dec. 4th, 1721, Jonathan Hurlburt was released with all his taxable estate from paying parish charges.

4. Jonathan Hurlburt, Jr., born in Kensington Society (Farmington), April 4th, 1702; married and emigrated to Cornwall Hollow, Conn., in 1748. He practiced medicine, and entries were made by him in an old account book in possession of one of his descendants, describing the constituents of several kinds of medicine, which indicate considerable knowledge of chemistry for those times.

5. Joab Hurlburt, born Jan. 6th, 1755, in Cornwall Hollow, Conn.; married Submit Goodwin, who bore him 13 children. He was a shop joiner by trade and reputed to be a finished workman. He died in Cornwall Hollow, March 23rd, 1839.

6. Alfred Hurlburt, born in Cornwall Hollow, May 23rd, 1777; married Betsey Merrill, and resided in South Canaan, Conn. He was a carpenter by trade and was killed by falling from a building in 1820.

7. Charles R. Hurlburt was born March 12th, 1810; married Mary Ann Day, of Saultsbury, Conn., July 4th, 1837. He was by trade a worker in iron and was employed many years in iron works at Salisbury and Falls Village, Conn. Mr. Hurlburt came to Seymour in 1851 and was engaged some years in the manufacture of car axles in a forge located near the Falls, the site of which is now owned and covered by a portion of the plant of the Tingué Mfg. Co. Mr. Hurlburt will be remembered by the older portion of the community as eccentric in many respects, but he always stood firmly for what he believed to be just and right. He was conspicuous for his loyalty during the War of the Rebellion. Disability prevented service in the army, but by word and deed he did all in his power to uphold the cause, and to the day of his death would not vote for any man for office whom he believed to have been in any sense disloyal to his country. He died very suddenly Dec. 26th, 1878. Mr. Hurlburt had five children: Marcus A., Thomas E., Orrilla E., Jane E., George, all of whom, except Marcus A. are residents of this town.

WILLIAM MERRICK, OF EASTHAM.

1. William Merrick, the oldest of the four brothers who reached Charlestown in the good ship "James," in the spring of 1630, was born in Wales, in 1603. Of his early life nothing is known. He was a farmer by occupation after reaching the colony, but what trade or vocation he followed in Wales is not known. That his instincts and tastes inclined him toward a military life appear in the fact that he served for six years after his arrival in the colony, in the colonial militia under Captain Myles Standish. He was spoken of first as ensign, and later as a lieutenant. That he gave all his time and attention to his military duties seems to be indicated by the fact that he was not married until 1642, which was at the end of his six years' term of service. He appears to have had property both at Eastham and Duxbury. He was probably married at Eastham, but the destruction of a part of the first book of records of that town render it impossible to determine this fact definitely. He certainly lived in both Eastham and Duxbury within the decade from 1637 to 1647, as some of his children were born at Eastham during that time, and at the same time he is reported as having been a citizen of Duxbury. The records relate that he was a citizen at Duxbury in 1636. He was allotted five acres of land "next the Glade at Powder Point;" in 1637 he was allotted another twenty acres at Great Head; he was one of the original proprietors of Bridgewater. He was surveyor of highways in 1640, and constable in 1647. He married in Eastham in 1642, according to tradition, Rebecca, whose surname is not known. He became a legal voter in Eastham May 22, 1655, which is the date of his taking up his permanent residence in that town, his other visits having been, probably, with his wife's family. He had ten children born to him by Rebecca, who died in 1668, in Eastham.

Paige, in his history of Harwich, dwells upon the fact that William was so old as to seem rather the grandfather than the father of his own family. He says: "William Merrick, the father, was a lieutenant residing in Eastham. In his will, dated December 3, 1686, and proved March 6, 1688-9, he is described as about 80 years of age, by which it would seem that he was about 43 years old when the first of his ten children was born, and he might seem to be the grandfather of this family rather than the father, were it not that he names his wife, Rebecca, and his children, Stephen and William, in his will." The children of William and Rebecca Merrick were:

2. William, born Sept. 15, 1643.
3. Stephen, born May 12, 1646.
4. Rebecca, born July 28, 1648.
5. Mary, born Nov. 4, 1650; m. Stephen Hopkins, son of Stephen Hopkins, of the "Mayflower."
6. Ruth, born May 15, 1652; m. Jan., 1677, Edmund Freeman, son of Major John and Mercy (Prence) Freeman.
7. Sarah, born Aug. 1, 1654; m. Dec. 18, 1672, John Freeman, son of Major John and Mercy (Prence) Freeman.
8. John, born Jan. 15, 1656-7.
9. Isaac, born Jan. 6, 1660-1.
10. Joseph, born June 1, 1662.
11. Benjamin, born Feb. 1, 1664-5.

2. Ensign William 2, son of (William 1) and Rebecca Merrick, born Sept. 15, 1643, at Eastham, Mass. Married, first, May 23, 1667, Abigail, dau. of Giles and Catherine (Wheldon) Hopkins; born Oct., 1644, died, ————. Her father, Giles Hopkins, was son of Stephen who came in the "Mayflower." William married, second, Elizabeth ————. He was admitted a legal voter of Eastham, 1675. About the end of the century he moved to Harwich, where he became a prominent citizen. The records of Harwich carry the name as "Myrick." On October 16, 1700, a church was gathered at Harwich, consisting of eight male members, of whom William Merrick was one. On Feb. 9, 1704, the wife of Ensign William Merrick was also admitted to the church. At a town meeting assembled March 20, 1701, Ensign William Merrick was elected to represent the town as agent, as occasion might require.

"that our town's bounds may be fully known." He represented the town in General Assembly in 1719. In 1722 he was surveyor of highways for the town. In 1725 he is reported as one having children of school age. He died October 30, 1732. His will was dated May 5, 1723, and was proved Nov. 9, 1732. His children, all by his first wife, Abigail Hopkins, were:

12. Rebecca, born Nov. 28, 1668; m. ——— Sparrow; died before 1723, according to her father's will.
13. William, born Aug. 1, 1670; died March 20, 1670-71.

MEWEN FAMILY.

Robert McEwen, the first in Stratford, was born in Dundee, Scotland, 1612. He was compelled to leave Scotland for refusing to acknowledge the king's supremacy in matters of religion, for which refusal he was prosecuted, fined, imprisoned, and his property confiscated. He, with about one hundred others, was banished from the country and sent to Virginia. They sailed from Perth, Scotland, Sept., 1685. After being at sea some days, they were overtaken by a heavy eastern gale which lasted fourteen days. When the gale had abated they found themselves near the New York harbor. The ship was then in a sinking condition, and in order to save their lives they ran the ship ashore at a place called Amboy, New Jersey, Dec. 18, 1685. There they formed a settlement which they called Perth, after the place from which they sailed. Mr. McEwen was a tailor by trade. In Feb., 1686, he removed to Stratford, Conn. Robert McEwen married Sarah, the dau. of Timothy and Joannah (Birdsey) Wilcoxson, of Stratford, June 20, 1695. Robert died Feb. 24, 1739-40.

17. Lieut. Jabez, son of James and Abigail (Hickox) Prichard, married Eunice, dau. of Samuel and Hannah (Prindle) Botsford, Oct. 31, 1764. Jabez enlisted in Captain Carris' Co., July, 1777, and Col. Enos' regiment, who was in command of the guards at Horseneck, who were afterwards transferred to Major Humphrey's command, near Fort Independence. In the conflict at the fort he was with others taken prisoner. They were first confined at King's Bridge, New York, and afterwards they were confined in a prison ship on the North river. His captors took from him his commission and treated him with such brutal and inhuman treatment that he lived but a short time after his capture. It is evident that he was a man with a very generous and honorable character, from the fact that he might have escaped being taken prisoner, had he deserted a poor wounded comrade; but this he would not do and when he saw his comrades dying about him for want of food, he divided with them the money he possessed, which Capt. Bradford Steele says was the means that saved his life. Lieut. Jabez died on prison ship, 1777. Eunice, his widow, married Elisha Steele.

PULFORD FAMILY.

Charles H. Pulford, M. D., so widely and favorably known in the town of Seymour, is a man of sterling quality and broad, sound education, which he has manifested most liberally in his life and work. He was born in Stafford Springs, Ct., Dec. 18, 1850. He spent his early life under the guidance of his father, obtaining his primary education in the public schools of Connecticut; later taking the Collegiate Institute course at Hackettstown, N. J. Then he went to New York city to enter the college at the corner of 23rd street and Third avenue, and in 1888 he graduated from the Hannemann Medical college, of Chicago. He practiced with his father until the latter's death, after which he continued in general practice by himself in his late father's office. Dr. Pulford is the oldest practitioner in the town, and has a large clientele both in this and surrounding towns.

A glance into the ancestral life and history of our subject may here be of interest. His grandfather was William C. Pulford, born in Leeds, England, he spent his life there. He had married a Miss Bannister, who was also of English birth and lived to the age of sixty years. Six children were born to them; one resides in Delaware, Ohio; one in Bradford, England;

Elizabeth and Charlotte, both married, reside in Worcester, Mass., and two are dead.

The father of our subject is Frederick W. Pulford, the oldest son, also born in Leeds, England, where he lived until twelve years of age, when he sailed for this country, taking up his abode in Ohio. His early education was that afforded by the public schools. He was engaged in the woolen business until 1865. In that year he began the study of medicine. He commenced practicing in Royalston, Mass., continuing there until 1876, when he removed to Seymour, where he resided until his demise in June, 1893, at the age of sixty-six years. He was the oldest practitioner in the town and had a larger practice than any other physician there.

In politics he sided with the Republican party. He was a member of Morning Star Lodge, F. & A. M., of Seymour, and a member of the State Medical society. He married Sarah A., dau. of Chester Leonard, a lumber dealer of Dunkirk, who lost his life on Lake Erie. Two daughters and seven sons were born to them, of whom the following are now living: (1) Rufus A., residing in Waterbury, superintendent of one department of the Scoville Mfg. Co.; (2) Charles H., our subject; (3) William E., residing in Prospect, Ct.; (4) Arabella E., who married Andrew J. Miles, of the firm of Baldwin & Miles, meat dealers. Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Pulford were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. They each possessed considerable musical talent and ability and were active in all local musical entertainments. In addition to his vocal accomplishments, Dr. Pulford was a violinist and cornetist and played in a band and orchestra at one time. Mrs. Pulford died in 1892, aged sixty-three years.

Born and reared in an environment of culture and refinement, the early inclinations of our subject received that recognition and training which developed the ability displayed in his daily life. Dr. Pulford has lived very largely among the people, and is deservedly popular. He is active in all musical entertainments as a vocalist and also plays the piano. His religious views are liberal. He is a member of Morning Star Lodge, No. 47, F. & A. M., and is the musical director. He is also a member of Evening Star Chapter, R. A. M., and of the State Medical society. In politics he is a Republican. His office and residence is at 26 Maple street.

 6. Sally, born, 1804; m. Gurdon Rogers.
 7. Sylvester, born Dec. 8, 1808.

7. Rev. Sylvester left home to care for himself when only ten years of age. He commenced the battle with the world and his first position was with the widow Chapin, on Chicopee street, Springfield, where he remained until he was fourteen years old. He then secured a position with Mr. Henry Chapin, Mr. Chapin giving him his board, clothes and winter's schooling for his labor. In the spring of 1823 he left Mr. Chapin and went to learn the trade of paper making at Goodman's Mills, in East Hartford, Ct., where he remained for two years. In 1825 he went to Hotchkissville (now Westville), where he worked most of the time until 1832, when he located in Humphreysville (now Seymour), and went to work for Mr. Daniel White, who was conducting the manufacturing of paper in a mill at the Falls. In the spring of 1833 he associated himself with Mr. John C. Wheeler and commenced the manufacture of paper in the mill at the corner of North Main and Day streets. In 1837 the firm of Wheeler & Smith was dissolved. He then associated himself in business with Mr. Samuel Bassett, which partnership continued for nineteen years. In 1856 he bought Mr. Bassett's interest in the business and continued the manufacture of paper until the mill was burned, in 1869. He then gave the remainder of his life to the ministry. Rev. Sylvester, in early life, attended the Congregational church. On the evening of Dec. 2, 1827, he attended a Methodist meeting and was converted to Methodism. In 1828 he commenced to hold meetings, exhorting and preaching, working days and holding meetings at night, walking many times several miles to hold meetings in Hamden, Bethany and Woodbridge, and after he removed to Humphreysville, he would drive to Middlebury, Southbury and Oxford to preach. He was ordained a deacon in 1831, and elder May 19, 1839. Rev. Sylvester represented the town in the legislature and was a member of the State Senate. He was made a freeman in 1834. Rev. Sylvester married Henrietta, dau. of Thomas H. Cadwell, at Hotchkissville, June 21, 1827. She was born Jan. 31, 1806. Rev. Sylvester died March 3, 1893. Henrietta died June 20, 1880.
